VOL. XXXIII. ST. JOE DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, JANUARY 2 1919 NO. 1

FROM The BOYS in SERVICE

Headquarters 3rd. F. A.
A. P. O. No. 758,
American E. F., France
Via New York.
November 22, 1918.

Dearest Folks,

Here goes! Just read this evenings paper in which we were informed that the rigid censor laws were cut down excessively and that now we could tell many things. I suppose you know many events that I've not told you, but will repeat them any how.

We left Camp Mills, Long Island N. Y at day break on the morning of the 13th. of July 1918. We went by train to the ferry and then travelled down the Hudson by the Brooklyn bridge and the statue of Liberty, and at last got off the ferry boat at the dock where an hour later we embarked on H. M. T. "Caronia." That means "His Majestie's Transport "Caronia" it being a large English ship that carried us across the ocean, manned by English officers and servants. All day Saturday, the 13th. we lay at the pier while the ship was loaded. All on board consisted of about 5,000 souls, including 200 of the crew. I rode 2nd class, having a room with nice white bunks in it in conjunction with Sgt. Major Pegler. At about 7 A. M. Sunday morning on the 14th. day of July we weighed anchor, and assisted by two sturdy little tugs, pulled out from our pier, proceeded down the harbor, out past the large submarine net at the mouth of the Harbor, and finally joined the rest of our convoy. In all there were 13 ships crossed the Atlantic at this time in our bunch, of which two were merchantmen, one a battleship, one a collier, and one a light cruiser, the rest being transports. Approximately 40,000 soldiers came across with us.

Airships and balloons flew over our heads and an hydroplane escorted us part way. Eight submarine chasers and destroyers accompanied us the first eighteen hours out from the American coast, and they left us. We were now going under the protection of the big battle ship and the light cruiser, with the additional knowledge that our own vessel carried a 75M M gun aft. We were thirteen days enroute, with nothing out of the ordinary to break the monotony of the life. The eleventh day out the battle ship early in the morning caught sight of a trail of smoke over the horizon, and failing to get any reply to his signal, he put on full steam and scouted out to see who it was, but being unable to catch up, soon returned to us. That night however he left us and until late the following afternoon we had no protection save that offered by our own vessels. However late in the P. M. small destroyers began to approach and by the next morning twelve in all were escorting us, dodging hither and yon. As we were then in the most dangerous spot of the whole trip, at one time we were within 300 miles of the coast of Iceland. We were scheduled to enter the Irish sea from the north but received warning of the presence of submarines there and so came clear down the western coast of Ireland and entered from the southern end, seeing a line of the Irish coast early on the morning of the 25th. of July. At 9 A M. on the 26th we passed the headlands jutting out into the sea, and passed into the Mercy river. At just about noon, we came in sight of the entrance to the harbor, and in the course of an hour, after being escorted through intricate passages of mine laid areas, we came to anchor in the harbor at Liverpool.

It surely was a delight to set foot on ground once more. We were hurried off the boat, marched to a military train and loaded into it. We proceeded by way Liverpool, Pemberton, Warrington, Crewe, Birmingham, Manchester and Winchester, the latter place being reached by us at 1 o'clock in the morning. Here we left the train, and marched four miles to the American Rest Camp of Wendall Downs, where we slept until 10 o'clock A. M. and then worked until 7 P. M. Some rest, not, I'll say. Left this place the following morning Sunday 28th. July, and entrained, going some twelve miles to South Hampton, where we embarked in the "Nantucket" [illegible] across the channel. We pulled out of the Harbor at 5 P. M Sunday and joined a large convoy, escorted by many destroyers. I simply can't describe all we saw going down this harbor, but fortifications etc, were in evidence every where. Just as it was getting dusk we passed by the "Isle of Wight." At daybreak Monday morning, we entered the harbor at La Havre, France, disembarked and marched three miles thru the city to an American camp on its outskirts. In the course of this march, we passed by the Mansion occupied at the time by the government of the Belgians, and our Colonel was presented with a magnificent bouquet of flowers and made the recipient of a nice, short speech in the name of the King of Belgium. Only stayed at their camp one night and one day and on the afternoon of the 30th. of July we again entrained.

This time our trip took us thru Mottesville, Rouen, the outskirts of Paris, (being within 8 miles of Paris itself, but not seeing it) Melun, Montereau, Joigny, Laroche, DiJon, Doles, Besancon and finally landed in our new home at Flangebonche, France some eighteen miles from the border of Switzerland, in the Department of Donbs, and in the foothills of the Alps.

Here we were billeted until the 27th. of August. It was at this place we lived in the Priest's house. From there we moved twelve miles into stone barracks in the American Camp at Valdahon. Here we received the final practice in firing and maneuvering that was to fit us for the front. But a disaster befell our regiment. We were attacked with the epidemic of the Spanish Influenza and 29 men died out of the regiment. Over 425 were in the hospital out of our 1500, at one time, but it never fazed me at all.

We left this camp the 13th. day of October and proceeded by way of Chaumont to our present station Liffol C Grand, where we have been billeted since the 14th. of October. We have never seen the front. I will explain all this in my subsequent letters, as I am just about tired out, having written this letter in a little less than an hour, so anxious was I to tell you what I could. We know not how long we will be here, but are subject to orders to move at any time. I was very glad to receive three letters from you today, grandma I am so happy to know that you are all in such good health. Everybody is feeling fine here except for a general depression because of the fact that we missed active service at the front by only three days. I must close for this time. Give my love to all. Write very soon, all of you.

Yours lovingly,
Willie Gray Woodcox.

Verdun, France.
November 24, 1918.

Dear Dad:—

This is Fathers Day over here and I will take this opportunity to write you another letter. Most all the boys are writing to their Dads today. We are permitted today for the first to write as we please concerning where we are and what we are doing but that does not help lot. Of course you will be able to know on the map where I am but I may not be here when you get this letter, for we have been moving around quite a bit since we left camp at Gievres. We have been building bridges, and roads and following up the drive on the Argonne sector since the 25th of September. We have had some great experiences up here too, believe me. Of course we have had no experience of going "over the top" like the Dough Boys, or hand to hand fighting with the Boche but we have had to work roads times under shell-fire and machine-gun fire a couple of times from aeroplanes. But that was a big plenty of that kind of experience for me for a good long time. We lost some men and had several wounded and sent to the hospital. They are all getting along O. K. and some of them are coming back to the company again, and we are sure glad to get them back with us.

Heard from Clark and he is getting along fine. But that is all over with now and the next question is when are we going to get home. That is quite a gamble here now and a very much discussed question all over France and I suppose I discuss it about as much as any of them. Well, I am ready to go any time, but I will not consider that we are doing so badly if we get home by the middle of March.

This town of Verdun is quite an historic place at least in this war,

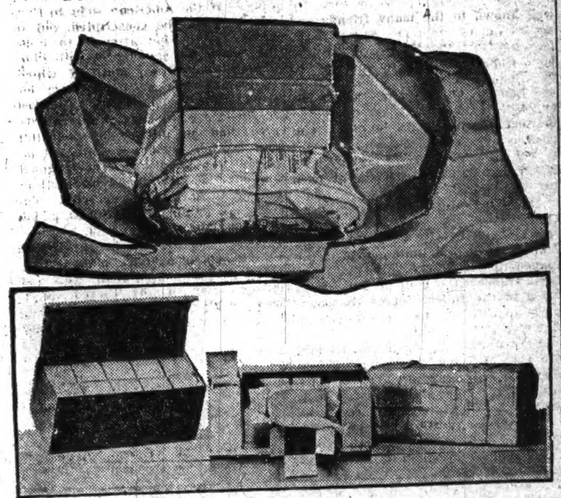
BUTTER MAY BE MARKETED BY PARCEL POST



Above, Actual Parcel-Post Shipment of Three Pounds of Butter Wrapped in Parchment Paper, Several Thicknesses of Newspaper, Corrugated Paper-Board Carton and Heavy Wrapping Paper. Below, Three Stages of a Parcel-Post Package of Butter.

PREPARE BUTTER BEFORE PACKING

Experimental Shipments Made of Dairy Products by Use of Parcel Post.

PRE-COOLING IS ESSENTIAL

May Be Marketed Satisfactorily When Extreme High Temperatures Are Not Encountered—How to Pack for Safe Carriage.

Experimental shipments by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, indicate that well-made butter, thoroughly chilled before shipping and packed in suitable containers, may be marketed satisfactorily by parcel post when extreme high temperatures are not encountered.

Although many of the experimental shipments were made during the heat of summer, only 14 of the 454 shipments, or 3.1 per cent, were received in an unsatisfactory condition. These results are attributed to care in properly packing the butter in suitable shipping containers, and to the pre-cooling or thorough hardening of butter at the creameries before shipment. The distances traveled by the butter ranged from 187 to 536 miles and the hours in transit from 18 to 60. Shipments were made in all months of the year.

Condition of Butter Important.

As parcel post shipments of butter are likely especially during the summer to be subjected to conditions which may cause deterioration and injure the quality of the butter, it is highly desirable that every possible precaution be taken before shipment. Particularly is this true of farm-made butter, because conditions effecting its quality and condition usually cannot be controlled as easily on farms as in creameries. However, farm-made butter should be marketed just as satisfactorily as creamery-made butter when it is properly made and properly prepared for shipment.

It is necessary to maintain proper conditions in the care of the milk and cream and the making of butter if a marketable product is to be produced. Too much importance cannot be given to the maintaining of clean conditions in the stable and in other places where the milk, cream, or butter are produced or kept, for they absorb odors and spoil very quickly. It is important, too, that these products be kept in a cool place. High temperatures should always be avoided, as heated cream or butter produces a soft, oily condition in the finished product which is undesirable. In manufacturing butter on the farm or in a factory the buttermilk must be removed and washed out, and the proper amount of salt must be incorporated evenly. For the satisfaction of customers it is important that a good and uniform quality of butter be produced.

Preparation for Parcel Post.

The methods used in preparing butter for parcel post shipping depend largely upon the local conditions and the style of package used. To insure delivery in the best possible condition, butter, after being packed or printed and placed in cartons, should be chilled or hardened thoroughly before it is shipped.

One of the most satisfactory ways of preparing butter for shipment is in the form of regular one-pound prints. The standard print measures 2¼x2¾x4⅝ inches. A hand butter printer or mold should be used in forming the prints.

Each pound print should be neatly wrapped in regular butter parchment or paper. A second thickness of such paper has been found to add materially to the carrying possibility of the butter. Waxed paper may be used for the second wrapping. As a further protection to the print, it should be placed in heavy manila paraffined cartons, which may be obtained from folding paper box companies for about one-half cent each when unprinted or at a slightly additional cost when printed as a stock carton or with a special private brand.

Shipping Containers for Butter.

Corrugated fiber board shipping containers of various sizes may be obtained for shipping butter.

These boxes or containers practically insulate the butter and furnish much protection against heat. Further protection may be obtained by wrapping the container in stout wrapping paper. The whole should be tied securely with a strong cord.

Some persons ship butter by parcel post in improvised or "home-made" containers. Clean, discarded, corrugated paper-board cartons are obtained from the grocer or other merchant at small cost or frequently without cost. It is possible to cut a piece of paper board in such shape and size that when it is folded it will form a satisfactory carton.

The subject is discussed in detail in Farmers' Bulletin 930, "Marketing Butter and Cheese by Parcel Post," available for free distribution by the United States department of agriculture, and suggestions regarding parcel post business methods are contained in the department's free bulletin No. 922, "Parcel Post Business Methods."

ESSENTIALS FOR SUCCESS

Successful parcel post marketing of butter requires that extreme care be taken to insure the delivery of a satisfactory product to the customers. The following are a few of the important considerations in marketing butter successfully by parcel post:

1. A uniformly high-quality product should be produced.
2. It should be properly packed in neat and attractive packages.
3. The shipping container used should amply protect the butter from deterioration and damage.
4. The packages should bear the address of the sender and be properly addressed to the customer.
5. The most expeditious mail service from the mailing office should be used to insure the delivery of the butter in the best condition.

Keeping Milk Cool.

In parts of the country where natural ice is plentiful, the dairy farmer should:

1. See that his icehouse is properly constructed to hold all the ice needed, as well as to save the greatest percentage of that stored.
2. Build cooling tanks, properly situated, insulated and covered so that loss by radiation is reduced, and large enough to hold the full milk cans but not so large as to give too great a volume of water to cool.
3. Use cool, running water in order to save ice by reducing the temperature of the milk to approximately that of the running water before adding the ice.

In an educational milk campaign, carried on in the New England states during the summer of 1916, the dairy division of the United States department of agriculture found more than 100 dairies where, by a little more attention to details with equipment already possessed, the average dairyman could deliver milk to the railroad station at an average temperature of 54 degrees F., a reduction from 63 degrees F., and with an enormous decrease in bacteria.

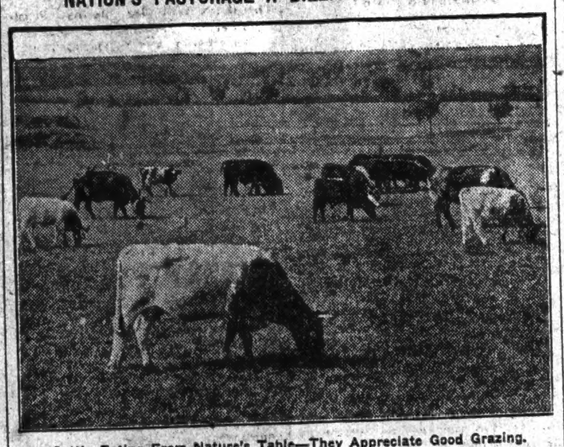
NATION'S PASTURAGE A BILLION-DOLLAR CROP



Cattle Eating From Nature's Table—They Appreciate Good Grazing.

PASTURAGE IS A VALUABLE ASSET

This Fact Is Indicated by Recent Investigation by Bureau of Crop Estimates.

SIZE OF HAY CROP SURPRISE

One Hundred Acres Carry an Average of 29 Cattle, Ranging From 52 in Indiana to 8 in Arizona—Iowa Is Second.

Public surprise is often manifested at the size and value of the hay crop, and now it probably is the turn of the farmer himself to be surprised at the information that the annual value of the pasturage of this country is over $1,000,000,000. At any rate, this is indicated by a recent investigation of the bureau of crop estimates of the United States department of agriculture. The farmer himself did not enter into the 1916.

Pasturage value has never been ascertained by the census and never included in totals of farm-produced wealth, but pasture area was reported on the agriculture schedule of the census of 1910, and was tabulated by the office of farm management of the department of agriculture in 1918. To this information has recently been added an estimate of the cattle-carrying capacity of this area made by the bureau of crop estimates.

Per 100 acres of all kinds of pastures, the carrying capacity is 29.4 cattle in the average for the United States. The leading state is Indiana with 52 cattle, the second is Iowa with 51 cattle, Tennessee is third with 50 cattle, Illinois fourth with 48 cattle, Wisconsin fifth with 47 cattle, Louisiana sixth with 45 cattle, and then follow four states in each of which 100 acres of all kinds of pastures, on the average, can carry 40 cattle—Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska and Idaho.

At the other extreme, only 8 cattle can be carried on the average 100 acres of pastures in Arizona, 9 cattle in Nevada, 10 cattle in New Mexico, 11 cattle in Wyoming, 12 cattle in New Hampshire, 13 cattle in Montana and Colorado and 14 cattle in Oregon.

Improved Pasture Best Kind.

In the United States improved pasture can carry about twice as many cattle as woodland and other pastures, the average for the improved being 45.6 cattle, for woodland pasture 25.4 cattle, and for other pasture 23.1 cattle. The highest figure for improved pasture in any state is 70 cattle per 100 acres in New Mexico, after which follow Indiana with 65 cattle, Tennessee with 62 cattle, and Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Louisiana and Idaho, each with 60 cattle.

The wild pasture of Arizona can carry but 6 cattle per 100 acres, or 1 animal to 17 acres, and that of Wyoming, Nevada, Montana, New Mexico, Colorado and Oregon can carry but 7 to 10 cattle on 100 acres.

That the aggregate yearly value of the pasturage of the United States should be $1,000,000,000 and more need not be entirely unexpected when it is known that it is utilized for more than half a year. Improved pasture has an average of 6.9 months, woodland pasture 7.7 months, other pasture 7.7 months, and the average of all kinds is 7.4 months.

Periods When Pastures Are Utilized.

For nearly a whole year, or 11.5 months, the wild lands of Montana are pastured, and this is not equaled even by Florida, Louisiana, Texas, New Mexico and Arizona for any kind of pasture. Florida's period for woodland is 10.8 months, and New Mexico's period for improved pasture is the same. The period for woodland pasture in Texas and for improved pasture in [illegible] is 9.8 months; for improved pasture in Texas, 9.6 months; for improved pasture in Louisiana and for wild pasture in Louisiana, 9.1 months; and for all kinds of pasture in Rhode Island and wild pasture in Arizona, 9 months. On the other hand, even in northern New England states and in New York, the mountains of Pennsylvania, in Minnesota and North Dakota, and for woodland pasture in Wyoming and Utah the pasturing season lasts hardly less than six months.

COMMUNITY BREEDING

Ten years ago a farmer in northern Wisconsin began to breed Guernseys in a Holstein district. He now has a fine herd and wonders why buyers never come his way. The reason is that when buyers want Guernseys they naturally go to a Guernsey district. As a rule the breeders of [illegible]bred cattle al[illegible] the lesson. [illegible]ue of grades [illegible]k, but many [illegible]e seem to [illegible]erative [illegible] the establis[illegible] which al[illegible] is rarely [illegible] work individually in marketing their stock.

Sewage Disposal.

Most of the diseases which may be carried by milk are due to contamination of that product by human agency. Typhoid, dysentery, scarlet fever, diphtheria and septic sore throat are of human origin. Typhoid and dysentery are spread originally by contamination by human excreta, the others are spread originally by discharges from the nasal and throat passages, consequently when these diseases are conveyed through milk, it simply means that the milk has had added to it the excreta or discharges from the body of a person sick with one of these diseases or a carrier of one of them. As a go-between, the house fly, which hatches in filth and feeds on the food we eat, is a most dangerous insect enemy. The washing of excreta into water supplies, through the soil or on account of poor well curbing or other surface conditions, is an important means of spreading such diseases as typhoid fever and dysentery. The handling of milk by unclean persons is also a source of danger. The remedy for these conditions is the proper disposal of human excreta so that there can be no danger of such contamination through the agency of flies, water supply, or human beings.

Proper sewage disposal on dairy farms is a protection not only to the consumer of milk but is of special importance in stopping the spread of epidemic disease in the dairyman's own family. A typhoid case in a family will spread to other members of the same family unless great care is taken in properly disposing of the excreta from the patient.

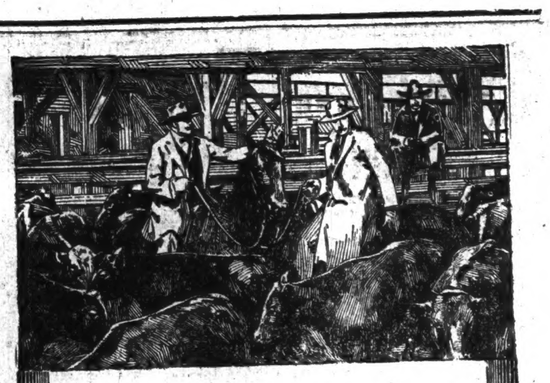
The importance of proper sewage disposal, especially on dairy farms, is being strongly emphasized by the United States department of agriculture and the United States public health service.

They Please the Palate.

Here is what a traveler familiar with guinea-pig meat has written:

"Cavies are excellent as entrees in various stews—with mushrooms, with brown onions, with green peas, a la soubise, and especially in curry. A practical cook will have no difficulty in varying the preparation, and I will undertake to say that it will be found difficult to make them other than very good meats."

Because of the whiteness of its skin the smooth-haired white (albino) guinea pig is best adapted for the table. The males become somewhat strong flavored with age, but females are said to be finely flavored for a much longer time. They are probably at their best when a year old.



Cattle Buying for Swift & Company

Swift & Company buys more than 9000 head of cattle, on an average, every market day.

Each one of them is "sized up" by experts.

Both the packer's buyer and the commission salesman must judge what amount of meat each animal will yield, and how fine it will be, the grading of the hide, and the quantity and quality of the fat.

Both must know market conditions for live stock and meat throughout the country. The buyer must know where the different qualities, weights, and kinds of cattle can be best marketed as beef.

If the buyer pays more than the animal is worth, the packer loses money on it. If he offers less, another packer, or a shipper or feeder, gets it away from him.

If the seller accepts too little, the live-stock raiser gets less than he is entitled to. If he holds out for more than it is worth, he fails to make a sale.

A variation of a few cents in the price per hundred pounds is a matter of vital importance to the packer, because it means the difference between profit and loss.

Stock Raising in Western Canada is as profitable as Grain Growing

In Western Canada Grain Growing is a profit maker. Raising Cattle, Sheep and Hogs brings certain success. It's easy to prosper where you can raise 20 to 45 bu. of wheat to the acre and buy on easy terms.

Land at $15 to $30 Per Acre —Good Grazing Land at Much Less.

Railway and Land Co's. are offering unusual inducements to homeseekers to settle in Western Canada and enjoy her prosperity. Loans made for the purchase of stock or other farming requirements can be had at low interest. The Governments of the Dominion and Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta extend every encouragement to the farmer and rancheman. IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR JANUARY 5

PHARAOH OPPRESSES ISRAEL.

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 1:7-2:8.

GOLDEN TEXT—He shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressor.—Psalms 72:4.

DEVOTIONAL READING—Psalms 2.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Exodus 5:1-6:1; Hebrews 11:23-27.

The book from which the next eight lessons are taken is a continuation of the story of the chosen people. Its central theme is redemption—the deliverance of Israel from bondage and their separation unto God. The question of relationship from Egyptian bondage is a type of our own redemption from sin's bondage (I Corinthians 5:7). Pharaoh represents the devil, and Egypt the world.

I. The Increase of the Chosen Seed (1:7).

After Joseph's death Israel quickly grew into a nation. This increase was the fulfillment of Genesis 35:11, which promise was repeated to Jacob just before going into Egypt (Genesis 46:3). If it be the problem of how a little company of seventy persons could become an host of six hundred thousand men in so short a time, let us remember that God promised it, and all difficulties will vanish. There is a time coming when there shall be another amazing increase in Israel (Ezekiel 36:10, 11, 37, 38; 37:26).

II. A New Dynasty (1:8-10).

Joseph's elevation in Egypt was during the reign of the Hyksos kings. Being of Semitic origin they were not hostile to the Hebrews, but when there "arose up a new king which knew not Joseph" (v. 8) the amazing growth of the Israelites excited his envy and fear (vv. 9, 10). This fear was twofold: (1) In case of war they might join the enemy and fight against them. (2) Lest they should remove from the land, thus cutting off a vital source of revenue and exposing to danger the eastern border of the land.

III. Measures to Check the Growth of Israel (1:11-22).

These measures place on exhibition the folly of worldly wisdom (1 Corinthians 3:19). Their fatal mistake was that they left God out of their calculations. God had promised that Israel should be great in numbers and mighty in power. He who plans against God shall miserably fail and shall be shown to be a fool.

1. Cruel Taskmasters (vv. 11-14). They were placed under heavy burdens. Cruel taskmasters were placed over them who forced them to labor in building treasure cities and all manner of service in the field. This measure was ineffectual, for "the more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and grew." This rapid growth resulted in more intense burdens being heaped upon them.

2. Murder of Male Infants by the Midwives (vv. 15-21). This measure also miscarried, as the midwives feared God and chose to obey him. Because they refused to destroy God's people he gave them homes and children and the joys thereof.

3. Drowning of Male Children in the River (v. 22). In order to make this measure effective all the people were charged with the responsibility of casting the Hebrew male children into the river. This mandate seems to have been given shortly before Moses was born. This plan likewise was foiled, and the very child who when a man upset his throne, was sheltered and nurtured in his own palace.

IV. The Birth and Education of Moses (2:1-8).

The measure which was designed to destroy the Hebrew menace, also brought to Pharaoh's palace and educated there the very man who afterward shattered the Egyptian power and set free the enslaved people. The faith of Moses' parents caused them to ignore the command of the king and hide him for three months (Hebrews 11:23). Faith in God is the antidote for fear (Psalms 27:1). His mother discerned in him a proper child, or a child fair to God (Acts 7:20), and believed him to be the deliverer of his people. She no doubt instilled this truth in his mind from his childhood. Perhaps led by the story of Noah's ark she made an ark of bulrushes and placed Moses in it and left it at the place where Pharaoh's daughter would be attracted when she came down to bathe. Miriam, his sister, was placed where she could watch the affair. She came with a suggestion at the opportune moment as to a nurse for the baby. Education at his mother's knee gave character, and education at the Egyptian court qualified him to be the historian and lawgiver of his people.

Necessary Ingredients.

"Love suffereth long and is kind; love envieth not; love vaunteth not itself." Get these ingredients into your life. Then everything that you do is eternal. It is worth doing. It is worth giving time to.

Self-Denial.

Self-denial when regularly kept up and not only indulged now and then, out of impulse or partial affection, is one of the clearest tokens that God's holy spirit is with men, preparing them for eternal glory.—Keb

Temperance Notes

(Conducted by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.)

BEER AND BILE.

Prof. W. A. Osborne, a distinguished chemist, explains, in a very illuminating way, that the liver is especially susceptible to alcohol poisoning, because the alcohol, before it is eliminated from the body, repeatedly assaults that organ. "Every one knows," said Doctor Osborne, "that the liver forms bile, and that bile is poured into the bowel. Now, when alcohol is taken it passes into the stomach, and from there to the bowel, or small intestine, and is absorbed there. Everything that is absorbed from the stomach or the bowel has to go to the liver, and nothing is allowed to enter the general circulation until it has been properly sifted and treated in the biggest organ we possess—the liver. It has been found, in the case of alcohol, that when alcohol has been absorbed in the bowel it reaches the liver, and the liver really does not know what to do with it. There is practically no provision in nature for the utilization of alcohol (a very significant fact, I may here parenthetically remark).

"When alcohol reaches the liver the liver manages to destroy some, but a great portion of it is turned out in the bile, and once more reaches the bowel, and then the liver, and this cycle of operations goes on for hours and possibly days, until the alcohol is gotten rid of. All this time it is constantly irritating and injuring the liver, and this explains the fact which medical science has known for a long time, namely, that the liver is one of the organs of the body which is singularly susceptible to alcoholic degeneracy, and this is the reason why."

WHISPERING PROPAGANDA.

In a booklet entitled "The German Whisper," issued by the committee on public information of the federal government, through its associate chairman, Harry O'Higgins, we find this statement:

"As a matter of fact, no liquor ration is served our troops either here or abroad. No army canteen sells alcoholic liquors. By General Pershing's orders, our soldiers in France are forbidden 'either to buy or to accept as gifts from the inhabitants, any alcoholic beverages other than light wine or beer.' As there is little beer sold in France, General Pershing reports, 'Men who drink are thus limited to the light native wine used by all French people. Even this is discouraged among our troops in every way possible. I hope to secure the co-operation of the French government to prevent the sale of all liquors and wines to our troops. Personally, I favor prohibition in the army, but it is impracticable and inadvisable to issue orders that cannot be enforced without the co-operation of the French government.'" "The charge of drunkenness among our expeditionary forces," asserts Mr. O'Higgins, "is a pro-German lie designed to alarm the mothers and fathers of the boys who have gone to France. The stories of immorality consequent upon drunkenness are equally baseless."

RESULTS OF BONE-DRY LAW.

That bone-dry prohibition is eminently satisfactory to the police department of Sioux Falls, Minn., is set forth in the annual report of the chief of police, W. H. Martin, to the city commissions. He declares that the police protection afforded Sioux Falls amounts to one-third of one patrolman to every thousand of population or the lowest of any important city in the United States.

To show how prohibition has worked out so far as the police are concerned, Chief Martin submits the following table of arrests in connection with liquor during the year:

RUM RATION BAD.

In regard to the rum ration a surgeon of the British royal army medical corps said: "I served at Gallipoli. I was wounded on the western front. It is my earnest opinion that the rum ration is utterly bad. I believe that there are thousands of glorious British lads who would be alive today, recovering from wounds and from disease, restored to their loved ones and their country, had it not been for the rum ration."

The liquor traffic is an assault on every one of these.—Clarence True Wilson at senate committee hearing.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

STOCKING'S STORY.

"I am a stocking."

"So are we," said some of the other stockings in the bureau drawer.

"But I am—well I am a stocking," said the first stocking.

"So you said before."

"It's worth saying again," the first stocking answered.

"We don't see why you're so proud," the other stockings said. "You're rather useless. You haven't any mate. And you're white. You're not made of a nice material. You're very coarse and strong."

"That is just what I like," said the stocking.

"You don't mind not having a mate?" the others asked.

"I don't mind in the least," said the stocking.

"And you don't mind it because you lie in the drawer doing nothing, while we are taken out and worn and washed and darned and put back again? We start in the shops, we then go into packages and arrive at different homes.

"Next we are worn, then we are washed, mended and put with our mates back in the bureau drawer."

"You said all that before," said the white stocking.

"Well," said the other stockings, "you said the same thing twice."

"I'm important," said the white one.

"Important!" said the others. "You're important doing nothing. Why we have the same interesting rounds—from—"

But the white stocking interrupted. "Yes, I've heard how you're worn, washed, mended and worn again. I've heard that enough times."

"Then why did you say it yourself?" the stockings asked.

"So as not to hear all of you saying it again," the white stocking answered.

"Poor excuse," the stockings said.

"You're not years old as I am," said the white stocking.

"We wouldn't want to be," the others said. "There comes a time in the life of every stocking when it has had enough of darning and when, in fact, there are more darns upon it than stocking. That is the time when we're old. We're not proud of being old, for it means that younger and newer stockings are taking our places. They're being called 'Best stockings,' and 'Good stockings,' while we're known as the 'Old stockings.'

"And I Am Filled for Christmas."

"But we've had some fun in our lives whereas you, poor old stocking, you don't do anything.

"We walk and go over the earth—not all of it but a great deal of it. We sometimes are very idle when we go a-driving or a-motoring. We sometimes fall down and have a fight with the earth and we come off with a good old rip."

"Now," said the white stocking, "I've listened politely to your story, though none of it was new to me. I know all about the life of the average stocking. You say I am old. You say I am useless. You say I am coarse and entirely too strong to be a nice stocking. You would rather be beautiful for awhile even if other stockings took your place than you would to be good and strong and last for years and years. And you pity me because I haven't a mate.

"But you don't understand. I am a Christmas stocking. I am big and strong so I can hold things—not ordinary things such as feet which any stocking could hold—but I hold toys. Yes, I have nuts and raisins and oranges and a bright penny and a doll and a game and a number of other things put in me every year. For once a year I am taken out—and that time will come soon now.

"Yes, I leave this bureau drawer and I am hung up by a mantlepiece. There I hang for several hours when there is a strange noise in the chimney, near where I am. Then there is a stamping of feet on the roof and more sounds in the chimney. Next a little soot falls down—all the family are asleep. And then appears Santa Claus, the children's great friend, and I am filled for Christmas by him. Yes, I am an honored Christmas stocking." And the others said they were proud to know the white stocking.

How It Happened.

Once a year the newsboys of a certain district of London are taken for an outing up the Thames by a gentleman of the neighborhood, when they can bathe to their heart's content.

As one little boy was getting into the water a friend observed, "I say, Bill, ain't yer dirty?"

"Yes," replied Bill, "I missed the train last year."—Tit-Bits.

WORLD NEEDS FOOD

Demand Makes Opportunity for Returning Soldiers.

Thousands Will See Glorious Possibilities in Settlement of Available Farm Land in This Country and in Canada.

The war is over, peace will soon be signed, the fighting nations have sheathed their swords, and the day of reconstruction has come.

What of it?

Hundreds of thousands of men, taken from the fields of husbandry, from the ranks of labor, from the four walls of the counting house, and the confines of the workshop, taken from them to do their part, their large part, in the prevention of the spoliation of the world, and in the meantime removed from the gear of common everyday life, will be returned only to find in many cases old positions filled, the machinery with which they were formerly attached dislocated.

Are they to become aimless wanderers, with the ultimate possibility of augmenting an army of menacing loafers? If they do it is because their ability to assist in laying new foundations, in building up much-required structures, is underestimated. Men who fought as they fought, who risked and faced danger as they did, are not of the caliber likely to flinch when it comes to the restoration of what the enemy partially destroyed, when it comes to the reconstruction of the world, the ideals of which they had in view when they took part in the great struggle whose divine purpose was to bring about this reconstruction.

Inured to toil, thoughtless of fatigue, trained in initiative and hardened by their outdoor existence, they will return better and stronger men; boys will have matured and young men will have developed.

They will decide for themselves lines of action and thought, and what their future should and will be. On the field of battle they developed alertness and wisdom, and they will return with both shedding from every pore.

Action was their watchword, and it will stand them in good stead now that the din of the battle no longer rings in their ears, or the zero hour signals them to the fray, and it will continue during their entire existence.

But if they return to find their old avocations gone, their places filled, the institutions with which they were connected no longer existing, new walks of life and employment must be opened to them. It may be that the counting house, the factory, the workshop will have lost their attraction. The returned soldier will look elsewhere for employment; within his reach there is always the "Forward-to-the-Land" necessity. In this lies the remedy that will not only take care of a multitude of those who may not be able to return to their former occupations, whose desires are not to do so, whose health prohibits them from indoor life or whose outdoor habits from the past one, two, three or four years have given them such a taste and desire for it that confinement would be unbearable. Farm life will thus appeal to them, and the indications are that it will be taken advantage of by thousands. It means much to them as well as to the continent of America that provides the opportunity to the world at large, and to the stricken and famished nations of Europe, who, not only today, but for years to come, will require the sustenance that can only largely be supplied by the United States and Canada. By following the pursuit of agriculture the returned soldier will continue the cause he so greatly advanced when fighting on the field of battle. Both countries have undeveloped areas yet open to settlement.

There is little need here to direct attention to the wealth that has come to the farmers of Canada within the past few years. It is not only in grain growing that unqualified and almost unequaled success has followed honest effort, but the raising of horses, cattle, sheep and hogs has been a large source of profit. These are facts that are well known to the many friends and acquaintances of the thousands of farmers from the United States who have acquired wealth on the prairies of Western Canada. Farms of from one hundred and sixty to six hundred and forty acres of the richest soil may be secured on reasonable terms, and with an excellent climate, with a school system equal to any in the world, and desirable social conditions, little else could be asked.

Canadian statesmen are today busily engaged planning for the future of the returned soldier with a view to making him independent of state help after the immediate necessary assistance has been granted, the main idea being to show in the fullest degree the country's appreciation of the services he has rendered.

But now that the war has ended, and the fact apparent that of all avocations the most profitable and independent is that of the farmer, there will be a strong desire to secure farm lands for cultivation. Canada offers the opportunity to those seeking, not as speculation but as production. The deepest interest is taken by Federal and Provincial authorities to further the welfare of the farmer and secure a maximum return for his efforts. Large sums of money are spent in educational and experimental work. Engaged on experimental and demonstration farms, and in the agricultural colleges, are men of the highest technical knowledge and practical experience, some being professors of international reputation. The results of experiments and tests are free and available to all. Educational opportunities for farmers are the concern of the government and appreciation is shown by the number of farmers who attend the free courses.

Agriculture in Canada has reached a high standard, notwithstanding which lands are low in price.

Thus upon the United States and Canada for many years will rest the great burden of feeding the world. With free interchange of travel, difficulties of crossing and recrossing removed, Canada may look for a speedy resumption of the large influx of settlers from the United States which prevailed previous to the war. During the war period there was a dread of something, no one seemed to know what. If the American went to Canada he might be conscripted, put in prison, or in his attempt to cross the border he would meet with innumerable difficulties, most of which, of course, was untrue. These untruths were circulated for a purpose by an element, which, it was discovered, had an interest in fomenting and creating trouble and distrust between two peoples whose language and aims in life should be anything but of an unfriendly character. The draft law of the United States, adopted for the carrying out of the high purposes had in view by the United States, kept many from going to Canada during the period of the war. The citizen army of the United States was quickly mobilized, and contained a large percentage of the young men from the farms. In this way many were prevented from going to Canada.

That is all over now. There are no real or imaginary restrictions; there is no draft law to interfere. On the contrary, there is an unfathomable depth of good-feeling, and the long-existing friendship is stronger than ever. This has been brought about by the knowledge of what has been done in the recent great struggle, each vying with the other in giving credit for what was accomplished. In thought and feeling, in language, in aims in life, in work, in desire to build up a new world, there has been bred a kinship which is as indissoluble as time itself.—Advertisement.

SAFE, GENTLE REMEDY CLEANSES YOUR KIDNEYS

For centuries GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil has been a standard household remedy for kidney, liver, bladder and stomach trouble, and all diseases connected with the urinary organs. The kidneys and bladder are the most important organs of the body. They are the filters, the purifiers of your blood. If the poisons which enter your system through the blood and stomach are not entirely thrown out by the kidneys and bladder, you are doomed.

Weariness, sleeplessness, nervousness, despondency, backache, stomach trouble, headache, pain in loins and lower abdomen, gall stones, gravel, difficulty when urinating, cloudy and bloody urine, rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago, all warn you to look after your kidneys and bladder. All these indicate some weakness of the kidneys or other organs or that the enemy microbes which are always present in your system have attacked your weak spots. GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules are what you need.

They are not a "patent medicine," nor a "new discovery." For 200 years they have been a standard household remedy. They are the pure, original imported Haarlem Oil your great-grandmother used, and are perfectly harmless. The healing, soothing oil soaks into the cells and lining of the kidneys and through the bladder, driving out the poisonous germs. New life, fresh strength and health will come as you continue the treatment. When completely restored to your usual vigor, continue taking a capsule or two each day; they will keep you in condition and prevent a return of the disease.

Do not delay a minute. Delays are especially dangerous in kidney and bladder trouble. All druggists sell GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. They will refund the money if not as represented. GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules are imported direct from the laboratories in Holland. They are prepared in correct quantity and convenient form, are easy to take and are positively guaranteed to give prompt relief. In three sizes, sealed packages. are having the most wonderful fall weather you ever heard of, since they quit shooting the big guns. I think the big guns had a tendency to cause bad weather condition over here. This is a wonderful moonlight night. It is a regular dream in itself. The French girls have not returned to their homes yet. I don't think I would care to bother them any way. They don't look good to your uncle.

I have been getting lots of exercise lately. I take a big walk every afternoon. I was over to——— this afternoon doing some exploring. There is some wonderful and many horrible scenes over here. There are many villages that are completely destroyed and I doubt if they can ever be rebuilt on the same location again. It sure is awful and there will be many heart-broken French people after they return to their homes. They will find nothing at their former homes but a few ruins. You people are sure lucky to escape what some of the French people had to suffer. I am sure glad that this was is over. It means universal happiness and also your individual bliss which you alone can only cherish. I hear that they are turning all of the boys loose in the states. I suppose it will be spring before I get out. I got a copy of the ST. JOE NEWS last week. I received the kodac pictures. Wish you would send some more. So you have a couple of paintings for me. For 5c you can get 3 ounces of Glando Pine. Mix it with good syrup or strained honey enough to make a pint, and you will have the best cough medicine you ever used. It can't be beat for coughs, colds, hoarseness, throat irritation or croup. Glando Pine relieves the spasmodic coughing in whooping cough. Children love to take it. To prevent a cold from developing into pneumonia or bronchitis, hold a teaspoonful of Glando Pine well back in the mouth and take a few deep breaths before swallowing it. You can feel the air cells opening up and you will breathe deep and easy.

Mrs. W. M. J. Kellers, of Lima, Ohio, says: "I took cold, which developed into a severe cough. It hung on for several months. I coughed terribly, especially at night. I lived in a flat and my neighbors, believing me to have tuberculosis, asked the owner of the flat to have me move out, which he did. I used different remedies, but found no relief until I used Glando Pine. The first dose seemed to help me. I began gaining flesh, and by the time I had used two bottles, my cough was gone. Over a year has passed and my cough has not returned. I believe Glando Pine saved my life."

Here Is Your Chance to Learn About Tractors.

Tractor School to Help All Who are Interested in Power Farming.

A tractor school is to be held in the Commercial Club Building at Auburn, Indiana, on Friday and Saturday, January 10th and 11th.

This is a rare opportunity for tractor owners and all who are interested in farm power. You will get some valuable first-hand information on tractors. A tractor is not a complicated machine but there are a great many more things to know about a tractor than some of the ordinary farm machines. If the owner is to keep the tractor running properly he should understand it thoroughly. It is very important that all tractors are kept in good condition, especially is that true this year.

If the operator understands his tractor, he will be able to prevent many troubles. He will also be able to get more power from his fuel and to keep the tractor running the maximum number of hours It is to the advantage of the tractor owner to attend the tractor school and learn about the underlying principles of tractor construction and all the little tricks in tractor operation and care.

The tractor school to be held by the International Harvester Company will be thoroughly practical in every way. The instructors are men who have been handling tractors for a number of years and not only know tractors from the standpoint of theory but have operated them and can give you the benefit of their practical experience.

Come prepared to ask questions. You are invited to put your problems up to the instructors and we assure you they will be in a position to be of help. It might be a good plan for you to make a list of the things you want to know about your tractor and have them ready at the tractor school. Time may not permit answering all the questions but they will be answered by correspondence or the information will be given you in the form of a book. Every possible effort will be made to give the tractor owners the information that will help them.

The Company has prepared a book covering the principles of construction, care and operation of tractors, and all who attend the school will receive a copy of this book free of charge. It deals with the points of discussion that will be of special advantage to the men who attend because they can study it after they have gone back home. Authorities say that this book is the best one on tractors now in print.

The tractor school will be absolutely free to all who care to attend. There will be no fees or charges for any of the instruction. All material will be furnished free. There will be nothing offered for sale and there will be no selling talks. The school is conducted purely for the benefit of those interested in power farming. If you cannot attend, be sure and have the man or boy attend who operates your tractor.

Every owner of a tractor or engine is invited to attend this school. Make your plans now so that you can spare the time to be at the school. It will be worth your while.

Don't forget the date! Plan to come and learn more about tractors and engines. The school opens promptly at 8 A. M.

Obituary

GERALD, the youngest son of LeRoy and Addie Koch, was born at Boyne City, Michigan, January 17, 1913 and departed this life at Concord, December 21, 1918, at the tender age of 5 years 11 months and 4 days.

His stay with us was only for a short time. Our loss is his eternal gain. He leaves to mourn his departure a father, mother, one brother, Bruce, one sister, Hilda, grandparents on both sides and a host of friends. He was loved by all who knew him for his kind ways as a child.

The funeral services were held from the residence on Monday afternoon, December 23, at 1:30 o'clock. Rev. C. O Johnson, officiating. Interment at Riverside cemetery.

He is not dead, the child of our affection,
But gone into that school
Where he no longer needs our poor protection,
But Christ himself doth rule.
In that Great Cloisters stillness and seclusion,
By guardian Angels led,
Safe from temptation, safe from sins pollution,
He lives, whom we call dead.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the neighbors and friends who so kindly assisted us during our little son's illness and death and also express our appreciation for the beautiful flowers.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Paulding, Paulding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

At a recent meeting of the Volunteer Firemen, H. C. Hathaway handed in his resignation as Chief, after having served most efficiently ever since the Firemen organized some three years ago. While regret was felt at the resigning of Mr Hathaway, it was accepted owing to the fact that his new work, that of county Recorder, would take him away from town. Grover Curie, his able assistant, was appointed to fill his place.

REVIEW OF YEAR THAT BROUGHT PEACE TO WORLD AFTER FOUR YEARS OF WAR

Germany and Her Allies Are Crushed and Forced to Accept Such Terms as Winners Dictate—United States Supplies Power That Turns Tide—President Wilson Joins Other Democratic Rulers of World in Great Peace Congress at Versailles—Old Nations Crumble and New Ones Are Formed—Russia Torn by Disorders.

By DONALD F. BIGGS.

More history has been made in the year 1918 than in any year that has passed since time began. This momentous twelve months' period comes to a close with the world at peace after more than four years of the most sanguinary fighting of this or any other age.

During the year great nations have crumbled, new nations have sprung into being, thrones have tottered and fallen, monarchs who once ruled hundreds of millions of people with an iron hand have fled for their lives or have fallen victim to the wrath of peoples intoxicated by their new-won freedom.

The coming of peace finds America and her allies strong and fully able to meet the responsibilities that come with victory. On the other hand it finds the nations responsible for the world cataclysm exhausted and torn by civil disorders that are born of defeat. It finds the once great empire of Austria-Hungary in ruins from which there are already rising new free nations. It finds the German empire disrupted and threatened with dissolution.

The end of the war finds Russia in the throes of civil war. The world gets only fragments of news regarding the real situation in the land of the former czar, but these fragments have told a terrible story of anarchy and class strife in which thousands of persons have perished, slain in bloody riots or ruthlessly executed by the bolshevik leaders who control a large part of the once great empire. Peace finds the menace of autocratic militarism supplanted by the menace of bolshevism, which is attempting to extend its anarchistic propaganda throughout the world.

But, amid all the uncertainties that peace has brought, the world rejoices that the last citadel of autocracy has been swept away before the rising tide of democracy, giving assurance that the millions who died upon the field of battle did not die in vain. Brighter days for all mankind have dawned with the passing of the year 1918.

HOW THE WAR WAS WON

The year opened with the opinion generally prevailing that the world war could not be brought to a conclusion in less than eighteen months. It was an open secret that the German high command was planning to make a supreme effort on the western front, and during the early days of 1918 it was known that many divisions of German troops, released from the Russian front, were being transferred to the west front in preparation for the grand offensive.

Interest during these days centered in events that were transpiring in Russia and in long-range peace discussions in which President Wilson and Chancellor von Hertling figured. On January 8 President Wilson, in an address to congress, promulgated the famous "14 points" which he declared should form the basis of world peace.

In Russia Premier Lenine and Foreign Minister Trotzky intrenched themselves in power by dissolving the constituent assembly which met at Petrograd January 18. On January 21 an all-Russian congress of soviets was convened to replace the constituent assembly. There was little activity on any front during the month, but on January 30 it was announced officially that American troops were holding front-line trenches in France, occupying a sector northwest of Toul.

The Americans holding this sector received their baptism of fire when they repulsed a vigorous German raid. The Americans lost two killed, four wounded and one missing. On February 5 the steamer Tuscania, carrying 2,179 American soldiers, was torpedoed and sunk, with a loss of 159 lives. On February 9 the Ukraine signed a separate treaty of peace with the central powers.

Conditions in Russia continued to be chaotic. The bolsheviki declared the war with Germany over but refused to sign the peace treaty demanded by Germany. The Germans thereupon renewed hostilities against Russia, capturing Reval, Russian naval base, and advancing on Petrograd. Lenine and Trotzky then announced that Russia was forced to accept the German peace terms. On March 3 the Russian delegates at Brest-Litovsk signed the peace treaty with Germany.

Germans Begin Great Drive.

On March 21 the long-heralded offensive of the Germans was launched. A terrific blow was delivered against the British lines on a front of more than 50 miles, extending from the River Oise, near La Fere, to the Sensee river, about Croiselles. Wave after wave of the finest German troops were hurled at the British lines, and in a few days had advanced 15 miles. The British Fifth army at the point where it touched the French lines was routed, and for a time the allies faced disaster. The Germans continued to push northward, and at the end of 10 days had advanced 47 miles from La Fere and were within six miles of Amiens. Here the advance was halted. In the meantime, on March 29, the allies, facing a catastrophe, at last agreed upon a unification of command, and General Foch, the brilliant French leader, was placed in supreme command of all the allied armies.

A few days after the launching of this drive, Paris was bombarded by a "mystery" gun which it was known was at least 62 miles away. On March 29, Good Friday, this long-range gun made a direct hit on a Paris church and 75 worshipers were killed.

On April 10, the Germans shifted their attack and began the second phase of their offensive—a drive against the British in Flanders with the channel ports as the objective. Here again the British were forced to give ground, but there was no break such as occurred earlier on the Somme front. The British and Portuguese were swept back along the River Lys. The Germans took the Messines ridge and threw 125,000 men against the British below Ypres. But the Ypres defenses held firm, and in the west the Germans failed in their efforts to reach Hazebrouck. The terrific drive spent itself and the Germans had failed to threaten the channel ports seriously.

On April 22 the British navy executed one of the spectacular feats of the war, blocking the channel of Zeebrugge, a German submarine base.

Germans Renew Offensive.

On May 27 the Germans renewed the offensive with a powerful attack between the Aisne and the Marne. In a day they swept over the Chemin-des-Dames on the heights north of the Aisne and crossed the river in a rush. Next they took Soissons and reached the Vesle. On they went to the Marne, extending their front on the river from Chateau-Thierry to Verneuil, and threatening Reims in their advance. The drive was halted with the Germans occupying a front 16 miles wide on the Marne.

In the meantime the Americans had won attention on May 2? by taking Cantigny on the Picardy front in a brilliant attack.

On May 25, German U-boats began operations off the coast of the United States, sinking 11 ships.

The German drive for Paris was resumed but the turning point was reached when on June 6 and 7 American marines were thrown across the path of the advancing army at Chateau-Thierry. The Americans not only stopped the Germans but drove them back two miles, capturing several hundred prisoners.

In an effort to unite the Somme salient with that of the Marne to provide a base for another move toward Paris, the Germans launched another heavy attack west of Noyon on June 10. They made considerable gains on a 20-mile front but the drive was halted within two days.

Austrian Offensive Is Fiasco.

Attention was transferred from France to Italy when on June 15 the Austrians opened an offensive on the Italian front from Asiago plateau to the sea. The attack proved a complete fiasco. It was repulsed at all points and the Italians pursued the fleeing Austrians across the Piave, taking 45,000 prisoners.

The German commanders made one last effort to break through to Paris when the crown prince's army group on July 15, the morning after the French national holiday, launched an offensive along a front from Chateau-Thierry to Massiges, 30 miles east of Reims.

This fifth and last phase of the great offensive failed most signally, being stopped on the third day. The American forces played a big part in this second decisive battle of the Marne. East of Chateau-Thierry the Germans forced a passage across the Marne and the Americans who opposed them were forced to fall back temporarily. Then, in a brilliant counter-attack, the Americans drove the Germans back across the Marne, taking 1,500 prisoners, including a complete brigade staff.

Allied Offensive Opens.

On July 18 General Foch assumed the offensive. He struck the crown prince's right flank a vital blow and on the first day the French and Americans fought their way for six miles along the Aisne, reaching the outskirts of Soissons. For two weeks the great counter-offensive continued. On July 29 the Americans met the crack divisions of German guards and defeated them in a stubborn battle at Sergy. Soissons fell to the French on August 2 and by the following day the entire Soissons-Reims salient had been wiped out.

The indignation of the British people, aroused by the U-boat outrages perpetrated by the Germans, was intensified early in July when news was received of the sinking by a submarine of the hospital ship Llandovery Castle, carrying wounded men and nurses between Canada and England, causing a loss of 268 persons, including 12 nurses. The United States continued to speed up its war activities during July, and early in the month it was announced that Americans overseas or on the way numbered 1,019,115.

The United States on July 7 agreed to allied action in Russia and preparations were begun for an allied military expedition into Siberia. On the same day Count von Mirbach, German ambassador to Russia, was slain at Moscow. On July 8 it was announced that the Murman coast of Russia had thrown off bolshevik rule and invited aid from the allies. During July the first reports came from Russia of the execution of the former czar by a local soviet and these reports later were confirmed.

General Foch opened the second phase of his counter-offensive on August 8 when a surprise attack was launched on a 20-mile front in Picardy, the allies gaining seven miles at some points and taking 7,000 prisoners. The following day Haig's men gained 13 miles in Picardy and the next day the French, attacking on a 20-mile front, wiped out the Montdidier salient.

Foch Hammers Foe.

Then followed a series of sledge-hammer blows on all portions of the front, all fitting into the general scheme of attack worked out by the master mind of Foch. On August 20 Lassigny fell and the former Somme front was restored. British and French armies, aided by American units, continued the smash on the Somme front and on August 30 the Germans were hurled across the Somme. The British took Bapaume and were close to Peronne. Roye fell to the French and dozens of small towns were wrested from the invaders. Further north the British smashed the Hindenburg line and forced the Germans to begin a retreat from the Lys salient.

On September 12, the First American army, under the direct command of General Pershing, began a brilliant action which wiped out the difficult St. Mihiel salient in three days. The Americans took 20,000 prisoners in this action.

Serbian, French and Italian forces, on September 18, launched a big drive against the Bulgars in Macedonia. Almost simultaneously the British broke the Turk lines in the Holy Land. The Turkish army was shattered, and by September 27 had lost 45,000 men in prisoners. In the meantime the allies smashed the Hindenburg line along a 22-mile front in the St. Quentin sector, and it was announced at Washington that the United States now had 1,750,000 men across the sea to aid in crushing the crumbling armies of the enemy.

The first decisive break in the ranks of the central empires came on September 27, when General Malinoff, commander of the Bulgar armies which were routed before the advancing Serbs and French, asked for an armistice. On September 30 Bulgaria accepted the armistice terms proposed by the allies and surrendered unconditionally.

Teutons Move for Peace.

Turkey moved for peace on October 4 and the German people were thrown into a panic as they saw their allies crumbling. Prince Max, who had now become German chancellor, addressed a note to President Wilson, asking that steps be taken immediately to conclude an armistice and to open peace negotiations. President Wilson answered by asking whether he spoke for the people or the then rulers of the empire and whether the proposal was based on an acceptance of the presidents 14 peace points. Meanwhile the drive on the west front continued, and the Germans were driven from much ground that they had held since 1914. The Hindenburg line was smashed at many points. Pershing's men broke the foe's main line of defense west of the Meuse and after days of bitter fighting cleared the Germans out of Argonne forest. The Germans were forced to abandon the Chemin des Dames and to retreat on a long line from Laon as far east as Argonne.

Germany sent another note to President Wilson on October 12, accepting the latter's 14 peace principles, and urging the president to transmit its proposal for an armistice to the allies. Prince Max assured the president that by reason of constitutional changes the existing German government spoke for the people. President Wilson replied two days later, rejecting the German proposals, declaring that any armistice must be granted by the military commanders and must guarantee the continued supremacy of the allied arms.

The answer of the allied armies to the German peace proposals was to deliver still harder blows at the retiring enemy. In the north the Belgian army, led by King Albert, co-operating with the British, began to sweep the Germans from the Belgian coast. On October 17 the Germans were driven from Ostend and Bruges and the British occupied Lille. The whole west front was in motion. The allies swept eastward through Belgium and through the industrial regions of France.

Chancellor Max, on October 21, sent another peace note to President Wilson, denying the charges that the Germans had been guilty of atrocities on land and sea, and again giving assurances that the new government represented the people of Germany. President Wilson replied two days later, agreeing to transmit the request for an armistice to the allies.

Italians Rout Austrians.

As this note was delivered the allies were smashing the Germans at all points on the western front and on October 24 the Italians launched a great offensive against the Austrians on the Piave front, who within a few days were in headlong flight with the Italians in pursuit. The Americans continued to smash the Germans in vicious attacks west of the Meuse.

The month of November opened with the German armies facing utter rout, the armies of her allies completely shattered and the end in sight. Turkey surrendered unconditionally to the British and the Austrians begged for an armistice, while their armies were in full flight. The allied war council at Versailles began to prepare the terms to be submitted to the Germans.

The American First army smashed the German lines at Grand Pre and advanced seven miles west of the Meuse as the enemy line cracked.

Austria-Hungary, on November 3, accepted the armistice terms which provided for unconditional surrender, hostilities ceasing at three o'clock November 4.

On November 5, President Wilson notified Germany to apply to Marshal Foch for terms, he having been informed that they had been prepared by the allied war council.

German envoys were appointed and approached the allied lines but in the meantime the allied armies did not lessen the pressure they were exerting on the enemy. The Americans, having inflicted a severe defeat on the enemy, clearing the whole front between the Meuse and the Aisne, rapidly advanced toward Sedan, cutting the vital communications between Metz and the long German line extending to the north. The Germans, as a result of the American advance, faced the necessity of undertaking a general retreat to save their armies from being cut off.

On November 9 the kaiser abdicated and the crown prince renounced his claims to the throne. The government of Germany passed into the control of the social democrats and Herr Ebert was made chancellor. The kaiser fled to Holland and was permitted to remain there by the Dutch authorities. At the same time various other German princes abdicated and soldiers and workmen's councils sprang into existence at many points.

Germans Sign Armistice.

On November 11 the German envoys signed the armistice which amounted practically to unconditional surrender. Under the terms of the armistice Germany agreed to evacuate all invaded territory and retire behind the Rhine, the allies to follow and hold all important crossings of the Rhine. The Germans agreed to surrender the greater part of their navy and thousands of heavy guns and airplanes, rendering them unable to renew hostilities.

The armistice became effective at 11 a. m., Paris time, November 11. Thus the great world war virtually came to an end, although technically it will end only with the signing of the peace treaty.

With the cessation of hostilities revolution spread through Germany and Austria. Emperor Charles of Austria abdicated and a people's government was set up.

Field Marshal von Hindenburg remained in supreme command of the German armies and began to direct the retirement of the Germans in accordance with the terms of the armistice.

Carrying out the terms of the armistice the Germans surrendered 71 warships to the allies on November 21.

Conditions were very unsettled in Germany during the closing weeks of the year, the socialist government apparently sharing power with the soldiers and workmen's councils. Plans were under discussion for the summoning of a constituent assembly to determine the future character of the government but activities of the radical socialistic element under the leadership of Herr Liebknecht threatened to disrupt the entire former empire.

On November 20 President Wilson announced that he would head the American delegation to the peace conference and that the other delegates would be Secretary of State Lansing, Col. E. M. House, Henry White, former ambassador to France, and Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, United States military representative on the supreme war council. The president, accompanied by the other peace delegates and a large party of assistants, sailed for France December 4.

President Wilson arrived at Brest December 13 and proceeded to Paris, where he was given an enthusiastic reception. He at once entered into conference with the allied leaders, in preparation for the opening of the peace conference in January.

British, French, American and Belgian armies of occupation advanced into Germany as the Germans retired in accordance with the armistice, the allied armies reaching the Rhine during the early days of December.

DOMESTIC AFFAIRS

Practically every phase of American life felt the dominating influence of war throughout the year 1918.

In the field of national legislation woman's suffrage and nation-wide prohibition were urged as war measures. The woman's suffrage amendment was defeated in the senate October 1, after having passed the house. A nation-wide prohibition measure, to become effective June 30, 1919, was enacted by congress and approved by the president November 22. On September 6 President Wilson had ordered the manufacture of malt liquor stopped on December 1, as a food-conservation measure.

The government, early in the year, began to tighten its control over industry and business for the purpose of furthering war efforts and protecting the public. On January 16, to relieve a serious coal shortage which threatened to delay the shipment of war supplies to France, Fuel Administrator Garfield ordered a general shutdown of industry and business in all states east of the Mississippi river for a period of five days and ten succeeding Mondays. On February 25 the order for heatless Mondays was rescinded.

Congress increased the safeguards thrown about war industries by passing the "sabotage" bill, carrying penalties of $10,000 fine and 30 years' imprisonment for destruction of war materials or interference with war industries. President Wilson signed this measure on April 20. The government also prosecuted vigorously many persons accused of violation of the espionage act. On August 17, 100 members of the I. W. W. were convicted of disloyalty in the federal court at Chicago, after a trial lasting several months.

Government control of the railroads was followed during this year by government control of all telegraph and telephone lines. Congress on July 13 authorized the president to take control of the wires and the government assumed control on July 31. On November 17, the government also took control of all Atlantic cable lines.

The first general election since the United States entered the war was held on November 5. The Republicans won both houses of congress, the senate by a majority of two and the house by a margin of more than forty.

During September, October and November the entire country was swept by a serious epidemic of Spanish influenza. Thousands of soldiers in the army camps and other thousands of civilians succumbed thereto and to pneumonia.

The country was surprised on November 22 by the resignation of William G. McAdoo as secretary of the treasury and director general of the railroads. Representative Carter Glass of Virginia was named to succeed Mr. McAdoo as secretary of the treasury December 5.

On November 28 Governor Stephens of California commuted to life imprisonment the death sentence of Thomas J. Mooney, convicted in connection with the death of ten persons from a bomb explosion in San Francisco during a preparedness parade July 22, 1916.

Plan for making the United States navy second to that of no other country for 1925 were disclosed to congress by Rear Admiral Badger, chairman of the executive committee of the general board of the navy December 12.

FOREIGN

The map of Europe was being remade as the year 1918 came to a close. The Czecho-Slovak republic was already in existence before the close of the war, having been recognized as an independent belligerent government by the United States, Great Britain, France and Italy, but the coming of peace saw the formal establishment of this new government at Prague. The end of the war also practically assured the rising of a great new Poland, made up of most, if not all, of the territory divided up years ago among Germany, Austria and Russia. Finland threw off the shackles placed upon her by Russia and out of the turmoil of civil war emerged as a free and independent nation. The peoples of other smaller subject states asserted their independence.

Civil war continued to threaten the new republic of China throughout the year. Hsu Shih Chang was elected president of the republic on September 6 and during the next few months reports indicated a possibility of an agreement being reached between the northern and southern sections of the country.

Peru and Chile were reported on the brink of war during the closing weeks of the year. The trouble between these countries was an outgrowth of the nitrate war of years ago in which Chile won Taona and Arica.

Dr. Sidonia Paes, president of Portugal, was shot and killed at Lisbon, December 15. The assassin was killed by the crowd that witnessed the crime. Two days later Admiral Canto Y. Castro was elected president of Portugal.

On December 16 the Finnish diet elected General Mannerheim regent of Finland.

LABOR AND INDUSTRY

Labor unrest, resulting in many strikes, threatened to seriously hamper the government's war preparations early in the year but through a spirit of co-operation shown by both labor and capital the danger was averted and there was little labor trouble during the greater part of the year.

During the early days of the year disaffection appeared among the workers in the shipyards and by February 12 the situation had assumed a serious aspect with strikes in effect in five yards. By February 16 the strike had spread still further in spite of an advance in wages announced by the labor adjustment board.

On February 17, President Wilson, in a letter to William L. Hutcheson, head of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, concerning the ship carpenters' strike, denied the right of labor to strike at that critical juncture. "Will you co-operate or will you obstruct?" the president asked. The workmen responded to the president's appeal and the strike was declared off. At the same time Secretary of Labor Wilson announced the personnel of a national board of labor, to be composed of representatives of both labor and capital. On February 24 this board opened a conference for the purpose of establishing a basis for the settlement of disputes during the war. Former President William H. Taft, chosen by the employers, and Frank P. Walsh, selected by the labor organizations, alternated as chairman. This conference, on March 29, reached an agreement providing that all labor disputes arising during the war should be submitted to a board of mediation. This agreement was adhered to by both employers and employees and comparatively few strikes occurred during the remainder of the year.

DISASTERS

Fires, railroad accidents and explosions took a heavy toll of human life on land during the year 1918 while the elements combined with the torpedoes of the German U-boats to send thousands of innocent persons, including women and children, to their death at sea.

Fifty-two children met death in a fire which destroyed a convent at Montreal, Canada, February 14. February 24 the liner Florizel, bound from St. Johns, N. F., to New York, was wrecked by a blizzard near Cape Race and 92 lives were lost.

Seventy inmates of an insane asylum at Norman, Okla., were killed in a fire which destroyed that institution April 13.

On May 1 the Savannah liner City of Athens was sunk in a collision with a French cruiser off the Delaware coast and 66 lives were lost. On May 18 nearly a hundred persons were killed by explosions in the Aetna Chemical plant near Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sixty-three persons, including well-known circus performers, perished when a circus train was wrecked at Gary, Ind., June 22. Fifty persons were killed by the collapse of a building at Sioux City, Ia., June 29.

A small factory explosion in England killed 50 persons July 1 and on the following day an explosion in a munitions plant near Syracuse, N. Y., killed 16. Eighty-five merrymakers perished when an excursion boat sank in the Illinois river July 5. A hundred persons were killed in a collision between two trains, near Nashville, Tenn., July 9.

A tornado swept a part of Minnesota August 21, killing 50 persons at Tyler and Connors.

On October 6 the United States transport Otranto was sunk in collision off the Irish coast and 450 persons lost their lives. Four hundred were lost when the British mail boat Leinster was torpedoed and sunk October 13.

A series of terrific explosions in a shell-loading plant at Morgan, N. J., on October 3 killed 94 persons and destroyed a vast amount of property. A severe earthquake which caused the death of 150 persons was reported in Porto Rico October 11. Great forest fires raged in northeastern Minnesota during October. Many towns were destroyed and about 1,000 lives were lost. On October 25 the steamship Princess Sophia was wrecked on the Alaskan coast and 343 were lost.

Ninety-eight persons were killed November 1 in a wreck on the Brooklyn Rapid Transit lines. On November 21, about 1,500 persons were reported killed by the explosion of German munition trains en route from Belgium to Germany.

One of the most unusual cases in maritime history was that of the United States navy collier Cyclops, which disappeared at sea while bound from the West Indies to an American Atlantic port. Announcement was made April 14 that the boat, with 293 persons on board, was a month overdue. Not a single trace of the boat or its passengers and crew was ever found, and the fate of the vessel is a complete mystery.

CHAPTER XII.

Something Carolyn May Wishes to Know.

Carolyn May's heart was filled with trouble.

This was the result of her first talk with the old sailor. Not from him, nor from anybody else, did Carolyn May get any direct information that the sailor had been aboard the Dunraven on her fatal voyage. But his story awoke in the child's breast doubts and longings, uncertainties and desires that had lain dormant for many weeks.

Uncle Joe and Aunty Rose loved her and were kind to her. But that feeling of "emptiness" that had at first so troubled Carolyn May was returning.

She began to droop. Keen-eyed Aunty Rose discovered this physical change very quickly.

"She's just like a droopy chicken," declared the good woman, "and, goodness knows, I have seen enough of them."

So, as a stimulant and a preventive of "droopiness," Aunty Rose prescribed boneset tea, "plenty of it."

Three times a day Carolyn May was dosed with boneset tea. How long the child's stomach would have endured under this treatment will never be known. Carolyn May got no better, that was sure; but one day something happened.

Winter had moved on in its usual frosty and snowy way. Carolyn May had kept up all her interests—after a fashion.

Benjamin Hardy had gone to Adams' camp to work. It seemed he could use a peavy, or canthook, pretty well, having done something besides sailing in his day. Tim, the hackman, worked at logging in the winter months, too. He usually went past the Stagg place with a team four times each day.

There was something Carolyn May wished to ask Benjamin Hardy, but she did not want anybody else to know what it was—not even Uncle Joe or Aunty Rose. Once in the fall and before the snow came she had ridden as far as Adams' camp with Mr. Parlow. He had gone there for some hickory wood.

But, now, to ride on the empty sled going in and on top of the load of logs coming out of the forest, Carolyn May felt sure, would be much more exciting. She mentioned her desire to Uncle Joe on a Friday evening.

"Well, now, if it's pleasant, I don't see anything to forbid. Do you, Aunty Rose?" Mr. Stagg returned.

"I presume Tim will take the best of care of her," the woman said. "Maybe, getting out more in the air will make her look less peaked, Joseph Stagg."

The excitement of preparing to go to the camp the next morning brought the roses into Carolyn May's cheeks and made her eyes sparkle. When Tim, the hackman, went into town with his first load he was forewarned by Aunty Rose that he would have company going back.

"Pitcher of George Washington!" exclaimed Tim. "The boys will near 'bout take a holiday."

There was but one woman in the camp, Judy Mason. She lived in one of the log huts with her husband. He was a sawyer, and Judy did the men's washing.

Benjamin Hardy was pleased, indeed, to see his little friend again.

"You come with me, please," she whispered to the old seaman after dinner. "You can smoke. You haven't got to go back to work yet, and Tim is only just loading his sled. So we can talk."

"I've Been to Near Drownin' Myself, That They Thought I Was Dead When I Was Hauled Inboard.

"Aye, aye, little miss. What'll we talk about?" queried Benjamin cautiously, for he remembered that he was to be very circumspect in his conversation with her.

"I want you to tell me something, Benjamin," she said.

"Sail ahead, matey," he responded with apparent heartiness, filling his pipe meanwhile.

"Why, Benjamin—you must know you know, for you've been to sea so much—Benjamin, I want to know if it hurts much to be drownd-ed?"

"Hurts much?" gasped the old seaman.

"Yes, sir. Do people that get drownd-ed feel much pain? Is it a sufferin' way to die? I want to know, Benjamin, 'cause my papa and mamma died that way," continued the child, choking a little. "It does seem as though I'd just got to know."

"Aye, aye," muttered the man. "I see. An' I kin tell ye, Car'lyn May, as clos't as anybody kin. I've been so near drownin' myself that they thought I was dead when I was hauled inboard.

"Comin' back from drowning is a whole lot worse than bein' drowned. You take it from me."

"Well," sighed Carolyn May, "I'm glad to know that. It's bothered me a good deal. If my mamma and papa had to be dead, maybe that was the nicest way for them to go."

* * * * * * *

Since Joseph Stagg had listened to the rambling tale of the sailor regarding the sinking of the Dunraven, he had borne the fate of his sister and her husband much in mind.

He had come no nearer to deciding what to do with the apartment in New York and its furnishings.

After listening to Benjamin Hardy's story, the hardware dealer felt less inclined than before to close up the affairs of Carolyn May's small "estate." Not that he for a moment believed that there was a possibility of Hannah and her husband being alive. Five months had passed. In these days of wireless telegraph and fast sea traffic such a thing could not be possible. The imagination of the practical hardware merchant could not visualize it.

One day when Carolyn May was visiting Mrs. Gormley Chet burst in quite unexpectedly, for it was not yet mid-afternoon.

"Mr. Stagg has let me off to take Carolyn May slidin'. The ice ain't goin' to be safe in the cove for long now. Spring's in the air o'ready. Both brooks are runnin' full."

Carolyn May was delighted. Although the sky was overcast and a storm threatening when they got down on the ice, neither the boy nor the little girl gave the weather a second thought. Nor had Mr. Stagg considered the weather when he had allowed Chet to leave the store that afternoon.

Chet strapped on his skates, and then settled the little girl firmly on her sled, with Prince riding behind.

The boy harnessed himself with the long towrope and skated away from the shore, dragging the sled after him at a brisk pace.

"Oh, my!" squealed Carolyn May, "there isn't anybody else on the ice."

"We won't run into nobody, then," laughed the boy.

It was too misty outside the cove to see the open water; but it was there, and Chet knew it as well as anybody. He had no intention of taking any risks—especially with Carolyn May in his charge.

The wind blew out of the cove, too. As they drew away from the shelter of the land they felt its strength.

Naturally, neither the boy nor the little girl—and surely not the dog—looked back toward the land. Otherwise, they would have seen the snow flurry that swept down over the town and quickly hid it from the cove.

Chet was skating his very swiftest. Carolyn May was screaming with delight. Prince barked joyfully. And, suddenly, in a startling fashion, they came to a fissure in the ice!

The boy darted to one side, heeled on his right skate, and stopped. He had jerked the sled aside, too, yelling to Carolyn May to "hold fast!" But Prince was flung from it, and scrambled over the ice, barking loudly.

"Oh, dear me!" cried Carolyn May. "You stopped too quick, Chet Gormley. Goodness! There's a hole in the ice!"

"And I didn't see it till we was almost in it," acknowledged Chet. "It's more'n a hole. Why! there's a great field of ice broke off and sailin' out into the lake."

"Oh, my!" gasped the little girl.

The boy knew at once that he must be careful in making his way home with the little girl. Having seen one great fissure in the ice, he might come upon another. It seemed to him as though the ice under his feet was in motion. In the distance was the sound of a reverberating crash that could mean but one thing. The ice in the cove was breaking up!

The waters of the two brooks were pouring down into the cove. Spring had really come, and the annual freshet was likely now to force the ice entirely out of the cove and open the way for traffic in a few hours.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Chapel Bell.

If Joseph Stagg had obeyed the precept of his little niece on this particular afternoon and had been "looking up," instead of having his nose in the big ledger, making out monthly statements, he might have discovered the coming storm in season to withdraw his permission to Chet to take Carolyn May out on the ice.

It was always dark enough in the little back office in winter for the hardware dealer to have a lamp burning. So he did not notice the snow flurry that had taken Sunrise Cove in its arms until he chanced to walk out to the front of the store for needed exercise.

"I declare to man, it's snowing!" muttered Joseph Stagg. "Thought we'd got through with that for this season."

He opened the store door. There was a chill, clammy wind, and the snow was damp and packed quickly under foot.

"Hum! If that Chet Gormley were here now, he might be of some use for once," thought Mr. Stagg.

Suddenly he bethought him of the errand that had taken the boy away from the store.

"Hey, Stagg!" shouted a shopkeeper from over the way, who had likewise come to the door, "did you hear that?"

"Hear what?" asked Joseph Stagg, puzzled.

"There she goes again! That's ice, old man. She's breaking up. We'll have spring with us in no time now."

The reverberating crash that had startled Chet Gormley had startled Joseph Stagg as well.

"My goodness!" gasped the hardware dealer, and he started instantly away from the store, bareheaded as he was, without locking the door behind him—something he had never done before, since he had established himself in business on the main street of Sunrise Cove.

Just why he ran he could scarcely have explained. Of course, the children had not gone out in this snowstorm! Mrs. Gormley—little sense as he believed the seamstress possessed—would not have allowed them to venture.

"Where's That Plagued Boy?"

Yet, why had Chet not returned?

He quickened his pace. He was running—slipping and sliding over the wet snow—when he turned into the street on which his store boy and his widowed mother lived.

Mrs. Gormley saw him coming from the windows of the tiny front room.

Mr. Stagg plunged into the little house, head down, and belligerent.

"Where's that plagued boy?" he demanded. "Don't tell me he's taken Hannah's Car'lyn out on the cove in this storm!"

"But—you told him he could!" wailed the widow.

"What if I did? I didn't know 'twas going to snow like this, did I?"

"But it wasn't snowin' when they went," said Mrs. Gormley, plucking up some little spirit. "I'm sure it wasn't Chetwood's fault. Oh, dear!"

"Woman," groaned Joseph Stagg, "it doesn't matter whose fault it is—or if it's anybody's fault. The mischief's done. The ice is breaking up. It's drifting out of the inlet."

Just at this moment an unexpected voice broke into the discussion.

"Are you positive they went out on the cove to slide, Mrs. Gormley?"

"Oh, yes, I be, Mandy," answered the seamstress. "Chet said he was goin' there, and what Chet says he'll do, he always does."

"Then the ice has broken away and they have been carried out into the lake," groaned Mr. Stagg.

Mandy Parlow came quickly to the little hall.

"Perhaps not, Joseph," she said, speaking directly to the hardware dealer, "It may be the storm. It snows so fast they would easily get turned around—be unable to find the shore."

Another reverberating crash echoed from the cove. Mrs. Gormley wrung her hands.

"Oh, my Chet! Oh, my Chet!" she wailed. "He'll be drowned!"

"He won't be, if he's got any sense," snapped Mr. Stagg. "I'll get some men and we'll go after them."

"Call the dog, Joseph Stagg. Call the dog," advised Miss Amanda.

"Heh? Didn't Prince go with 'em?"

"Oh, yes, he did," wailed Mrs. Gormley.

Seen and Heard In Indiana

Indianapolis.—Reform of the ballot is aimed at by the board of managers of the Indiana State Bar association in one of two amendments to the state constitution proposed to be submitted to the coming session of the legislature. One amendment provides for equal suffrage, elimination of persons as voters who are not citizens and educational qualifications for voters. The second provides for the teaching of English in all schools and institutions of learning in the state; for a general and uniform system of common schools and for furtherance by all suitable means of moral, intellectual, scientific, industrial, agricultural and vocational improvement. These amendments were framed by the committee on jurisprudence of the association.

Indianapolis.—Dr. Harry E. Barnard, state food administrator, notified all county food administrators of the order of the federal food administration discontinuing all special milling rules. The communication to the county administrators explains that the food administration will have no further control of this phase of the food problem, except to prohibit profiteering. It is also announced that control of cheese and butter will be retained until the end of the present storage season, or until circumstances warrant. Warning against removing "cold-storage" tags from products and selling them as fresh is made by Doctor Barnard. [illegible]ecution for profiteering will result in cases detected, he said.

Indianapolis.—The annual meeting of the City and Town Superintendents' association, originally planned for January, but postponed for various reasons, will be held here February 6, 7 and 8. About 200 educators are expected to be present and the principal features of the program will be addresses by Marcel Morand, chairman of the French high commission in the United States, and Dr. William Low Bryan, president of Indiana university.

Aurora.—There probably has never been a time in the history of the tobacco market when both producer and buyer of tobacco were as much at sea as they are now concerning the price range for the 1918 crop. Speculators have already appeared in this part of the state and have examined the various crops, but are not making offers and to open and start a range of prices. The producers expect to receive 25 to 40 cents a pound. Brokers put the range at 20 to 30 cents.

Indianapolis.—The tentative schedule of salaries of county treasurers of Indiana, as they probably will be set out in the fee and salary revision bill which is being drawn by Gilbert H. Hendren, state examiner of the state board of accounts, was made public following a call on Mr. Hendren by a committee from the County Treasurers' association of Indiana, which was in session here.

Terre Haute.—Officials of the United Mine Workers of District 11 and coal operators are co-operating in an effort to place in the mines about 5,000 men, who were at work in the mines before going into some branch of military service in the world war. Owing to changed conditions in the coal industry many difficulties are in the way of putting them all back in fuel production work.

Greensburg.—That Frank Baker of this county has set a high standard for fancy cattle is shown by the shipment of a prize Aberdeen bull to the animal husbandry department of Purdue university. This bull is of the Blackbird family of Angus cattle and won first in the two-year-old and under three class at the last Indiana state fair.

St. Petersburg, Fla.—Indiana tourists spending the winter here have formed a society and have elected officers for the year. R. H. Donaldson of Michigantown was elected president, and B. W. Quick of the same city vice president. B. E. Ruck of Warsaw was chosen secretary and Mrs. Emma Wilkinson of Hancock county treasurer.

Greenfield.—At public sales held in this county farmers have paid as high as $1.70 a bushel for corn delivered and $1.45 in the field and gather it themselves. These prices are attributed to the large number of hogs being fed and the fact that feeders can afford $2 corn if hogs are sold at $17.50.

Tipton.—George Warner, living in the western part of this county, has lost 56 head of fine hogs that averaged 180 pounds with lung trouble. His loss amounts to more than $2,000.

Terre Haute.—Health records here show that in the last three months influenza-pneumonia has been fatal to 214 persons in this city.

Owensville.—Fifty hogs died from cholera in this township in ten days. Farmers are urged to vaccinate their hogs.

Indianapolis. — Indianapolis will give a fitting welcome to the soldiers of the One Hundred and Thirty-seventh artillery, regiments when they arrive in this city on the last lap of their journey back to civil life from the war camps of France. Mayor Jewett expressed the feeling that animates Indianapolis and all of Hoosierdom when he said: "Every citizen will want to join in the demonstration of welcome." Governor Goodrich is expected to announce plans that will give the welcome a state-wide character.

Indianapolis. — The winter wheat acreage seeded in Indiana this year shows an increase of 22 per cent over last fall's seeding and makes a total of 2,891,000 acres—the largest ever put out in the state—according to the December crop report for Indiana issued by George C. Bryant, field agent of the bureau of crop estimates, United States department of agriculture. The acreage seeded for the entire United States is 40,027,000 acres, an increase over last year of 15.9 per cent, with a condition figure of 98.5. The weather conditions during the fall have been exceptionally favorable to the winter wheat crop in this state. With good seed in all localities and the liberal use of fertilizer the crop goes into the winter with the highest condition figures (101 per cent) ever reported at this time of the year. Hessian fly has been reported from only nine counties, four of which were in the north part of the state and five in the south part. Precipitation generally was at the proper time and kept the plants growing vigorously, and they are now well stooled and spread close to the ground with a strong, healthy root. The rye acreage for the state has also been slightly increased over last year and amounts to 427,000 acres. The condition is nearly as good as the winter wheat (100 per cent). Wages paid to farm hands have increased approximately only 15 per cent over 1917 for work by the year, and 25 per cent for work by the day.

Winchester.—Clifford C. Fisher of Union City has a scientific method of feeding cattle on his farm in Wayne township, which has produced results beyond anything in this part of the state. To the recent stock show, in Chicago, he shipped a carload of 23 head, culled them to 15 head when he arrived, and sold the eight head on the open market for 20 cents a pound, a record-breaking price for cattle on foot. For the 15 selects he got fifth prize in competition with 34 exhibits. The cattle were of the Hereford stock. They were sold at 25½ cents a pound, bringing $4,176.35, or $278.42 a head.

Hammond.—Edward A. Gross, a justice of the peace of Gary, was sentenced to six months in jail and fined $500 by Judge A. B. Anderson in the federal court for violation of the liquor laws. Witnesses testified that Gross had a saloon in one part of the building and his justice office in another. He fined men in his court who became intoxicated in his saloon. He was found guilty of conspiracy in bringing liquor by wholesale into the state.

Petersburg.—Thousands of bushels of corn that now lie beneath the waters of White river will be fed to hogs as soon as the river recedes. If the corn is fed to the hogs before it sours, much of its food value will be retained. White river farmers are arranging to have feeders dispose of this corn before the good corn is fed. Heretofore this corn was sold to distilling companies, but since the distilleries have gone out of business there is no market for it.

Muncie.—Eastern Indiana farmers took advantage of the warm December weather to do their "spring plowing." All that will be necessary then in order to make the ground suitable for seed will be to harrow it, farmers say. Others say if they plow their fields now, rains and snows that are to come will pack the ground and they will have to do their plowing over.

Indianapolis.—Reports received by the state board of health last week indicate that the influenza epidemic in the state is subsiding rapidly. The total number of cases reported during the week was 6,502. Twenty-two counties reported 895 new cases. During the time the disease was making its most serious inroads as high as 3,000 cases were reported in a day.

Indianapolis. — Representatives of the Illinois Horticultural society, Illinois apple growers and the Chicago chamber of commerce met here with the Indiana Horticultural society to consider the feasibility of the states of the middle West uniting for a big midwest or possibly national apple show, to take the place of the various state shows.

Brazil.—Since the influenza epidemic in Clay county made the work of soliciting for the united war work fund inadvisable, the united war work committee petitioned the Clay county council to make an appropriation of $34,500, the county's apportionment. This was done and the amount will be collected in taxes, each taxpayer paying according to his assessed valuation.

Indianapolis.—An eight-hour day for women and children in industries of the state, no night work, one day rest out of seven and one-half day holiday each week are expected to be advocated in legislation to be presented to the coming session of the state legislature by welfare workers in the state.

Jeffersonville. — The acreage of wheat in Clark county, according to H. A. Stevens, county agricultural agent, is 5 to 8 per cent above normal. The condition is good. While the recent warm spell caused buds to swell, Mr. Stevens believes that little damage has been done.

Indianapolis.—Efforts to organize the bakers of Indiana under conditions similar to those obtaining in the last year, when bakers were subject to rules of the federal food administration, were started here at the meeting of Indiana bakers with members of the state bakers' advisory committee and Harry E. Barnard, state food and drug commissioner and federal food administrator for Indiana. More than 300 bakers attended the meeting.

Indianapolis.—Harry A. Hendrickson was appointed county attorney to succeed Emsley W. Johnson by the county commissioners.

Backache? Rheumatism?

Those of us who are past middle age are prone to eat too much meat and in consequence deposit lime-salts in the arteries, veins and joints. We often suffer from twinges of rheumatism or lumbago, sometimes from gout, swollen hands or feet. There is no longer the slightest need of this, however, as the new prescription, "Anuric," is bound to give immediate results as it is many times more potent than lithia, in ridding the impoverished blood of its poisons by way of the kidneys. It can be obtained at almost any drug store, by simply asking for "Anuric" for kidneys or backache. It will overcome such conditions as rheumatism, dropsical swellings, cold extremities, scalding and burning urine and sleeplessness due to constant arising from bed at night.

Send to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for a 10c. trial package.

MADERA, CAL.—"I recommend Doctor Pierce's Anuric very highly. I have suffered for the last three years with catarrh of the bladder, having tried every remedy I heard of but without relief. I saw Anuric advertised in the paper, and like a drowning man grabbing at a straw I thought I would try it also, which I did with great success, as it relieved me almost immediately, before I had taken all of the trial package, and having great confidence in the remedy I immediately sent to the drug store and bought a full-size package. I can say to all suffering from any disease of the kidneys or uric acid troubles, try this remedy and suffer no longer. I have great faith in Dr. Pierce's remedies."—S. P. RUMSLEY.

Fifteen Million Tons of Shipping

Building 15,000,000 tons of shipping is the big job laid out for American Shipyards. It will take years to do this. Men working in shipyards are assured of steady jobs if they make good. This great fleet of ships must be built. The United States is going to become the first maritime nation of the world.

We need men accustomed to out-of-doors work to help us build ships. The pay is set by the Emergency Fleet Corporation under direct Government control, and is higher than ever before in the history of the industry. Do not hesitate because you have never worked in a shipyard before. We will train you for some good job and will pay you well while you are learning.

It will take us years to build our share of 15,000,000 tons.

A shipyard is the ideal place to make good money this winter. Get in touch with us, either by calling at yard or by writing to us immediately. Some of our best jobs are open right now. Great Lakes Engineering Works, River Rouge and Detroit, Mich.—Adv.

and it is sure worth while to see it. It is pretty badly wrecked in places but I can imagine that it was a great place before the war. This is one of the so called under-ground cities of France and I would like to see the under-ground section, but have not been able to so far. Some of the boys visited it today and they have regular streets and car lines there. It resembles in a sense a large Arcade buildings with its little shops on each side. There are no shops there now, the civil population having all left long ago, but this place is used as quarters for French soldiers. We are building Barracks here now presumably for store houses or shelter for the returning population. We see thousands of returning prisoners released by the Germans, returning through this place to their homes.

How is everyone at home now? Hope they are as well as I am and then I will not need to worry. I got a letter from Forrest the other day stating that he had received his commission, but suppose he has written home about that. He is well as usual. Got letters from Lefbe and Stella and they both seem to like their work and like Washington fine. Well I will have to close or this will turn out to be a novel instead of a letter. Hoping you are well and see many more November 24ths. I remain

Dear Dad:—

As this is Fathers Day, and no censor's eyes read what we write will tell you all that I know until I get home.

As far as we know the war is over and we all are very glad of it.

We landed in France on the 5th. day of July and went up to the barracks just out of Breast and stayed there five days, and then started for the front. The first front that we were on was not very active, but came closer to getting killed there than any of the other fronts that we were on. We were there about forty days and when we left we all supposed that we were going back for a rest, but when we arrived at our destination we were informed that we would go "over the top" at 5:30 A. M. on the morning of the 26th. of September.

We went over and drove the Germans for about fifteen miles and we were in battle five days and six nights before we were relieved by the 28th. Division. From there we were sent to the worst front in France for gas and held the lines for ten days. Then were sent to Belgium and had the sector between the Belgians and English and had a five days battle here and then the armistice was signed and all the firing ceased. We took hundreds of prisoners on both drives.

I can tell you now where I am and every thing I know but when I am coming home and that is something that I do not know. I am sitting in a Belgian's home writing at their table and the family of five are sitting around trying to make us understand them. I like them better than the French people and it was an awful sight to see the refugees coming back and the Germans drove the Belgians out of their own dugouts and lots of them were killed by our artillery fire.

Part of our regiment went to Brussels to parade before the King and Queen of Belgium but I was not lucky enough to go.

I think we are going back into France in the morning, we will go on the train but I do not know how long that it is going to take us or how far in France, but we are all hoping we are on our way home. Well dad I know what war is for I have been under shell fire and machine gun fire and believe me, one has a very funny feeling. I have a nice souvenir to give you when I get back. It is a watch taken off of a German officer and it was given to me by one of my officers and he was killed on this last drive about twenty minutes after he went "over the top."

Well dad take good care of yourself and I may get to see you and mother soon. I am very glad that I am here and believe me I can look any of them in the eye at home when I do get back and not be ashamed for I have done my bit. We are well clothed and fed well but there were times we could not not get food to the men as the shells were falling too thick, and they would not let us go with the kitchen. I will be able to tell you more later than I can write for this is all of my paper, so good night Dad. I remain as ever your son,

Dear Parents:—

Received your ever welcome letter today, was very glad to hear from you. You say you would like to know of my trip so I will try and tell you some thing about it. We left New York Sept. 17th. on the ship Monganui, the water was not rough for several days. I did not feed the fish but sometimes thought it would be better if I could. The nearer we got to the English coast the rougher the water got, waves would dash up on the deck and sometimes the boat would rock so bad we would slide from one side of the boat to the other. We were on the boat twelve days, it sure did seem like a long time without seeing land. We slept in hammocks so it did not seem so bad after night. We landed at Glascow, Scotland, on September 29th., here we took a train for Romsey, England. The coaches were much different than in the United States. They were partitioned off just room for eight in each compartment with doors along the side of the coach. We rode about sixteen hours. The country was very beautiful, brick houses, hedge fences good stone roads with the fields as green as springtime. We were in Romsey but two days, then we marched to another camp at Southampton, about eight miles away, here we remained but one night, got on the boat again to cross the English Channel, this was very rough but it took only five hours to cross it. All troops were taken across after night and the little boat we were on was so crowded we could hardly find room to sit down. We landed at Cherbourg, France, ate a lunch and started for camp about four miles and back in the evening to board the train for Vitrey, France. We had coaches about two-thirds of the way then we piled in box cars about half the size of ours at home, with forty men to a car, this was crowded but we did not have much farther to go. We landed at Vitrey on the 7th. of October. Here we lived in stone buildings and drilled every day but Saturday and Sunday. There is a Catholic church in nearly every little village, the one in Vitrey was said to have been built in 1060. Everything is so far behind time. We now live in Preigney, only about five miles from where we were. Everything is the same in the different towns.

In our drilling with trench mortar guns, we had them mounted on little carts drawn by six men, would go out to the trenches for firing and back at night, we would be so tired and ready for bed by seven o'clock. But now our drilling is over, just take a little road hike in the morning and after dinner. Well I will close with best wishes to all and hoping to see you soon.

Good bye

Dear Folks:—

I am getting along fine and dandy. How are all of you people getting along? I suppose the "Flu" scare is about over around there. I have not heard of a case of it over here. It must be an awful disease and very severe for I see that many people in the states have succumbed to the disease.

Well I guess the old war is over for all time and I am sure glad of it. I have been before Metz for the past six weeks and it sure was a hot place while it lasted. I have been taking very long walks and doing a lot of exploring since they quit fighting. I have been in many dugouts of the old Hindenburg line and before Metz. I could get a train load of German souvenirs if I had some way to carry them. There is some wonderful sights to see over here and you cannot imagine how awful the ruins of some of the villages looks. Old Sherman was right and war was a thousand times worse now than it was then. I am going back to a rest camp in a few days and rest for a few days and then move up on the Rhine. I don't know when I will get back to the states, I hope its soon.

November 11, 1918.

Dear Mother:—

Received your letter of October 13th., was certainly glad to hear from you. Well this was one wonderful day. The last shot was fired at eleven o'clock today. I guess it will be safe to tell you that I have been at the front for over a month. I am glad that the war is over, the people in the states will never realize what some of the boys had to go through over here.

I will take my hat off to any man that has gone over the top. It sure is awful and you have to have a heart of steel to be able to face machine guns and high explosive. The worst thing is cold steel, it will put fear in any man. I was never up where the real fighting was going on, but was always 4 to 10 miles behind the lines. I was continually in the range of big guns and that was enough for me. They have drove me to a dugout a couple of times.

Where I am located now, I am surrounded by many large guns and the "Bertha" that used to shell Paris has nothing on some of the guns. You will probably read about some of them in the papers in a few days. They sure did cut loose last night and this forenoon. It was inspiring to watch them. They did not reply much to us. I guess they were to busy pondering over some of our big projectiles. All firing ceased at 11 o'clock and every body was happy. I hope we don't have to fire another shot. I think I will be back with you all in three or four months. That won't seem long.

You don't need to send me those papers as I get all the news hours before you do. We copy American French and German press at our station and we get all of the news right off of the bat.

I hear you are having wonderful weather over there. It is just the opposite here. It has rained quite a bit the last couple of weeks and it makes it very disagreeable.

A Happy New Year

On the threshold of another New Year we want to pause to thank our friends and patrons for the very liberal business accorded us during the past year. As one and all you will soon turn the corner into the New Year, look back a minute over the road you have been traveling the past year. Have you saved anything for the "rainy day" that never fails to come? Have you been true to yourself and your family? If not, once more before you step out into the pure New Year call at our bank and make a deposit, if only of one dollar and in twelve more short months take another retrospective glance and see how much pleased you will be with yourself and with the way your dollars have multiplied from the one little seed you planted in our bank, January 1, 1918. We wish every young man in the community would start a bank account with the New Year. It would not mean much to us but it would mean lots to them. How many will make the experiment? Have your idle money drawing interest for you on the first day of the glad New Year, 1919. This is our advice and like salvation, it's free. Try it. While the feeling of good fellowship is in the air and good resolutions are being made for the New Year, would it not be a good idea to resolve that you will save more money during the coming year than during the past one; then come in and open an account with us and then watch it grow.

FROM The BOYS in SERVICE

Bouillionville, France
December 11, 1918

My Dear Parents and All:

Will answer your two letters just received this A. M., one dated November 13th. and the other November 21st., found me fine and dandy. Trust this to find you all feeling the same. We are having lots of rain again,-Texas mud isn't in it with this. We are working now salvaging in Argonna Forest, Thiacourt and villages around Metz. I have been on special duty at the Rail-head, this is where we draw rations for A. B. C. D. E. F. and Motar train Co's. 5th. regiment. We have plenty to eat and sleep in houses, barns, cowsheds, chicken houses and any old hole with room enough to get a bunk in it.

About the first thing done when moving to a new place is to build us bunks to sleep on, then various details are assigned certain work to be done, such as taking up mines salvaging ammunition, clothing, equipment, repairing railroads, bridges, traps left by Huns, etc. Not hard work just simply to keep us busy at something until developments warrant us to leave France. It is rumored that we are going to Luxemburg, Germany. Not official as yet. We are still of the 2nd Army Cps. 7th. Divsion and we were at the front twenty-six days before the armistice was signed. I see that some of the divisions that were at the front at the time of secession of hostilities are being shipped back to the states, so we may still have a chance to hunt rabbits this winter. The dog sure does look fine, I can just see him go to it. I see several Belgian rabbits here but these the German troops raised and every Hun dugout has its rabbit nest house.

Was sorry to hear that Clark Scholes was wounded, would like to know the particulars. I never pass a grave without reading the tag on the little cross that marks the place where our boys lay. This particular sector is where the hardest fighting took place, also a large number of Americans were taken prisoners. Am billeted on hillside where the Germans have built dugouts back some forty feet and seven to eight feet high. Several of these along the crest of hill are bomb proof and have gas curtains. Here they would go when our artillery put over barrages. We have lived in all kinds of dug-outs, rat holes any where to seek cover from shell fire and shrapnell. But the game of chasing the Hun is over and we are all awaiting orders to see who is to be the first ones back home again. Would like to see Germany, too, now that the game of hitting shell holes is over, seems rather quiet not to hear G. I. cans whistle and tear up the earth, to leave a shell hole large enough to bury a dozen horses and more.

The Frogs are anxious to get back to their homes and begin anew. Troops are continually moving to and from the German frontier, and from the looks I think this Division will be in Germany by the time you receive this letter. Will close now, so good bye, write soon.

No More Drug Store Whiskey

Drug stores in Indiana are not allowed to sell whiskey in any form even under a doctor's prescription, according to an opinion given by Ele Stansbury, state attorney general. L. Ert Slack, United States district attorney, agreed with Stansbury's interpretation.

Drug stores throughout the state have been selling whiskey on a doctor's prescription since the prohibition law became effective.

"The law is vague on this point" said Stansbury, "and a test case will probably be necessary to settle the question definitely.

"Many doctors are now making a business of writing prescriptions and drug stores of filling them. They are worse than saloons. I believe they violate the prohibition law."

The attorney general held that the only form of alcohol which drug stores could sell was pure grain, which is not palatable.

Willie Goings, who lives two miles west of St. Joe, had some bad luck Sunday evening. While about the barn doing his chores one of his horses kicked a board loose from the stall and run it into the abdomen. Mr. Goings went to Sherman Rickett's immediately for help and by the time they returned the horse was dead. The loss is considerable as Willie is just getting started in farming. The horse sold at the Albert Sherer farm for $210.

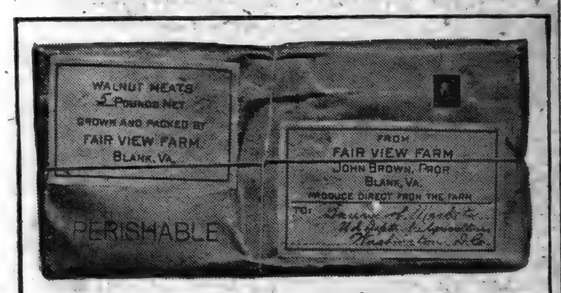
GETTING AND HOLDING CUSTOMERS BY MAIL



A Parcel-Post Package Well Wrapped and Addressed.

CUSTOMERS FOR FARM PRODUCE

Most Satisfactory Way Is to Write to Friends and Relatives Seeking Trade.

PROPER BUSINESS METHODS

Newspaper Advertising, Circulars and Bulletin Boards Helpful to Farmer in Securing Purchasers—Stationery Helps.

For producers who wish to market by parcel post the most satisfactory way of finding customers is to write to friends, relatives or acquaintances in cities, seeking their trade. Purchasers, on the other hand, often can locate reliable producers by correspondence with friends, relatives of acquaintances in the country. More than 75 per cent of the produce being marketed by parcel post in a number of cities in which investigations have been made is sent by persons who obtained their customers through friends, relatives or acquaintances, according to specialists of the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture.

This method of establishing business relationship is especially recommended for the general farmer who has a limited amount of produce. Those who wish to market a great deal of produce by parcel post may find it necessary to obtain customers by personally soliciting strangers or through advertising in newspapers and by other means.

Information received from persons who have advertised farm produce for sale indicates that usually advertising is not profitable for the general farmer, but often gives satisfactory results to the producer who specializes in some product that can be shipped throughout the year. Advertisements should be short and should give a description of the goods, with the prices, and the name and address of the person advertising. In some cities the Sunday edition of a newspaper gives better results than the daily edition. The person who advertises must offer a product that is wanted by the persons who read the paper at the time the product is advertised, in the places where the paper has a circulation. In other words, he must know what to advertise, when to advertise, and where to advertise.

Must Use Circulars Carefully.

Form letters, circulars or cards sent to a selected list of persons have been suggested often as means of obtaining customers for produce by parcel post. The cost of obtaining customers by circularizing is often great, and unless the names of persons to whom the circulars are sent are selected very carefully this method of obtaining customers cannot be especially recommended.

Customers may be obtained by making a personal canvass in a selected neighborhood in a city. The neighborhood should be one which is not supplied with a great many markets or green grocery stores in order that the competition may not be as keen as it would be in a neighborhood that has excellent marketing facilities. A suburban district of homes with good incomes offers a good field in which to solicit trade. In many such districts the delivery service of the groceries is not as satisfactory as in the city.

If a producer's farm is on or near a much-traveled road an attractive farm bulletin board placed conspicuously near the road is a help to both producer and consumer in making business contact. Many city dwellers now travel far out into the country by automobile, and this fact can be turned to account in securing customers by using a bulletin board. This method will be especially useful on clean, well-kept farms. The statements on the board should give the articles for sale, together with their prices, delivered to the purchaser's door by parcel post, and the main items should be in lettering large enough to be read quickly.

Stationery a Help.

If a farmer expects to develop a business of selling produce to strangers he will find it advisable to have printed stationery bearing the name of the farm, with envelopes to match. If the farm is not named an appropriate name should be selected. A simple, though attractive and businesslike letterhead can be printed without much cost. It should give the name and location of the farm, the farmer's name, and a simple statement of the business. Elaborate and highly colored letterheads embellished with illustrations of buildings, fruits or animals should be avoided.

Blank statement forms or invoices to fill in and inclose with shipments should be supplied. Persons receiving produce by mail wish to know the price of the shipment, and by the use of printed statement forms the shipper can furnish this information without much trouble.

Labeling Parcels.

Each parcel must bear the name and address of the shipper, the name and address of the person for whom intended, and the nature of the contents, such as "Fragile" or "Perishable." As tags frequently are torn off, it is best to have this information written or stamped directly on the outer wrapper or container. If the only mark of identity of producer and consumer is on a tag and the tag is lost, the parcel can neither be delivered nor returned to the sender.

Producers who have business enough to justify them may secure gummed labels worded somewhat as follows:

From Fair View Farm,
John Brown, Proprietor,
Blank, Virginia.
PERISHABLE.
EGGS.

The wording may be changed to suit the product shipped, changing "Eggs" to "Poultry," "Butter," or "Vegetables," and "Perishable" to "Fragile," as the case may require.

These labels, if properly applied, should not come off. They will serve as an advertisement and may result in inquiries from other customers.

Business Relations With Customers.

Once contact has been made and shipping begun it is important that proper business relations be established and maintained, for on these depend success. The difficulty frequently met in obtaining the first order makes it important for the producer to use businesslike methods to retain the trade that he secures.

Whether a person is successful in parcel-post marketing depends largely on his adaptability to this work. If routine and detailed work is distasteful to him he may never learn how to keep up a business relationship. Thousands of persons who have been successful in obtaining customers have been unsuccessful in keeping them.

The most important feature in a business relationship is a square deal. Good grading of produce, strict business honesty, prompt attention to correspondence and orders, and satisfactory adjustment of complaints are needed. The consumer as well as the producer should do his part in these matters.

DIRECT DEALING

Housewives appreciate receiving farm produce which they know to be fresh. Many farmers within 150 miles of cities have regular supplies of high-grade produce, the quality of which they can guarantee. The parcel post offers a means of direct dealing between producer and consumer, with profit to both.

Parcel-post shipments are increasing in number, though probably they always will affect only a small percentage of the farm produce that goes to market. Dealing by parcel post succeeds if the farmer is careful to keep up the quality of his produce, packs it safely and attractively, and meets his engagements promptly—always supposing that the consumer also observes business methods in the transaction.

The United States department of agriculture's Farmers' Bulletin 922, "Parcel Post Business Methods," gives detailed suggestions regarding means of obtaining customers and methods of carrying on business, with samples of suitable letterheads, bills, order blanks and other business forms.

FARMER BROWN A PRACTICAL MAN

Knows He Must Keep in Touch With Agricultural Publications to Be Up-to-Date.

DOES NOT NEGLECT ANIMALS

Takes Advantage of Advice and Help Offered by Federal and State Agricultural Agencies—Instructions to His Son.

Old man Brown is known as a man of ripe experience and sound judgment. He is a successful farmer of the practical rather than the "book" type, yet he knows the value of books in his business and that to be up to date he must keep in touch with agricultural publications. He is also wide awake enough to know that the United States department of agriculture and the state and county agricultural agencies are not mere academic institutions, but are in the business primarily to help the practical farmer. Hence he keeps himself informed of what they are doing and frequently takes advantage of the advice and help they offer.

At this particular time the old man's thoughts had been running on the health of his live stock, and none knows better than he the importance of having such matters strictly attended to. So it happened that one morning after breakfast he gave the following instructions to his son who was about to motor into town to do a batch of errands. The incident is here mentioned because there may be others who might get a profitable hint or two from Farmer Brown's directions. His directions were:

(1) "First of all, fix that leaky carburetor in the machine so you won't lose more gasoline before you start than it takes to carry you to town and back. You might get stalled on the way, and that would put you in a nice fix.

(2) "Don't forget to stop at the post office for my department of agriculture Farmers' Bulletin 957, as I am anxious to learn what causes these little warts on the heads of our pullets; they are not just right and, besides, the bulletin contains much other information about chicken diseases.

(3) "Stop at the drug store and get new needles and washers for your old blackleg vaccine syringe, or buy a new syringe, and don't wait for the county agent to do your vaccinating work for you, even though he is kind enough to offer to do the job; you know how to do the injecting as well as he, and, besides, that is not his work, he is only supposed to demonstrate how the work should be done. And while you are at the druggist's it wouldn't be a bad idea to get that prescription filled for our colicky stock, as Veterinarian Spath told you to do, then you wouldn't be obliged to call him away out here in the middle of the night to treat a simple case of bellyache.

(4) "If you should happen to meet Will Simmons in town and he says anything to you about your shooting at his sheep-killing dog, tell him, 'Yes, I shot at it and if the act is repeated it will be done again.'

(5) "By the way, you might stop to see Doctor Spath and find out whether the microscopic examination of the muscle sample which he took from the dead Hereford calf proved it to be just blackleg of that anthrax disease, as he said it was impossible to say definitely which disease it was and I guess our naked eyes are no better than his own; moreover, he ought to know better than we.

(6) "Just one more thing, if Doctor Spath says the disease is anthrax or anything other than blackleg, you better tell him to come out here and take charge of the doctoring, as we are not supposed to dabble in things we don't know about; you know they say that anthrax can be taken by human beings as well as animals, and the more quickly we get it stopped the better for all concerned."

AVOID TROUBLE

Farmers and animal husbandmen often can avoid serious trouble among their animals by making careful inquiries relative to the history of the animals they contemplate purchasing for introduction into their herds or flocks. The purchase of an animal lacking a clean bill of health from its birth until the time it is offered for sale, or of an animal from a herd or flock in which an infectious disease is known to have occurred, should be regarded as courting trouble.

Animals Spread Disease.

The medical profession has known for a long time that one of the menaces to which health is exposed is the infectious material often carried and unconsciously expelled by seemingly healthy persons and animals, but the true importance of this fact has begun to receive the wide recognition it merits only in recent years.

Today we know that many persons after recovery from typhoid fever continue to discharge typhoid germs from their bodies and that such persons cause numerous cases of typhoid fever unless they are properly controlled, and we know that exposure to diphtheria, even when it does not lead to the development of disease, means that the exposed individual often becomes a carrier of diphtheria germs, which are located in his throat, a region from which they are expelled in a way dangerous to the health of susceptible persons. And we also know that this same problem of seemingly healthy carriers and disseminators of disease germs must be given careful consideration because of its bearing on the health of our domestic animals.

The possibility that animals may become persistent carriers of disease germs is not limited to any one or any kind of disease.

Management of Calves.

With good pasturage the roughage portion of the calves' ration may be eliminated. The grain portion of the ration in some cases may be slightly reduced, although as a rule the calves should be given all the grain they will eat while on pasture. It is seldom advisable to carry calves through the entire finishing period on grass. A better finish is obtained when they are dry fed during the latter portion of the period. It is never advisable to change calves from the dry lot to pastures when on full feed. It is safe, however, to change from pastures to the dry lot during this period.

When pastures are very good some trouble may be experienced in getting the calves to consume enough grain for the best results. In such cases it is generally better to keep them away from the grass during a portion of each day.

In sections where winter pastures can be grown the feeder should make a strong effort to provide such pasture during the cold season, as the green feeds greatly reduce the cost of both growing the calves and fattening them.

Gluten Meal and Gluten Feed.

Digestible Nutrients—Gluten meal: Protein, 30.3 per cent; carbohydrates and fat, 53.8 per cent. Gluten feed: Protein, 21.6 per cent; carbohydrates and fat, 59.1 per cent.

Gluten meal is a by-product of the manufacture of starch from corn. The basis of the meal is the germ part of the corn kernel. Gluten feed is composed of the gluten meal plus a certain quantity of corn bran, which makes it lighter than the meal. Both feeds are fairly palatable and are usually among the cheapest sources of protein.

LESSON FOR JANUARY 12

MOSES THE DELIVERER OF ISRAEL.

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 3:1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—And Moses verily was faithful in all his house. Hebrews 3:5.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Exodus 3:13-4:17; Acts 7:17-36.

While the oppression of God's people was heading up, in the providence of God a deliverer was being prepared to take up the task at the opportune hour. Moses was first trained at his mother's knee, then in Pharaoh's court and finally under God's immediate hand in the desert. The latter was an indispensable part of his training. His learning in the wisdom of the Egyptians was helpful, but without the immediate tutorship of God he would have been a failure. All who are used of God must spend some time in the retirement of his presence. Two notable examples are Paul in Arabia and John on Patmos.

I. The Lord Speaks to Moses in the Burning Bush (vv. 1-6).

It was while keeping the flock of his father-in-law in the desert that the Lord appeared to Moses. Had he remained in Pharaoh's palace he never could have had the vision of the burning bush. This bush enveloped in flames, yet unconsumed, symbolized the people of God enswathed in the very fire of God, or God dwelling in the midst of an elect people. Moses steps aside to behold this strange sight, but must be taught the essential lesson of the proper approach to God. We now can approach God with boldness through Jesus Christ (Hebrews 10:19). Our God is a consuming fire. No evil can be permitted in his presence (Joshua 7; Acts 5). The Lord did not leave him long in suspense. He told him he was the God of his fathers, the covenant God. As soon as he knew it was God who was speaking to him he hid his face. The sight of God always causes sinful men to hide (Isaiah 6:5).

II. Moses Commissioned as the Deliverer of His People (3:7-10).

In the preamble of this commission God said to Moses: "I have seen" the affliction of my people." This is always true (Psalms 22:24; 34:4, 6; Isaiah 63:9). "I have heard their cry." Not a cry ever goes up from a child of God unheard by him. "I have come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians." This shows that God is actively interested in the cause of his people. He graciously obligates himself: (1) To deliver them out of the hands of the Egyptians. Egypt may be considered a type of the world; the oppression, a type of sin's bondage; and Pharaoh, a type of the devil. God delivers his own from the hands of the devil (Colossians 1:13). (2) To bring them up out of the land. God does not deliver and leave his own in the enemy's land, but brings them out into a land "flowing with milk and honey." (3) To bring them into a "good land and large." There is no loss in obeying God. When he brings us out of the enemy's land he brings us into a better land.

III. Moses' Objections Patiently Heard and Removed (3:11; 4:10).

1. Personal Unworthiness (v. 11). He realized his insufficiency for this task. His forty years in the school of God have wrought a great change in him. His hesitancy is a good sign. Men who are really qualified to do a great work are not forward to begin it; e. g., Jeremiah, Martin Luther, George Washington. Moses did not refuse to go, but pled his difficulty before the Lord. God answered this difficulty by assuring him that he would be with him. When God is with a man the impossible becomes the possible.

2. The Difficulty of the People to Understand Moses' Relationship to God (3:13, 14). Moses knew how unwilling they were to acknowledge him as their deliverer forty years before. Since God changes his name as he assumes a new relationship to his people, Moses inquired as to what that new relationship would be, and his corresponding name. The Lord promptly met this difficulty by showing him a name differing in many respects from all others previously given. This new name is "I Am." This name is from the Hebrew verb "to be." It indicates (1) God's self-existence; (2) his self-sufficiency; (3) his unchangeableness.

3. Unbelief on the Part of the People (4:1). This difficulty the Lord met by supplying him with credentials which could not be gainsaid. He was given the power to perform supernatural wonders (4:2).

4. Lack of Eloquence (4:10). This difficulty the Lord met by providing an assistant in his brother Aaron.

Try to Read Wisely.

The habit of reading wisely is by no means an easy one to acquire, but unless acquired, the mind is likely to become so cloyed with literary sweetmeats or satiated with academic treatises that it revolts indignantly, and for the time at least refuses to respond to the demands which habit places upon it.

LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE IF SICK, CROSS, FEVERISH

HURRY, MOTHER! REMOVE POISONS FROM LITTLE STOMACH, LIVER, BOWELS.

GIVE CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS AT ONCE IF BILIOUS OR CONSTIPATED.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels needs a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative;" they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—Adv.

DANDRUFF MAKES HAIR FALL OUT

A small bottle of "Danderine" keeps hair thick, strong, beautiful.

Girls! Try this! Doubles beauty of your hair in a few moments.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but, really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine for a few cents at any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.—Adv.

First Fireplaces.

Fireplaces, as we know them, came into use in the sixteenth century. Prior to that the hearth was in the middle of the room and the smoke escaped through an opening in the peak of the roof.

In 1848 Sir Arthur Garrod proved that in gout (also true in rheumatism) there is deficient elimination on the part of the kidneys and the poisons within are not thrown off.

Prof. H. Strauss attributes a gouty attack to the heaping up of poisons where there is an abundance of uric acid which is precipitated in the joints and sheaths, setting up inflammation. Before the attack of gout or rheumatism there is sometimes headache, or what is thought to be neuralgia, or rheumatic conditions, such as lumbago, pain in the back of the neck, or sciatica. As Prof. Strauss says, "The excretion of uric acid we are able to effect by exciting diuresis." Drink copiously of water, six or eight glasses per day, hot water before meals, and obtain Anuric tablets, double strength, for 60 cts., at the nearest drug store and take them three times a day. If you want a trial package send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

"Anuric" (anti-uric) is a recent discovery of Dr. Pierce and much more potent than lithia, for it will dissolve uric acid as hot tea dissolves sugar.

Quick Change in Style of Gowns

New York.—It is time to change a few things in women's apparel, asserts a prominent fashion authority. Women are leaping from uniforms into medieval gowns of gold, and crystal, and tulle in brilliant colors, and into smashing furs and red street apparel.

There are significant changes working up from the ground. There is the new decolletage which was prophesied in this department weeks ago and which is coming into view as smart women exploit it. Half a dozen new ways of cutting the neckline have leaped into existence and a dozen new collars claim the blue ribbon of excellence. No matter whether we dress differently about the hips and feet, we are dressing decidedly differently about the neck and even the wrists.

It is in these significant changes that the great mass of women are interested who do not feel that they can afford entirely new gowns for the mid-season.

The artist who said that all changes in fashions for women consisted in the placement of the bulge, or the absence of it, should have added that the open spaces in costumes were second in importance.

Cut to the bone, there is no doubt that he was right. The contour is the thing. It is where a garment goes in or out that determines its fashion. Few women there are who are brave enough to go against the contour of the hour, even though it may not suggest the best there is in their figures.

New Decolletage.

The change in the neckline is perhaps the most important to the average woman. She has belief in herself when it comes to cutting a new kind of neckline. She feels that a good pair of scissors may be the medium of transforming an old gown into a new gown by the simple process of turning an oblong neck into a round one, a square one, or a U-shaped one.

All history is filled with rapid changes in the neckline, and so far we have not had anything new. We have rung the bells of history all over again. That is all.

When Edward II was king of England the women wore the georgette, which wrinkled about the neck and spread outward over the chin and the back of the head. This was introduced to fashion a few years ago through a dancer and her clever designer. It is still worn by women who go motoring, and they make it of dark blue crepe or veiling, rather than of white satin.

When Richard II was king his French queen brought over the fashion of the low neck, and so, after centuries, women dropped the neckband of the gown from chin to collar bone.

When Elizabeth was queen of England the delta decolletage was invented, and it ran along with another neckline that exposed all the chest and half the shoulders, and then, as if by a sudden spasm of prudery, hid the neck and ears by an immense ruff.

When James I came to the throne of England his queen introduced the very decollete, tight bodice with its immense, flaring collar of wired lace at the back, and when Charles I allowed Henriette of France to lead the fashions for his court, there was the low, round neckline that dipped well downward in the back and was finished with a deep vandyke collar that extended over the sleeves.

In the picturesque days of Queen Anne women introduced the low, square cut decolletage, guiltless of collar, which our women have worn for two decades; and in the middle of the eighteenth century, in the Georgian era, women used a simple decolletage in a rounded V outlined with a wrinkled handkerchief as a part of their street attire.

Running the mind over this slight summary of historical changes in the decolletage, it is easy to see that we have done nothing new; but here is what we are going to do at the immediate moment: Revive the delta of the Elizabethan times, the deep square of Queen Anne, with its tight, high line at the side of the neck, and the U-shaped decolletage of the end of the eighteenth century, with its modesty piece of lace.

Return of Lace Collars.

We have gone through a season of medieval severity in the neckline. Women have aided nature which made them ugly or cheated nature which made them beautiful by going about without any softening effect at the neck, by wearing coat collars of heavy homespun unrelieved by white, and by the use of V-shaped lines of heavy velveteen and crepe which fashion kept unadorned.

True to history this was, but not true to art. There were few women who looked their best in such severity. Today collars return slowly. There are still those who tell you they are not smart, but at the exclusive house there is a tendency to put precious lace on the new neckline. It is not a V-shaped neckline; it is a deep U which calls for a softening outline and an extremely soft arrangement of lace or tulle across the bust.

The Queen Anne decolletage which hugs the side of the neck and runs down into a narrow L-shaped opening is extremely smart, and it is banded with fur and then filled in with fine folds of silk net.

It is felt by those who have their hands on the pulse of fashion that the oblong neckline of the Renaissance is no longer smart, although it is worn by some well-dressed women.

Double Neckline.

There is a disposition on the part of some designers to make a double neckline, and this they do by a subtle arrangement of thin fabrics. A certain designer has turned out a remarkably brilliant gown of raspberry chiffon having a deep U-shaped decolletage outlined with chinchilla which swings the chiffon with the movement of the figure, as though it were a necklace. Beneath it, and hugging the bust in the eighteenth century manner, is a bodice with a rounded decolletage.

There will be an oblong Renaissance neckline that reaches from shoulder to shoulder, cut on a tight satin bodice, and over that will be swung a looser bodice of colored chiffon or tulle which is high at the back and has a long, rounded line in front that drops to the waist.

Black and seal brown velvet afternoon gowns have the Queen Anne decolletage, which follows the exact line where the neck is placed on the body, until it gets to the collar bone, where it dips into a straight, open space half way to the waist. This is outlined with fur. Again, it may be outlined with Venetian point.

The delta decolletage is considered the most becoming of all for evening wear. Get out any picture of Elizabethan times and you will see what is meant. In that gorgeous era the women wore a jeweled piece of open net over the shoulder to the base of the neck at each side, and then the decolletage spread downward and outward to the arm-pits.

Take this change in the neckline seriously. It will govern the clothes of the next few weeks.

V-shaped decolletage in back of a black velvet evening gown which is cut high in front. This idea is worked out in many types of gowns, even those for street. Delta decolletage shown in new brocade evening gown in white and gold. This neckline originated in the Elizabethan days.

White Collars.

In spite of the fact that some of the newest frocks have no white at the throat, and that others favor the rounded neck, with lace and a tucker, still others feature a white satin collar that is high at the neck and that extends in the front over the bodice quite to the waistline.

A COMPLEX SENTENCE.

A teacher in the North Vernon schools was grading some manuscripts from a recent examination. One of the questions asked ran like this: "Define and give an example of a complex compound sentence." In answering the question one pupil gave the following sentence as an example:

"The only saw that I ever saw saw was a Buzzsaw down in 'Arkansaw.'"

The teacher is under the impression that the answer was somewhat complex.—Indianapolis News.

After the "Flu" —Fever or Cold

Clean the Acidity and Toxic Poisons Out of the Digestive Tract

Millions are now suffering from the after effects of the deadly "flu," a fever or a cold. Their appetites are poor; they are weak, and they are waiting for their strength to come back.

If these people could only realize that the return to health and strength would be greatly helped by giving attention to the stomach—that is, removing the acidity and toxic poisons from the entire digestive tract, making it act naturally, so that the body will receive the full strength of the food eaten—a great deal of suffering would be saved to humanity.

Everyone knows that the disease itself, and the strong medicines that have been taken, upset the stomach, leave it hot and feverish, the mouth dry, the tongue coated, a nasty taste, and no desire to eat. This is a poor foundation to build new strength on.

Now, tens of thousands of people all over this country are using EATONIC for the purpose of cleaning these poisonous after-effects right out of the system and they are obtaining wonderful results—so wonderful that the amazingly quick benefits are hardly believable, just as shown in the remarkable letter which is published upon the request of this sturdy old Civil War veteran. He is 77 years old. Read what he says EATONIC did for him:

"I am an old soldier, past seventy-seven years. I had the Spanish influenza and it left my stomach in an awful shape. I tried three different doctors but got no relief. As a last resort I went and got a box of EATONIC and to my greatest surprise the very first tablet I took helped me. I can now eat anything I want, and feel fine."

Yours thankfully,
Bowler, Indiana

P. S.: If you can make any use of this letter for suffering humanity, you are at liberty to do so. C. S. M.

This is only one case out of thousands. You should make the EATONIC test in your own case at once. You have everything to gain—not a penny can you lose, for we take all the risk. Your own common sense, your own feelings, tell you that a good appetite, good digestion, a good stomach, with the fever poisons and effects of strong medicines out of your system, will put you on the road to strong, robust health again.

You want to enjoy life again after you have battled with the "flu," fever or colds, or any other illness that has taken your strength. You want to get back your old-time vigor, be full of pep and enthusiasm—be able to work with ease, instead of listlessly, half-heartedly dragging out a mere existence.

So be sure to take a box of EATONIC home with you today. We cannot urge this too strongly. If EATONIC fails to give you positive beneficial results, it will not cost you a penny. There is no risk—the benefit is surely all for you.

Fire Chief Resigns

In addition to the item of last week concerning the firemen, we desire to make a short review of the three years service of the former chief, H. G. Hathaway. The company consists of twenty-two members with equippment far superior to that of many small towns our size. During the year of so much destruction by fire, thought to be caused by the German hand, the local firemen patrolled the town, at the suggestion of their chief, in order to guard the grist mill, elevator and the town in general and it proved to be good thing as one big fire was averted by this method. The state Firemen's Journal learned of this fact and gave the company quite a compliment. At the resignation of Mr. Hathaway as chief, Grover Curie was elected with Elmer Hart as assistant. A movement is now on foot to purchase a truck for the engine and it is in the hands of a special committee.

Banquet Returned Soldiers

The reception given the return soldier boys, from school and camp under the auspices of the local Red Cross, was largely attended at the Lutheran church on New Year's night. The program was really interesting and entertaining.

Nine soldiers were marched to the platform as follows:—

Morris Curie
William Quance
Harvey Hull
Merritt Milliman
Bart Collins
Pete Snyder
Elsa Morr
Clayton Hathaway
Hubert Shook.

The program opened with patriotic music followed by welcome, Rev. C. O. Johnson, pastor of the M. P. church followed by response by Clayton Hathaway. Each of the above soldiers were given an opportunity to talk and the audience appreciated their remarks.

Two letters were read, one from Paul Perry and the other one from Forrest Kain.

Special music was rendered by a boys chorus that was pleasing.

Sup't F. L. Smith was introduced and he very appropriately spoke of the relation of the community and the soldier boy. Rev. Mumma was called upon for an impromptu speech, thus the program was completed.

C. A. Woodcox, a member of the program committee had charge of the service.

Refreshments, consisting of ice cream and wafers, were served in the basement, and every one had a splendid time.

I lived in a flat and my neighbors, believing me to have tuberculosis, asked the owner of the flat to have me move out, which he did. I used different remedies, but found no relief until I used Glando Pine. The first dose seemed to help me. I began gaining flesh; and by the time I had used two bottles, my cough was gone. Over a year has passed and my cough has not returned. I believe Glando Pine saved my life."

SAVE 16,000,000 BUSHELS OF WHEAT THAT FORMERLY WAS LOST IN THRESHING

Farmers, Urged by Food Administration, Provide Seven Extra Loaves of Bread for Every American.

By adopting cleaner threshing methods and by literally combing harvest fields to gather grain formerly wasted, threshermen and farmers of the United States this year saved fully 16,000,000 bushels of wheat, estimated as equivalent to about seven one-pound loaves of bread for every person in the country. This result, accompanied by corresponding savings of barley, oats, rye and other grains, is shown by reports from 38 grain states to the U. S. Food Administration. Other states, although not prepared to furnish definite figures of conservation in the grain fields, report greatly reduced harvest losses.

This rural food saving achievement, accomplished in scarcely six months' time, was in direct response to requests by the Food Administration, which asked farmers and threshermen to reduce harvest losses from about 8½ per cent.—the estimated average in normal times—to the lowest possible minimum. Country grain threshing committees carried into every grain growing community the official recommendations for accomplishing the results desired.

In numerous instances drivers of racks with leaky bottoms were sent from the fields to repair their equipment and frequently bad order threshing machines were stopped until the cause of waste was removed. But in proportion to the number of persons engaged in gathering the nation's grain crop, cases of compulsion were comparatively rare. The Food Administration freely attributed the success of the grain threshing campaign to patriotic service by farmers, threshermen and their crews. Incidentally grain growers of the United States are many millions of dollars "in pocket" as a result of the grain saved.

SUGAR SHOWED OUR BACKBONE

American Willingness to Give Up Luxury Demonstrated Nation's War Conscience.

STAND WITH THE ALLIES.

By Reducing Consumption People of the United States Averted a Famine at Home in Spite of Low Supplies.

The fact that the people of the United States were able to reduce by more than one-half million tons their July, August, September and October consumption of sugar proves conclusively that their war conscience was thoroughly awakened and that the country as a whole stood ready to follow the injunctions of the Government.

Our normal consumption of sugar in the four-month period beginning with July has been 400,000 tons per month, a total of 1,600,000 for the quarter year.

In July, when our sugar stringency began to reach its height, consumption was reduced to 260,000 tons. In August only 325,000 tons went into distribution and in September only 278,000 tons. In October the distribution fell to 230,000 tons.

If the general public had failed to observe the injunctions of the Food Administration this country would have been in the throes of a sugar famine before the end of August. Our visible supplies were so low as to bring great anxiety to those familiar with the sugar situation. They feared that it would be absolutely impossible to reduce consumption to a point where sugar would no longer be a mere luxury in the American diet.

Few accomplishments of the Food Administration will stand forth so predominantly as this reduced consumption of sugar. By it we have been able to bridge over the period of stringency until the new beet and Louisiana cane sugar crops were in sight.

Now the nation is in a position so that if we choose we may return to our normal home use of sugar, and Europe, with the release of ships to go far afield, can maintain its recent restricted rations. If, however, those nations are to increase their use of sugar very considerably it must be by our continued sharing with them through limiting our own consumption.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Paulding, Paulding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

DEMOCRACY VS. AUTOCRACY.

"There is no royal road to food conservation. We can only accomplish this by the voluntary action of our whole people, each element in proportion to its needs. It is a matter of equality of burden."

The truth of this statement, made by the United States Food Administrator soon after we entered the war, has been borne out by the history of our exports. Autocratic food control in the lands of our enemies has broken down, while democratic food sharing has maintained the health and strength of this country and of the Allies.

COL. ROOSEVELT DIES SUDDENLY

End Comes to America's Greatest Statesman, While Sleeping at His Home at 4:15 A. M. at Oyster Bay, N. Y.—Blood Clot in Lungs Is Given As Probable Reason for Unexpected Death of the Ex-President.

BULLETIN

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Jan. 6.—(Special)—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt died in his room here, while sleeping, at 4:15 this morning.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Jan. 6.—The following is a statement made by Dr. G. W. Faller, of Oyster Bay, the physician who last saw the colonel alive:

"Col. Roosevelt retired at 12 o'clock last night feeling much better. At 4:15 o'clock this morning he simply ceased to breathe. Death was caused probably by a pulmonary embolism."

This pulmonary embolism, Dr. Faller explained, is a blood clot upon one of the arteries of the lungs.

Funeral Wednesday.

The funeral will be Wednesday, from Christ Episcopal church, Oyster Bay. Rev. Dr. George Talmadge will officiate, and interment will be in the Young Memorial cemetery at Oyster Bay cove.

At the time of the death, the only persons in the house at Sagamore Hill were Col. Roosevelt, his wife and the servants.

Seemed Much Improved.

Colonel Roosevelt spent Sunday evening reading, conversing with Mrs. Roosevelt and chatting with Dr. Faller, who found his apparently much improved and in excellent spirits. He also dictated a number of letters. Despite his recent return from the hospital where he was confined for weeks by an attack of sciatica, with painful complications, he had much of his old vigor. When Dr. Faller left him, Roosevelt was laughing and called "Good-night," most cheerfully.

At midnight he retired. Mrs. Roosevelt sat with him for a while, then he fell asleep, she went to her own room. (At 4:15 a. m. the man servant became alarmed and called the nurse. There was nothing that could be done. Roosevelt was dead.

Mrs. Roosevelt was called. She took the shock bravely. Dr. Faller arrived a few moments later. Roosevelt lay as if still sleeping. He did not move in the bed as he died, but lay just as he was when his wife stepped out of the room shortly after midnight.

Returned Home Christmas.

Roosevelt returned home Christmas day from Roosevelt hospital, where he had been ill for some time with sciatica.

Immediately after he died his son, Archie Roosevelt, who is in Boston, was notified. He started for home at once.

The house at Sagamore Hill was closed and nobody allowed to enter the grounds after the colonel died. It was stated that physicians would issue an official announcement later.

He was twice married, the first time to Alice Hathaway Lee, daughter of George Cabot Lee. She died in 1884. His second wife was Edith Kermit Carrow, daughter of Charles Carow of New York, whom he married in 1886. She survives him.

One son, Quentin Roosevelt, was shot down in an airplane on the western front last June.

Planned Trip to France.

The colonel had planned a trip to Europe to visit Quentin's grave. This trip was to be made as soon as he had sufficiently recovered his health. The death of Quentin was a severe shock to Roosevelt, and is believed to have hastened his end.

Archie Roosevelt, another son, was wounded by shrapnel on the Toul front and was decorated with the French war cross as he lay on the operating table. This cross was Colonel Roosevelt's most prized possession.

Theodore Roosevelt, jr., was gassed during the fighting at Cantigny.

Kermit Roosevelt fought with both British and American armies. Colonel Roosevelt was looking forward to a reunion of the whole family when all his boys returned from the war.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

Illness Dates to Last February.

New York, Jan. 6.—Colonel Roosevelt's illness may be said to date from last February. On February 5, it was announced that he had been removed from his home in Oyster Bay to the Roosevelt hospital, in this city, following an operation on one of his ears. Soon after his arrival at the hospital he underwent two more operations for the removal of diseased tissue in his infected ear, and it was admitted at the time that he was seriously ill. He remained at the hospital until March 3rd.

During May and June the colonel made a number of addresses, speaking at Springfield, Mass., and in New York. In June he made a tour of the west during which he suffered a slight attack of erysipelas in one of his legs but refused to give up his engagements. Early in November the colonel was taken to Roosevelt hospital in this city for the treatment of rheumatism and sciatica. While in the hospital reports became current that the colonel was more seriously ill than his physicians would admit. Colonel Roosevelt returned to his home in Oyster Bay on Christmas day, remarking as he stepped to the porch that he was "feeling bully."

Death, it was said, came to him painlessly as he slept. Three physicians had been in attendance upon the colonel since he was taken to Roosevelt hospital, seven weeks ago, to be treated for what was believed to be sciatica. The patient's trouble was later diagnosed as inflammatory rheumatism, which, according to one of the doctors, had affected practically every joint in his body. The colonel's physicians were Dr. J. A. Faller, of Oyster Bay, and Dr. J. H. Richards and Dr. John H. Hartwell, of New York city.

THE COLONEL'S LAST MESSAGE WAS PLEA FOR AMERICANISM

New York, Jan. 6.—Colonel Roosevelt's last message to the American people was a plea to continue the fight for "Americanism."

It was delivered at the all-American benefit concert, given by the American Defense society in the Hippodrome last night. It was read by Henry C. Quimby, a trustee of the society, because of the colonel's indisposition.

"I cannot be with you and so all I can do is wish you God-speed," the message said.

"There must be no sagging behind in the fight for Americanism, merely because the war is over. There are plenty of persons who have already made the assertion that they believe the American people have a short memory and that they intend to revive all the foreign associations which most directly interfere with the complete Americanization of our people.

"Our principle in this matter should be absolutely simple. In the first place we should insist that if the immigrant who comes here in good faith becomes an American and assimilates himself to us, he shall be treated on an exact equality with everyone else, for it is an outrage to discriminate against any such man because of creed, or birthplace, or origin.

"But this is predicated upon the man's becoming in fact an American and nothing but an American. If he tries to keep segregated with men of his own origin and separate from the rest of America, then he isn't doing his part as an American.

"There can be no divided allegiance here. Any man who says he is an American, but something else also, isn't an American at all. We have room for but one flag, the American flag, and this excludes the red flag which symbolizes all wars against liberty and civilization just as much as it excludes any foreign flag of a nation to which we are hostile.

"We have room for but one language here and that is the English language, for we intend to see that the crucible turns our people out as Americans, of American nationality, and not as dwellers in a polyglot boarding house; and we have room for but one soul loyalty and that is loyalty to the American people."

STATESMEN PAY TRIBUTE TO CHARACTER OF COLONEL ROOSEVELT

Washington, Jan. 6.—"I am profoundly sorry to hear of Col. Roosevelt's death," said Speaker Champ Clark.

"Personally I thought a great deal of him and regarded him as one of the most remarkable men this country ever produced.

"I have always had the highest personal regard for Col. Roosevelt. I am greatly surprised and shocked to hear of his death."

Senator New, of Indiana: "The country has lost its foremost citizen. Col. Roosevelt was a great man and a great American and a great American and a great patriot. Even those of us who differed with him in some things and at some times have always recognized and given testimony to his great qualities. Intellectually there have been few in his class in the public life of this country. It is yet too early to estimate the effect of his policies and utterances upon the history of the country. Every American should at this time share in the regret that his career should have been brought to so sudden and untimely a close."

Senator Kenyon, Iowa: "Col. Roosevelt's death distresses me. In my judgment he was our greatest American."

Senator Borah, Idaho: "I am deeply sorry to hear of Col. Roosevelt's death. He was one of the most marvelous figures in American history. In many respects he was without parallel in organizing and leading public opinion. The debt this country owes him for his vision and courage in moulding public opinion to meet this last great conflict, cannot be over-estimated."

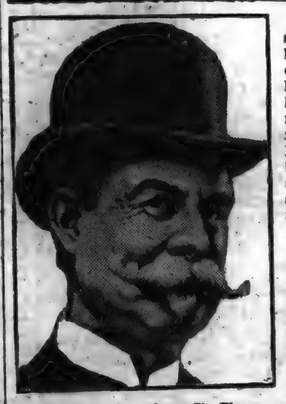
Asks Damage of $500,000.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 6.—Two libel suits against the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, asking damages totaling $500,000, were filed in the Marion county circuit court here today on behalf of the Fan-Motor company, a Delaware corporation doing business at St. Cloud, Minn., and its president, S. D. Pandolfo, of St. Cloud.

It is set forth in the complaint that the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World published in its magazine, "Associated Advertising," in May, 1918, an article charging "that the statements issued by the plaintiff descriptive of its business and business prospects were untrue."

OUT-OF-ORDINARY PEOPLE

PERSISTENCE, THY NAME IS LIPTON

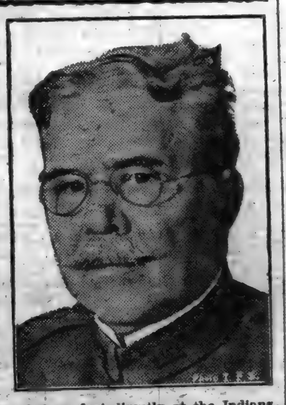


Sir Thomas Lipton, P. P. P. (persistence, pertinacity, perseverance), has again challenged for the America's cup. For 19 years the Irish baronet has been trying to lift that cup. He has built and brought over four Shamrocks. Three of them have been defeated by our defenders. Shamrock IV was on its way across when war broke out. She lies in a Brooklyn shipyard. The New York Yacht club seems inclined to wait till 1920 as a more fitting time and has so advised Sir Thomas.

Sir Thomas says it is the ambition of his life to lift the cup from the Americans, "the best sports in the world." Americans reciprocate his sentiments and beg to assure him of the continuance of their distinguished consideration. Many of Great Britain's biggest men have come here to bring John Bull and Uncle Sam closer. Possibly none of them has accomplished so much as have Sir Thomas and his Shamrocks. Moreover, it's the Lipton spirit that won the great war. The whole world turned against the Hun in part because of his lack of sportsmanship and his failure to "play the game."

Again: Yachting ceased while American yachtsmen did their bit. Now with the eyes of the nation turned seaward, yachting becomes again the fitting play of a people embarked upon a huge adventure in shipping and resolved upon a great navy to help maintain the world's peace.

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE MEDALIST



To a San Franciscan, Col. L. Mervin Maus, medical corps, U. S. A., department surgeon of the western military department, has come the honor of being awarded what is said to be the first Distinguished Service medal to be bestowed in the United States, though a few were awarded to conspicuous leaders in France during the war. Here is the citation:

"A Distinguished Service medal has been awarded to you for specially meritorious service on Belle Fourche river, North Dakota, November 5, 1877, at which time you were first lieutenant and assistant surgeon, United States army—in that, while serving with a detachment suddenly surrounded by a hostile force of Sioux Indians, you succeeded in extricating the party from a most perilous position."

Maus' act is unique. Three hundred Sioux charged upon the white men, who reserved their fire. Maus ran out on foot directly at the Indians, yelling like mad. They turned and rode off without firing a shot. A parley averted bloodshed. A few days later the Indians began a murderous raid. It took a regiment to subdue them.

FIRST AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS

The recent American Jewish congress in Philadelphia was the first of its kind. It was characterized as a "most momentous epoch in Jewish life." There were 400 delegates representing 3,000,000 Jews in America. Judge Julian W. Mack of Chicago, president of the congress, said it was the first time in American history that Jews of all classes, all groups and all factions into which American Jewry has been divided have come together to deliberate solemnly and hopefully for the rights and the welfare of their race.

The congress declared for a Jewish commonwealth in Palestine under the trusteeship of Great Britain, acting on behalf of such league of nations as may be formed.

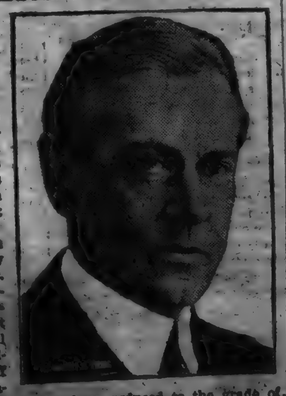
A delegation of nine, including Judge Mack, was elected to present to the Versailles peace conference a bill of rights, which it is proposed shall be incorporated in the organic laws of new or enlarged states that may be established. The bill of rights includes these particulars:

All citizens of (name of nation) without distinction as to race, nationality or creed shall enjoy equal civil, political, religious and national rights.

The principle of minority representation shall be provided for by law.

The members of the various national as well as religious bodies of (name of nation) shall be accorded autonomous management of their own communal institutions whether they be religious, educational, charitable or otherwise.

IN CHARGE OF NATIONAL PARKS



Stephen T. Mather, director of the national park service, predicts an increased attendance in the national parks next season now that peace has come. The attendance of the 1918 season fell off from 490,795 to 454,841 owing to the increase in railroad fares and the discouragement by the government of pleasure travel. The bulk of tourist travel to the national parks is by private automobile and held its own, the figures for 1917 and 1918 in the 11 parks in which records are kept being 55,296 and 54,596 cars.

Rocky Mountain National park in Colorado led all the scenic parks by a wide margin with 101,497 visitors. Mount Rainier in Washington was second, with 43,901. Yosemite in California was third, with 33,627. Hot Springs in Arkansas, which is medical rather than scenic, had 140,000 visitors. Yellowstone in Wyoming fell off about 14,000. There are now 16 national parks, Casa Grande in Arizona having been reduced to the grade of national monument. Bills are before congress for the creation of several additional parks, including the Grand Canyon of the Colorado in Arizona and Lafayette National park on the island of Mount Desert, Maine. Director Mather recommends large additions to Yellowstone and to Sequoia in California. The national parks contain 6,254,465 acres. The appropriation for this year is $1,012,305.

Temperance Notes.

(Conducted by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.)

CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE WAR WORK.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is carrying on its war work, not as a side issue, as many outsiders seem to think, but as an exigent and intensive part of its regular program. "I never knew the Woman's Christian Temperance Union did that kind of work," said a club woman at a conference held for the purpose of correlating the governmental departments, industries and women's organizations which have been doing Americanization work. She learned with outspoken surprise that for many years the Woman's Christian Temperance Union had been looking after the immigrant at ports of entry, in jails, hospitals and courts, had issued traveling cards, published and distributed educational literature in many languages, conducted temperance columns in foreign language papers, and co-operated in divers ways with the public schools in the work of preparing the children of many nations for American citizenship. She learned further that the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union is co-operating with the woman's division of the United States department of labor in securing employment for women and girls and with other governmental agencies for the welfare of women workers.

These and other lines of work so important during and after the war have been a long time specialized in Woman's Christian Temperance Union departments, so that no new machinery has been required to carry on the immense amount of war work being done by the 20,000 local units.

A BANKER'S TESTIMONY.

C. C. Parks, vice president of the First National bank, Denver, Colo., says the majority of business men always have realized the evils of intemperance, but they were fearful that a radical change in the laws would result in destruction of property values and throw large numbers of men out of employment. The results of prohibition have proved their fears were unfounded. He says:

"I lived in a wet city up until the time the state went dry, and have intimately known many men engaged in the liquor business. The majority of them have gone into other occupations and have told me they are doing better than under former conditions. The majority of men engaged in the saloon business would vote 'dry' if the issue were to come before the people again. Many owners of property voted 'wet' fearing there would be a large number of vacant buildings which would depreciate property values. This fear also has been unfounded. Landlords very generally do not desire to return to old conditions. All this is well known to all our people because there is no agitation whatever to bring the matter before the people again. If there is any agitation at all it is only by some of the 'dry' people who want to make the state even more dry than it is at present. The abolishment of the saloon has not brought about perfect conditions in Colorado, but there is no doubt that it has been a long step in advance."

WHEN THE WORLD GOES DRY.

In ever-growing numbers
They totter to their fall—
The walls and forts and sally-ports
Of Old King Alcohol!
Oh, where in all the nation
For comfort shall we fly,
And cheer and consolation,
When the world—goes—dry?

Perhaps the eye that's clearer
Can see a finer earth;
Perhaps the brain more nearly sane
Can understand its worth.
The ear can hear more laughter
When fewer children cry—
'Twill dry some tears hereafter
When all the world goes dry!

We'll find the buried treasure
That's just outside the door;
And we shall see sublimity
We never saw before.
And joy shall wed with duty
And earth shall touch the sky—
We'll all be thrilled with beauty
When all the world—goes—dry!

NO CONGREGATION TO PREACH TO.

"For the first time in years there were no prisoners in the chapel for services on a recent Sunday," reported a Concord (N. H.) paper, referring to the Merrimack county farm, of which the house of correction is a part. "The chaplain," it continued, "is bemoaning the fact that his congregation has departed for other fields. When the parson raises his voice in solemn warning of the wrath that is to be visited upon the wayward, it echoes back from vacant walls. Since the prohibition law went into effect the first of last May the number of prisoners has gradually dropped off until at the present time it seems as though the days of the county farm are numbered."

DOUGHNUTS FOR THE DOUGHBOYS.

What the Red Cross women who go abroad ought to know is how to make doughnuts and teach it to the camps. Not everybody can make a doughnut. It would be infinitely better if half a million dollars were spent on doughnuts for the boys than if there was that much laid out for tobacco and chewing gum. Doughnuts are a real enjoyment; not a make-believe, but something that graces the soul and makes the blood tingle in the capillaries.—Ohio State Journal.

"Call the dog, just the same," repeated Amanda Parlow. "Prince will hear you and bark."

"God bless you! So he will," cried Mr. Stagg. "You've got more sense than any of us, Mandy."

"And I'll have the chapel bell rung," she said.

"Huh! what's that for?"

"The wind will carry the sound out across the cove. The boy, Chet, will recognize the sound of the bell and it will give him an idea of where home is."

"You do beat all!" exclaimed Joseph Stagg, starting to leave the house.

"Find a cap of Chet's, Mrs. Gormley," she commanded. "Don't you see Mr. Stagg has no hat? He'll catch his death of cold."

"Why, I never thought!" He turned to speak directly to Miss Amanda, but she had gone back into the room and was putting on her outer wraps. Mrs. Gormley, red-eyed and weeping, brought the cap.

Mr. Stagg plunged down the steps and kept on down the hill to the water front. There was an eating-place here where the waterside characters congregated, and Mr. Stagg put his head in at the door.

"Some of you fellers come out with me on the ice and look for a little girl—and a boy and a dog," said Mr. Stagg. "Like enough, they're lost in this storm. And the ice is going out."

They all rushed out of the eating-house and down to the nearest dock. Even the cook went, for he chanced to know Carolyn May.

"And let me tell you, she's one rare little kid," he declared, out of Mr. Stagg's hearing. "How she come to be related to that hard-as-nails Joe Stagg is a puzzler."

The hardware dealer might deserve this title in ordinary times, but this was one occasion when he plainly displayed emotion.

Hannah's Car'lyn, the little child he had learned to love, was somewhere on the ice in the driving storm. He would have rushed blindly out on the rotten ice, bareheaded and alone, had the others not halted him.

Joseph Stagg stood on the dock and shouted at the top of his voice:

"Prince! Prince! Prince!"

The wind must have carried his voice a long way out across the cove, but there was no reply.

Then, suddenly, the clear silver tone of a bell rang out. Its pitch carried through the storm startlingly clear.

There was a movement out in the cove. One field of ice crashed against another. Mr. Stagg stifled a moan and was one of the first to climb down to the level of the ice.

"Have a care, Joe," somebody warned him. "This snow on the ice will mask the holes and fissures something scandalous."

But Joe Stagg was reckless of his own safety. He started out into the snow, shouting again:

"Prince! Prince! Here, boy! Here, boy!"

There was no answering bark.

The clanging of the chapel bell was a comforting sound. Joseph Stagg did not know that, unable to find the sexton, Amanda Parlow had forced the church door and was tugging at the rough rope herself.

Back and forth she rang the iron clapper, and it was no uncertain note that clanged across the storm-driven cove that afternoon. It was not work to which Carolyn May's "pretty lady" was used. Her shoulders soon ached and the palms of her hands were raw and bleeding. But she continued to toll the bell without a moment's surcease—on and on, till her brain swam and her breath came chokingly from her lungs.

"Joe! Joe!" she muttered each time that she bore down on the bell rope, and the iron tongue shouted the word for her, far across the snow-blotted cove.

Carolyn May was not the first of the trio caught out on the moving ice to be frightened. Perhaps because she had such unbounded faith in the good intentions of everbody toward her, the child could not imagine anything really hurting her.

"Oh, isn't this fun!" she crowed, bending her head before the beating of the storm. "Do hang on, Princey."

But Prince could not hang on so well, now that they faced the wind. He slipped off the sled twice, and that delayed them. Under his skates, Chet could feel the ice heave, while the pressure cracks followed each other like a fire of musketry.

"Goodness me!" gasped Carolyn May, "the ice seems to be going all to pieces, Chet. I hope it won't till we get back to the shore."

"I'm hopin' that, too," returned the boy.

He had quickly realized that they were in peril, but he would not let Carolyn May see that he was frightened—no, indeed!

The boy unstrapped the skates swiftly. He had a very good reason for removing them. If the ice was breaking up into floes, he might skate right off into the water, being unable to halt quickly enough, if on the steel runners. He now plodded on, head down, dragging the sled and the child, with Prince slipping and scratching along beside them.

Suddenly he came to open water. It was so broad a channel that he could not hope to leap it; and, of course, he could not get the sled and the little girl across.

"My!" cried Carolyn May, "that place wasn't here when we came out, was it, Chet? It must have just come here."

"I don't think it was here before," admitted the boy.

Suddenly a sound reached their ears that startled both; it even made Prince prick up his ears and listen. Then the dog sat up on his haunches and began to bowl.

"Oh, don't Prince!" gasped Carolyn May. "Who ever told you you could sing, just because you hear a church bell ringing?"

"That's the chapel bell!" cried Chet Gormley. "Now I'm sure I'm right. But we must get around this open patch in the water."

He set off along the edge of the open water, which looked black and angry. The ice groaned and cracked in a threatening way. He was not sure whether the floe they were on had completely broken away from the great mass of ice in the cove and was already drifting out into the lake or not.

Haste, however, he knew was imperative. The tolling of the chapel bell coming faintly down the wind, Chet drew the sled swiftly along the edge of the opening, the dog trotting along beside them, whining. Prince plainly did not approve of this.

"Here it is!" shouted the boy in sudden joy. "Now we'll be all right, Car'lyn May!"

"Oh, I'm so glad, Chet," said the little girl. "For I'm getting real cold, and this snow makes me all wet."

"Keep up your heart, Car'lyn May," he begged. "I guess we'll get through all right now."

"Oh, I'm not really afraid," the little girl answered. "Only I'd really like to be on shore."

Chet hastened on toward the sound of the tolling bell, sharply on the watch for other breaks in the ice.

Here was another—a wide-spreading crevasse filled with black water. Chet had no idea to which direction he should turn. And, indeed, it seemed to him as though the opening was growing wider each moment. The ice on which they stood must be completely severed from that farther up in the inlet!

He Turned a Bright Face on Her as He Struck Out for the Edge of the Other Ice Floe.

The boy had become frightened. Carolyn May had little idea of their danger. Prince sat up and howled. It seemed to the boy as though they were in desperate straits, indeed.

"You've got to be a brave girl, Car'lyn May," he said. "I'm goin' to swim across this place and then drag you over. You stick to the sled and you won't scarcely get wet even."

"Oh, Chet! don't you dare get drownd-ed!" begged Carolyn May, terrified now by the situation.

He turned a bright face to her as he struck out for the edge of the other ice floe. Chet might not have been the wisest boy who ever lived, but he was brave, in the very best sense of the word.

"Don't worry about me, Car'lyn May," he chattered.

The desperate chill of the water almost stopped the boy's heart.

Three strokes took him across the patch of open water.

"We'll be all right in a minute, Car'lyn May!" he called, climbing to his feet.

And then he discovered something that almost stunned him. The line he had looped around his wrist had slipped off! He had no way of reaching the rope attached to the sled save by crossing back through the water.

Chet felt that he could not do it.

"Oh, Chet! Chet!" wailed Carolyn May, "you've dropped my rope!"

What he should do, poor Chet could not think. His brain seemed completely clouded.

But what was the little girl doing? He saw her hauling in on the wet rope and she seemed to be speaking to Prince, for he stood directly before her, his ears erect, his tail agitated. By and by he barked sharply.

"Now, Princey!" Chet heard her cry.

She thrust the end of the rope into the dog's jaws and waved her mittened hand towards the open water and the unhappy Chet beyond it.

Prince sprang around, faced the strait of black water, shaking the end of the rope vigorously. Chet saw what she meant and he shrieked to the dog:

"Come on, Prince! Come on, good dog! Here, sir!"

Prince could not bark his reply with the rope in his jaws, but he sprang into the water and swam sturdily toward Chet.

He stooped and seized the dog's fore legs when he came near and helped him scramble out on the ice. The end of the rope was safely in his grasp again.

"My goodness! My goodness! I could sing a hallelujah!" declared Chet, his eyes streaming now. "Hold on, now, Car'lyn May! I'm goin' to drag you across. You hang right on to that sled."

"Oh, I'll cling to it, Chet," declared the little girl. "And do take me off this ice, quick, for I think it's floating out with me."

Chet drew on the rope, the sled moved forward and plunged, with just a little splash, into the pool.

In a few seconds he had "snaked" the sled to the edge of the ice floe on which he stood. He picked the sobbing Carolyn May off the sled and then lifted that up too. The little girl was wet below her waist.

"I'm—I'm just as co-old as I—I can be," she chattered. "Oh, Chet! take me home, please!"

"I'm a-going to," chattered the lad in return.

He dragged off his coat now, wrung it as dry as he could and wrapped it around Carolyn May's legs before he seated her on the sled again. Then he seized the rope once more and started toward the sound of the chapel bell.

Prince began to bark. He could not move forward much faster than Chet did, but he faced the wind and began to bark with persistence.

"There—there's something over there, Chet," murmured Carolyn May. She was all but breathless herself.

Then, through the wind and storm, came a faint hail. Prince eagerly pursued his barking. Chet tried to reply to the hail, but his voice was only a hoarse croak.

"We've got to keep on—we're got to keep on," muttered the lad, dragging the sled slowly.

The dog had disappeared. Carolyn May was weeping frankly. Chet Gormley was pushing slowly through the storm, staggering at each step, scarcely aware in what direction he was heading.

CHAPTER XIV.

How to Write a Sermon.

Joseph Stagg heard the dog bark first of all.

The men with Mr. Stagg having spread out on the ice like a skirmishing party, now closed in toward the point from which sounded the dog's barking. The hardware dealer shouted as he ran. He was the most reckless of them all and on several occasions came near falling.

Suddenly an object appeared in the smother of falling snow. Hoarsely the dog barked again. Mr. Stagg shouted:

"Hey, Prince! Prince! Here we are!"

The mongrel made for the hardware merchant and almost knocked him over. He was mad with joy.

"Show 'em to us, good dog!" cried Uncle Joe. "Take us to 'em! Where's Hannah's Car'lyn? Show us, boy!"

Prince lapped Mr. Stagg's face and then ran off through the falling snow, barking and leaping. The men hurried after him. Twice or thrice the dog was back, to make sure that he was followed. Then the men saw something outlined in the driving snow.

"Uncle Joe! Uncle Joe!"

The child's shrill voice reached the hardware merchant. There was poor Chet, staggering on, leaning against the wind, and pulling the sled behind him.

"Well, you silly chump!" growled Joseph Stagg. "Where're you going, anyway?"

"Oh, Uncle Joe!" wailed Carolyn May, "he isn't anything like that at all! He's just the bravest boy! And he's all wet and cold."

At the conclusion of this declaration poor Chet fell to his knees and then slipped quietly forward on his face.

"I vum!" grunted the hardware dealer, "I guess the boy is all in."

But Chet did not lose consciousness. He raised a faint murmur which reached Mr. Stagg's ears.

"I—I did the best I could, Mr. Stagg. Take—take her right up to mother. She'll fix Car'lyn up, all right."

"Say, kid!" exclaimed the cook, "I guess you need a bit of fixin' up yourself. Why, see here, boys, this chap's been in the water and his clothes is froze stiff."

INDIANA STATE NEWS

Seymour. — Farmers in Jackson county are opposed as a rule to the removal of all government regulations relative to the marketing of wheat. They declare that the government required them to sell their wheat at the guaranteed price, which was $2.08 in this city, and that the regulations were not removed until all the elevators were filled. After the farmer had delivered all his grain, it is pointed out, the regulations were cancelled and the additional profit will go to the miller and elevator man, who is holding the grain. As a result of the increased price the flour market has advanced and the price of all mill feeds has jumped considerably. The farmer was unable to hold a part of his wheat for exchange purposes and is now required to buy the flour and mill feeds at a much higher price. After all the wheat was marketed the exchange privilege was re-established, they declare. Jackson county farmers say it was unfair to them to require the marketing of all wheat at the lower price and make it necessary for them to buy their flour on the higher basis.

Seymour.—Before Indiana became a prohibition state opponents of the policy asserted that it would demoralize business, and their prediction has proved true so far as the police court in Seymour is concerned. A review of the docket for 1918 reveals that only 50 offenders were fined in the local court during that period and that one-half of those brought to trial were arrested between January 1 and April 2, the date when the prohibition law became effective. Since that time there have been 15 arrests for intoxication and five for the violation of some phase of the dry law. In 1917 150 fines were assessed and the majority of them were for drunkenness.

Hammond.—Indiana now has the greatest inland oil shipping port in the United States, the amount being sent out from Indiana Harbor on Lake Michigan being exceeded only by certain ports along the Atlantic coast. For the year 1918 total shipments of oil and gasoline amounted to 157,034,193 gallons, all produced by the Standard Oil company of Indiana, which has its refineries at Whiting, in this region. Shipments to American ports amounted to 106,777,152 gallons of gasoline and 37,772,761 of illuminating oil. To Canadian ports by Canadian steamships 13,134,280 gallons of fuel oil were sent. The company's steamers made 78 trips and Canadian vessels 17 trips.

Lafayette.—Acting on a request from the Indiana federal food administration, T. A. Coleman of Purdue university, state leader of county agricultural agents, announces that he will call on the county agricultural agents of Indiana to co-operate in checking the rush of lightweight pigs to markets. The county agents thus will endeavor to assist the government in discouraging the killing of unfinished animals. They will supply the food administration with information so that permits for the shipment of hogs in the best way possible may be issued.

Terre Haute.—In a case of child delinquency a plea in abatement was filed on the ground that Judge Charles Pulliam of the circuit court is disqualified from presiding in the trial because he is a bachelor. A state law provides that judges of juvenile courts shall be parents. Judge Pulliam overruled the plea because the statute applies to special judges for juvenile courts whereas he is sitting as judge of the circuit court which has jurisdiction as the statute is for special courts in cities of more than 100,000 population.

Indianapolis.—The Indiana branch of the National Woman's party sent the following cablegram to President Wilson, in Paris, France: "Your immediate action imperative or democracy at home fails." The cablegram was signed "Indiana Women" and was sent by Mrs. W. C. Bobbs, Mrs. Russell Fortune and Mrs. Homer T. Burnett. The women of every state in the Union were asked to send a similar cablegram to the president in an effort to force action on the suffrage amendment in congress during this session.

Indianapolis.—Contrary to all precedent, the general specific appropriation bills may be introduced on the first roll at the seventy-first session of the Indiana general assembly, which will be convened Thursday, January 9. It has been the custom to hold the appropriation matters to the very last and on that account it not infrequently has been necessary to turn back the clock to prolong the sine die adjournment.

Owensville.—Under existing Sunday blue laws in Owensville, restaurant and cafe owners are permitted to serve only grape juice. Lemonade and other brands of soft drinks are prohibited. Cigars, candy and chewing gum also are barred on Sunday. Drug stores are permitted to sell pills and castor oil only.

Anderson.—Madison county farmers have appealed to the federal employment bureau here for men to work on farms. J. F. McClure, examiner of the bureau, is seeking to interest returning soldiers in the work.

Kokomo.—Sheriff Omar Brown did not assume his duties as assistant superintendent at the state penal farm January 1, as intended, but will wait a month later. He is president of the local conscription board and feels that his recommendation will be needed to secure the release of many boys from the army service who will be sorely needed upon Howard county farms.

Indianapolis.—L. C. Johnson, settlement clerk in the office of Otto L. Klauss, auditor of state, has completed the tabulation of the second semi-annual settlements with counties. It shows a total of $3,842,268.55 paid to the state as the state's net share of taxes collected by the counties for the last six months of 1918. The amount falls $477,583.39 below $4,319,852.004, the amount paid in at the close of the last year for the corresponding period. However, when early advances to the state by the counties are computed and added to the net receipts the difference is expected to dwindle to perhaps half the amount, and the state's share correspondingly increased. Of the $3,842,268.55, approximately $1,000,000 will be paid back to the counties within the next three weeks as their share of the common school revenues. The shortage is held due for the most part to the fact that the taxes just paid were based on the state rate, 3 cents less than the year before; on a vocational educational rate, one-half cent less than the year before, and to the fact that there was no state debt sinking fund rate in the taxes collected.

Indianapolis. — Because of the growth of 72 townships in 45 counties they advanced to a higher classification January 1 under the working of the township trustees' salary law enacted by the last legislature. Certificates of advancement were issued to these townships by Gilbert H. Hendren, chief examiner of the state board of accounts. The advancement of a township is based on growth of population, increase in taxes assessed, increase in number of schoolteachers and increase in miles of roads. To the first of these basic conditions 42.5 per cent is allowed and 42.5 per cent, 10 per cent and 5 per cent, respectively, to the other three. The advancement of the township means that the trustee will receive an advance in salary and additional allowance for office rent and expenses. The townships involved in the advancement were in classes 6 to 10. The salary for the trustee in class 5 is $1,200; class 6, $1,000; class 7, $900; class 8, $720; class 9, $600, and class 10, $450. In classes 1 to 7 allowance is made for clerical expense and in all classes for office and other expenses.

Indianapolis.—H. E. Barnard, federal food administrator for Indiana, sent out letters to each of the Hoosier food administrators asking them to supply his office as soon as possible with information as to the approximate number of hogs in each county and the number of fed-up hogs. He also asks where the hogs will be loaded when sent to the market. Mr. Barnard will make recommendations to the railroad administration for permits for shipping on the basis of this survey. The state administration is investigating charges against a local packing house, which is alleged to have bought hogs at less than the $17.50 price on the declaration that the hogs were "sick." The investigation thus far is said to have developed the alleged fact that the packer made a practice of this method in buying hogs for less than the guaranteed minimum.

Indianapolis. — Governor Goodrich has suggested that Hoosier counties lay out and maintain county parks as memorials to soldiers of the war. Recently he was asked by the American Forestry association to urge Hoosiers to join in a nation-wide movement for planting trees along highways as memorials to the soldiers, but the governor believes that such memorials would likely not receive proper care, and that small or spacious parks, as the conditions warrant, would be fitting memorials and also a source of pride and satisfaction to the counties. Richard Lieber, secretary of the state forestry board, indorses the governor's plan.

Jeffersonville.—All records in the marriage business were broken in Jeffersonville for the year just closed, which showed an increase of one-half in the number of marriage licenses issued over the year 1916, which was a record-breaker for this city, sometimes called Indiana's Gretna Green. The number issued during 1918 was 3,125, compared with 2,659 during 1917 and 2,100 during 1916. December showed a falling off of 50 compared with last December, the decline being due, it is believed, to influenza and the signing of an armistice by Germany in the world war. September was the big month, with 365 licenses issued.

Indianapolis.—The monthly bulletin of the state board of health, under the name of Dr. William Shimer, head of the state pathological laboratories, makes the following announcement on epidemic influenza: "In the future we will look back on this epidemic of influenza with wonder and surprise. In spite of our vaunted advancement in medicine we have utterly failed in the present crisis. In my opinion this epidemic is going to continue until every susceptible person has been infected, just as if there were no physicians. The cause of the present failure of the medical profession is its ignorance of preventive medicine. Our medical schools have taught diagnosis and treatment, but not prevention of disease."

Evansville.—The World War Veterans is the name of a new organization formed here and composed of soldiers, sailors and marines who took part in the world war. It has been proposed that the organization be a national body and Senators New and Watson have been notified to obtain a national charter for it.

Indianapolis.—It is expected by Indianapolis live stock dealers that the government will continue the $17.50 minimum average price for hogs, not only into February, but also through March and probably as much longer as may appear necessary.

Fifteen Million Tons of Shipping

Building 15,000,000 tons of shipping is the big job laid out for American Shipyards. It will take years to do this. Men working in shipyards are assured of steady jobs if they make good. This great fleet of ships must be built. The United States is going to become the first maritime nation of the world.

We need men accustomed to out-of-doors work to help us build ships. The pay is set by the Emergency Fleet Corporation under direct Government control, and is higher than ever before in the history of the industry. Do not hesitate because you have never worked in a shipyard before. We will train you for some good job and will pay you well while you are learning.

It will take us years to build our share of 15,000,000 tons.

A shipyard is the ideal place to make good money this winter. Get in touch with us, either by calling at yard or by writing to us immediately. Some of our best jobs are open right now. Great Lakes Engineering Works, River Rouge and Detroit, Mich.—Adv.

Twenty seven sweaters and fifteen bath robes, our December quoto, were sent out on time. The DeKalb County Red Cross has received notice to suspend knitting, as one of the regular production activities. Knitted articles now in the making will be finished but no more yarn will be issued. Careful inventory has been made of all knitted articles on hand, a quantity sufficient to care for the needs of men in camp and overseas set aside, and the remaining stocks turned over to the department of foreign relief. More than 10,000,000 sweaters, socks, mufflers, helmets and wristlets were turned out in seventeen months preceeding the overthrow of central powers. Virtually every man in the army was given woolen accessories, fashioned by tireless fingers of thousands of women who chose that method of aiding, to win the war.

At the Marine Hospital at Louisville, Ky, a victrola and records were provided for the entertainment of the 35 patients there, and at Camp Taylor suitable entertainments were given in the convalescent houses.

General plans for holiday celebrations outlined at Natfonal Red Cross Headquarters were carried out in the various wards and convalescent houses as elaborately as conditions warranted.

Twenty ladies worked at the sewing room last Wednesday afternoon The making of layettes will be taken up this week. An invitation is given all ladies who desire to assist with the work.

PROVED SPIRIT OF DEMOCRACY

Voluntary Basis of Food Saving Showed Heart of America Beat True for Freedom.

To the voluntary service and sacrifice of the American people must be attributed the continued health, strength and morale of the Allied armies and the civil populace.

Upon this spirit of service and sacrifice will depend Europe's fate in the months to come. In the past year we have carried out an export program, the magnitude of which is almost beyond comprehension. But with the new demands that have come, with the liberation of nations freed from German oppression, our exports must be almost doubled. Instead of 11,000,000 tons, we must ship twenty million tons of food to Europe in the coming year—as much as can be pushed through our ports.

If the Allies had not been fed by America, it would have been impossible for them to maintain their defense against Germany.

Meeting this world need on a purely voluntary basis, the American people have conclusively proved that democracy is a success and that in time of need it will rise to its own defense.

If there were no other accomplishment to its credit the very fact that it has shown the strength of democracy has in itself more than justified the existence of the Food Administration in the eyes of the world.

Less than four months after the United States declared war the United States Food Administrator expressed his determination to meet America's food problem on a basis of voluntary action and reiterated his confidence that awakened democracy would prove irresistible.

"Many thinking Americans," said Mr. Hoover, "and the whole world have been watching anxiously the last four months in the fear that democratic America could not organize to meet autocratic Germany. Germany has been confident that it could not be done. Contrary proof is immediately at our door, and our people have already demonstrated their ability to mobilize, organize, endure and prepare voluntarily and efficiently in many directions and upon the mere word of inspiration aside from the remarkable assemblage of our Army and finances."

The history of the Food Administration has clearly shown that the trust of those who put their faith in democracy has not been misplaced.

Spencerville Son Dies On Way Home Aboard Ship.

Spencerville has again been called upon to offer up one of her noble sons for the cause of humanity, in the death of Owen Headley, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Headley, formerly of Newville township.

Word came Tuesday morning to the parents that Owen had died on his way home, and the message did not reveal anything that might lead to the cause. Perhaps within a day or so the family will receive full information.

Owen had been in active service in France. He left New York, September 17th. and landed at Glascow, Scotland on September 29th., then being transferred to several camps. He had been located at Preigney, France for quite a while. He was a member of the 309th. French Mortar Battery.

Chas. Cochran Writes.

Charles Cochran, of Elgin Watch Works, writes The News this week some interesting facts concerning the way the Elgin employees took hold of backing up the government. The company is employing nearly 3,300 people and the amount of W. S. S. pledged during the week of the campaign was $60,618.75 and when December 31, 1918 rolled around they had purchased $100,062.50, making on the average of $35.10 per person. Besides this the patriotic fund of the firm receives 1% from each employee's earning making nearly $10,000.00 per month, besides this they bought all four bonds. Mr. Cochran stated further that while he was at St. Joe making his visit, he heard some complaining as to how much they had to pay for the support of the war.

Well, we won't kick any more—the war is over.

AMONG OUR SICK

Mrs. Ada Bassett is quite ill.

Word has been received by the News to the effect that Mrs. Esther Engle, of Saranac Lake, N. Y., is not so well. Her many friends here wish her speedy recovery.

What Happened to Clark.

"Auburn friends of Clark Scholes former county surveyor, are just learning of the extent of the injuries he received while on the front line in France. In a letter just received he says that a shell fell in front of him and when it exploded the shrapnel struck him in many places. One piece hit him in the head, four struck his right side, four more hit his left arm and two more struck his left knee His left shoulder and arm were broken and he has a bad scar on his face."—The above article was taken from the Auburn paper. Mrs. Scholes informed us that he was to be operated on Monday, to remove some dead bone. He is now in Chicago.

Notice To The Public

The committee which planned the recent reception for our returned soldier boys, given under the auspices of the St. Joe Branch of the American Red Cross, with the consent of County Chairman, Knott, of Auburn, to use money from the local treasury to defray expense thus incurred. But upon investigation they have found it illegal to do so, and will ask the generous people of this town and community to assist by giving small amounts that the money may be raised at once.

Concord township may well be proud of her boys and give them the honor due them as they return from training camps and fields of conflict overseas.

The death was caused by an attack of Influenza.

The funeral was held at the home, north-west of St. Joe on last Wednesday afternoon, conducted by Rev. C. O. Johnson with E. R. Kinsey as director. Burial at Waterloo.

It's expensive to get sick now days, a doctor, a nurse and some times an undertaker. We believe you can avoid this by taking The One Day Doctor. See Dr. Sheffer.

New Druggist Arrived.

Chas. H. Rice, of Markle, Indiana, is now in St. Joe, arriving here about 4:30 Monday with two large truck loads of fixtures and stock with more to follow in a few days

Some few weeks ago Mr. Rice was here and rented the east room in the opera house block and arranged for the repairing of the rooms. Upon his arrival nothing had been done and now he has to make the repairs with his stock stored in the room, making it very inconvenient.

St. Joe surely rejoices because of the fact that a store of this kind has located here. Mr. Rice will put in a complete line of drugs, wall paper, sundries etc., that go to make an all round store.

Just when the store will be opened to the public is not known definitely, but such information will be given through the columns of The News.

Indiana is dry but why was Senator J. Glenn VanAuken of Auburn absent when the senate took a vote on this measure?

Found—A medicine, we believe to keep the Flu and colds away, "The One Day Doctor." Ask Dr. Sheffer for it.

A union birthday dinner was served at the home of Mrs. Sherman Rickett, last Thursday. Mrs. Orange Herrick being the other lady of honor. The two ladies make this event a very pleasant one each year and those attending outside of their families were Mrs. Hannah Ulm of St. Joe and Miss Maggie Jenkins of Guthrie Center, Iowa.

LESSON FOR HUMAN BEINGS

World Might Be Better If Mankind Would Copy the Doings of the Honey Ant.

An interesting resident of central Australia is the honey ant. This insect is found in dugouts going down as far as five or six feet. The opening is small, about an inch across, but if you did out one of the nests you will find tunnels and crosscuts running from the main shaft. In one or more of these chambers is found the true honey ant. The ordinary workers run the show as a co-operative concern. They collect the honey, bring it to the nest, and there feed it to certain members of the clan. The sweet stuff is forced into these animated pantries until the abdomen becomes so large that the remainder of the ant is a fly-speck on it. The swollen ones are absolutely helpless, and have to remain in the chambers. When the honey season slackens off the community falls back on their cold-storage supply. A prod in the abdomen of the honey ant, and that patient servant of the camp disgorges his accumulated fodder and once more resumes normal proportions.

MANY COMMON BIRDS USEFUL TO FARMERS.

The Little Girl Doesn't Think the Bluebird Could Ever Do Anybody Any Harm.

MANY BIRDS ARE USEFUL ON FARM

What It Eats Decides Whether Feathered Songster Is Beneficial or Injurious.

MANY FRIENDS OF FARMERS

Department of Agriculture Offers to Tell Agriculturist Whether Inhabitants of Fields Are Doing More Good Than Harm.

Whether a bird is beneficial or injurious to growing crops depends almost entirely upon what it eats. If it consumes harmful insects the bird is an ally of the farmer; if it feeds largely on growing crops it may be an enemy. Not all birds are beneficial, but the useful kinds far outnumber the injurious, and so great is their value as insect destroyers in the United States that to them the United States department of agriculture gives credit of being one of the greatest controlling factors in limiting the development of insect pests and in preventing many disastrous outbreaks.

In the case of species which are abundant or which feed to some extent on crops, the question of their average diet becomes one of supreme importance and only by stomach examinations can it be satisfactorily solved. Field observations have proved to be inconclusive. Birds are often accused of eating this or that product of cultivation, when an examination of the stomachs shows the accusation to be false.

Aid Offered to Farmers.

The biological survey of the United States department of agriculture has conducted in the past few years a systematic investigation of the food of the species most common about farms and gardens and offers to supply information to any farmer in doubt as to whether his birds are an asset or a liability.

Within certain limits birds eat the kind of food that is most accessible, especially when their natural food is scarce or wanting. Thus they sometimes injure the crops of the farmer who has unintentionally destroyed their natural food in his improvement of swamp or pasture. Much of the damage done by birds and complained of by farmers and fruit growers arises from this very cause. The berry-bearing shrubs and seed-bearing weeds have been cleared away, and the birds have no recourse but to attack the cultivated grain or fruit which has replaced their natural food supply.

Destroy Many Insects.

The great majority of land birds subsist upon insects during the period of nesting and molting, and also feed their young upon them during the first few weeks. Many species live almost entirely upon insects, taking vegetable food only when other subsistence fails. It is thus evident that in the course of a year birds destroy an incalculable number of insects, and it is difficult to overestimate the value of their services in restraining the great tide of insect life.

In winter, in the northern part of the country, insects become scarce or entirely disappear. Many species of birds, however, remain during the cold season and are able to maintain life by eating vegetable food, as the seeds of weeds. Here again is another useful function of birds in destroying these weed seeds and thereby lessening the growth of the next year.

Farms Way to Success.

On farm demonstration work and the careful study and practice of the best farm methods is what a former store clerk in Texas bases his claim to success. This man, tiring of indoor life, got in touch with the state extension service and started in to farm. All the money he had was $150, but there was no lack of energy and ambition in his makeup—and that goes a long way in farming.

That $150, hard-earned money, too, was the first payment on 100 acres; and a very poor horse and one cow comprised the initial live stock.

Nerve and integrity, though, answered as security for another horse, and careful management and good financial judgment produced results sufficient to enable this hard-working demonstrator to make the second payment on his place in the fall. This was largely from receipts from butter, chickens and eggs.

This is the account of the rest of the achievements, told by the county agent:

"The second year he bought a better team and was enabled to cultivate his crop in the better way, as he expressed it. The second year he met his third payment and had some surplus funds left and was in a position to go on a cash basis the next year. The fourth payment on his farm was met promptly and with a larger surplus of money than before. Besides, he had a number of good cows, hogs and horses, and a flock of chickens and turkeys. From this year's work he had sold $1,050 worth of cotton and seed, marketed $720 worth of feed, besides having enough on hand for farm use next year, sold $40 worth of poultry and now has over 100 hens on the farm. He has sufficient hogs for his meat and will offer for sale about $200 worth besides.

"He has on the farm $500 worth of horse stock, has some good milch cows and has $1,250 on deposit to his credit in the local bank. He is erecting a little house and says that the farm and its happy associations are good enough for him. The vital point of this story of this farmer's operations during the past four years is that he has paid for his farm, is free from debt, and has placed himself upon a cash basis, and has accumulated a surplus while a neighbor on an adjoining farm of 640 acres is barely making a living."

Some Birds Generally Useful

It is in their relation to insect and other enemies to crops that birds are most directly associated with the welfare of man. It is not possible to give a hard-and-fast rule, applicable to the whole country, as to whether any certain bird is beneficial or injurious to farmers, but in the United States department of agriculture's farmers' bulletin 630, "Some Common Birds Useful to the Farmer," more than 50 species of birds common to farming sections are discussed. The birds treated in the bulletin are:

Bluebird, robin, titmouse, wren, brown thrasher, catbird, swallow, towhee, sparrow, house finch, grackle, brewer blackbird, Baltimore oriole, Bullock's oriole, meadowlark, red-winged blackbird, bobolink, crow, blue-jay, Pacific Coast jay, phoebe, kingbird, nighthawk, woodpecker, cuckoo and bobwhite.

Bull Associations.

The first bull association in the United States was organized in 1908 by the Michigan Agricultural college. It was a co-operative venture similar to those which have existed in Europe for a long time. On July 1, 1917, there were in this country 98 active associations in 17 states, with a total membership of 1,158, owning 189 pure-bred bulls. These co-operative organizations enable the owners of small herds to unite in the purchase of one good bull, so that each may own a share in a registered sire of high quality. Though still in its infancy, the co-operative bull association movement promises to become eventually a very great factor in the improvement of dairy cattle in the United States.

LESSON FOR JANUARY 19

THE PASSOVER.

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 12:1-36.

GOLDEN TEXT—For even Christ our passover was sacrificed for us. I Corinthians 5:7.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Psalms 105: 26-38; Matthew 26:26-29; Hebrews 11:28.

I. The Passover Instituted (12:1-23).

1. The time set (v. 2). With the institution of the Passover came a change in the order of time. The common year was rolling on as usual, but with reference to his chosen people the order is interrupted and everything is made to date from this. This signifies that redemption is the first step in real life. "Old things have passed away, all things have become new." Before this the man was dead in trespass and sin; now he has arisen to walk in newness of life. All before redemption counts for naught. The world thinks that real life ends when one accepts Christ, but this is a grave mistake. It is the beginning of real life.

2. The lamb set apart (v. 3). This previous setting apart of the lamb typifies the foreordination of Christ to be our Saviour. Redemption was not an afterthought of God (I Peter 1:18-20). This lamb must be a male without blemish, indicating that it must be both representative and perfect.

3. The lamb was killed by the whole congregation (v. 6). This shows that it was not for the individual only, but for the entire assembly. The setting apart of the lamb was not sufficient, it must be killed, for "without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins." The lamb might have been tied to the door of the Israelites that night, but there would have been no salvation, notwithstanding its perfection. Had Christ's spotless life continued till the present time and his matchless teaching gone on without interruption, not a single soul would have been saved, for "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die it abideth alone." (John 12:24).

4. The blood of the slain lamb was to be placed upon the sideposts and lintels of the door (v. 7). It was not sprinkled upon the threshold, as it must not be trampled under foot (Hebrews 10:29). When the destroyer passed through the land he passed over the houses where the door posts were sprinkled with blood. This blood was the evidence that a substitute had been offered for them. They could rest absolutely secure, because the matter had been settled according to divine arrangement. The blood was the ground of peace. The assurance is not when you feel your sins are pardoned, but "when I see the blood I will pass over you."

5. Israel feeding upon the lamb (vv. 8-10). This denotes fellowship. Judgment must precede feasting. The eating of unleavened bread signifies that no sin is connected or allowed in fellowship with Christ. All who have entered into the power of the cross will put away sin.

6. They ate the passover ready for action (v. 11). The loins being girt about, betokens separation from sin and preparation and readiness for service. The feet being shod indicates their willingness to leave the land. The staff in the hand indicates their nature as pilgrims leaning upon a support outside of themselves. They were to leave behind them the place of death and darkness and march toward the promised land.

7. The uncircumcised denied participation in the feast (vv. 43-49). Circumcision was typical of regeneration. The significance of the requirement is that only those who have become new creatures by the power of the cross have a right to sit at the Passover feast.

II. The Significance of the Passover (12:24-28).

It was a memorial institution, calling to mind the deliverance of the Israelites from Egyptian bondage—God's interposition on their behalf, freeing them from their oppression. This was to be taught to their children when they came into the land, from generation to generation.

III. The Awful Judgment (12:29, 30).

That night the destroyer passed through Egypt and slew the first born in every home where the blood was not found. An awful cry went up from Egypt that night.

IV. The Great Deliverance (12:31-36).

So mighty was this stroke that Pharaoh called for Moses in the night and requested him to be gone with his flocks and herds.

Inward Liberty.

No good action will hinder thee, if thou be inwardly free from inordinate affection. If thou intend and seek nothing else but the will of God and the good of thy neighbor, thou shalt thoroughly enjoy inward liberty.—Thomas a Kempis.

One Eternal Lesson.

The world is not a playground; it is a schoolroom. Life is not a holiday, but an education. And the one eternal lesson for us all is how better we can live.

NO ROOM FOR PESSIMISM

Canada as a Nation Builder.

With Canada's great task in the war before the public, the burdens that she so willingly took and so ably carried, and her recent victory in subscribing $175,000,000 to the 5th Victory Bond Loan more than she asked, he would be a skeptic who would associate the word pessimism with her present condition. Canada deplores the heavy human loss which she has suffered, but even those akin to those lost in battle say with cheerfulness that while the sacrifice was great, the cause was wonderful, and accept their sufferings with grace. It may well be said there is no room in Canada today for the pessimist. The agricultural production of the country has doubled in four years. $140,000,000 are the railway earnings today or 3½ times what they were ten years ago, while the bank deposits are now $1,733,000,000 as compared with $133,000,000 thirty years ago.

There is a wonderful promise for the future.

It is with buoyancy that Canada faces an era of peace. She has triumphed over the soul-testing crisis of war. Before the war Canada was a borrower, and expected to continue so for many years. For the past year and a half we have seen her finance herself. She has also been furnishing credits to other nations.

A recent article in the "Boston Transcript" says:

"The people at home have not been lagging behind the boys at the front in courage, resourcefulness and efficiency. The development of Canada's war industry is an industrial romance of front rank. American Government officials can testify to the efficiency of the manufacturing plant Canada has built up in four short years. In Department after Department where they found American industry failed them they were able to turn to Canada. The full story may be revealed some day."

The same paper says:

"It is a new Canada that emerges from the world war in 1918—a nation transformed from that which entered the conflict in 1914.

"The war has taken from Canada a cruel toll. More than 50,000 of her bravest sons lie in soldiers' graves in Europe. Three times that number have been more or less incapacitated by wounds. The cost of the war in money is estimated to be already $1,100,000,000. These are not light losses for a country of 8,000,000 people. Fortunately there is also a credit side. Canada has found herself in this war. She has discovered not merely the gallantry of her soldiers, but the brains and capacity and efficiency of her whole people. In every branch, in arms, in industry, in finance, she has had to measure her wits against the world, and in no case has Canada reason to be other than gratified."—Advertisement.

A Coated Tongue! What it Means

A bad breath, coated tongue, bad taste in the mouth, languor and debility, are usually signs that the liver is out of order. PROF. HEMMETER says: "The liver is an organ secondary in importance only to the heart."

We can manufacture poisons within our own bodies which are as deadly as a snake's venom.

The liver acts as a guard over our well-being, sifting out the cinders and ashes from the general circulation.

A blockade in the intestines piles a heavy burden upon the liver. If the intestines are choked or clogged up, the circulation of the blood becomes poisoned and the system becomes loaded with toxic waste, and we suffer from headache, yellow-coated tongue, bad taste in mouth, nausea, or gas, acid dyspepsia, languor, debility, yellow skin or eyes. At such times one should take a pleasant laxative. Such a one is made of May-apple, leaves of aloe, jalap, put into ready-to-use form by Doctor Pierce, nearly fifty years ago, and sold for 25 cents by all druggists as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

STOCKTON, CALIF.—"For constipation, sick headache, an inactive liver, indigestion and biliousness there is nothing to equal Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. I have tried other things but like the 'Pellets' best of any."—MRS. F. CASFIELD, 329 S. Grant Street.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ½ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off. Adv.

Why Meat Prices Vary in Different Stores

Prime steers	$18.90@20.35
Good to choice steers	17.00@19.85
Common to medium steers	10.75@16.75
Yearlings, fair to fancy	14.00@19.90
Fat cows and heifers	9.45@15.35
Canning cows and heifers	7.25@ 8.85
Bulls, plain to best	6.50@12.50
Poor to fancy calves	6.00@15.75
Western range steers	10.00@13.00

These newspaper quotations represent live cattle prices in Chicago on December 30th, 1918.

The list shows price ranges on nine general classified groups with a spread of $13.85 per cwt. —the lowest at $6.50 and the highest at $20.35.

Why this variation in price?

Because the meat from different animals varies greatly in quality and weight.

Although the quotations shown are in nine divisions, Swift & Company grades cattle into 34 general classes, and each class into a variety of weights and qualities.

As a result of these differences in cattle prices, (due to differences in weights and meat qualities), there is a range of 15 cents in Swift & Company's selling prices of beef carcasses.

These facts explain:

1—Why retail prices vary in different stores.

2—Why it would be difficult to regulate prices of cattle or beef.

3—Why it requires experts to judge cattle and to sell meat, so as to yield the profit of only a fraction of a cent a pound—a profit too small to affect prices.

GOOD ENOUGH TO PASS ON.

These suggestions are offered by the New York Sun:

We have not the means of verifying the estimate of the brewers that 10,000 saloons in this city go out of business because of the executive ban on beer, but the figure is round and fascinating and suggestive.

Ten thousand bartenders are welcome in essential industry, if not in the army.

Ten thousand hardwood bars could be turned into gun stocks, ship's furniture and peace conference tables.

Ten thousand sets of mirrors, placed in the cantonments, would add to the joy of the man putting on his first suit of olive drab.

Ten thousand brass footrails would be received by the shell factories with loud cheers.

Ten thousand groups of "private stock" bottles could be used as ketchup containers.

Ten thousand bungstarters could be adapted to shipyard use for the driving home of wooden keys. One of these interesting weapons might be sent to the Historical society.

Then thousand slates, after careful washing, could be used in schools.

Ten thousand vacated saloons—what is the increased value, in money alone, of the buildings in which they nestled?

AS TO HOME MANUFACTURE.

Replying to the contention of the liquorites that with nation-wide prohibition private stills and kitchen barrooms will spring up all over the land, the National Advocate very wisely and pertinently says:

"Proven facts as to moonshine whisky making, and the effects of it, do not justify the public operation of distilleries and breweries. A private still to every square mile of Southern territory could not be so bad for this country as one public brewery in every county, under a law of the nation approving it and sharing its profits. Evil that is banned by law remains a thing of rebellious purpose, but it can never be so disastrous to the life of a people as an evil made lawful under the statute, and constantly corroding the character of men, the purity of their legislation, the strength of their common government."

BEER CRIMINOLOGY.

A woman physician, Dr. Mary F Cushman, of Maine, writes as follows:

"If anything has ever demonstrated the evil of beer drinking, it is surely the present war. Years ago, when specializing in mental and nervous diseases, I was taught that alienists had proved the crimes for which distilled liquors were responsible, are crimes of passion unpremeditated, and often a horror to the perpetrator when he recovers from the effects of his drink. The habitual use of malt liquors, however, so affects the moral sense as to lead to deliberate crimes, carefully planned, coolly executed, without compunction or remorse. Germany, the great beer-drinking nation, has simply illustrated this in a war conducted along the above lines of beer criminology. What does our nation want of the drink that makes men capable of the atrocities perpetrated by Germany?"

COAL PRODUCTION REDUCED BY DRINK.

In the mines of the Pittsburgh Vein Operators' Association of Ohio there was a loss of 80,000 tons in coal production on July 5 caused by liquor drinking on the Fourth of July.

The University of California has issued a bulletin which states that the wine and table grapes of California, now worth $4,000,000, would be worth $8,000,000 if converted into grape sirup.—Patriotic Phalanx.

WEAK KIDNEYS MEAN A WEAK BODY

When you're fifty, your body begins to creak a little at the hinges. Motion is more slow and deliberate. "Not so young as I used to be" is a frequent and unwelcome thought. Certain bodily functions upon which good health and good spirits so much depend, are impaired. The weak spot is generally the bladder. Unpleasant symptoms show themselves. Painful and annoying complications in other organs arise. This is particularly true with elderly people. If you only know how, this trouble can be obviated.

For over 200 years GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil has been relieving the inconvenience and pain due to advancing years. It is a standard, old-time home remedy, and needs no introduction. It is now put up in odorless, tasteless capsules. These are easier and more pleasant to take than the oil in bottles.

Each capsule contains about one dose of five drops. Take them just like you would any pill, with a small swallow of water. They soak into the system and throw off the poisons which are making you old before your time. They will quickly relieve those stiffened joints, that backache, rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, gall stones, gravel, "brick dust," etc. They are an effective remedy for all diseases of the bladder, kidney, liver, stomach and allied organs.

GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules cleanse the kidneys and purify the blood. They frequently ward off attacks of the dangerous and fatal diseases of the kidneys. They have a beneficial effect, and often completely cure the diseases of the bodily organs, allied with the bladder and kidneys.

If you are troubled with soreness across the loins or with "simple" aches and pains in the back take warning, it may be the preliminary indications of some dreadful malady which can be warded off or cured if taken in time.

Go to your druggist today and get a box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. Money refunded if they do not help you. Three sizes. GOLD MEDAL are the pure, original imported Haarlem Oil Capsules. Accept No Substitutes.—Adv.

Chamberlain's Tablets

FROM The BOYS in SERVICE

December 11, 1918.
Hq. 3rd Field Artillery.
American E. F.

Dearest Folks:

I expect you're beginning to wonder what has become of me as it was a week ago last night that I wrote you the last short line telling you we were leaving Liffol-C-Grand the next morning for our overland trip through France.

We arrived here at our new location yesterday at about 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and to say the least, we were good and tired through and through, every mother's son of us, and you would have laughed to have seen us walk.

Our trip was 167 kilometers in extent. We travelled down the valley of the Marne the first four days and the last three days we were in the valley of the Seine. It certainly was a beautiful land where the divide was between the two valleys, and had it not been for the tired feet, and sore and aching legs we would have been enjoying it a thousand times more than what we did, but you may imagine when you are on some of the most beautiful, white roads imaginable, lined on either side with pretty trees planted at equal intervals, and can look down across the valley below, and see three, four and five little French villages nestled away at the foot of a protecting mountain range, and can see for miles and miles, you're seeing something very grand. Our route led us through the following towns at which we spent the night: The first day we marched from Liffol-C-Grand to St. Thieboult, 17 kilometers, and I was lucky enough, along with Sgt. Major Pegley, to get to sleep in a bed that night. The next day we marched to Montigny-le-Roi, 23 kilometers away, or rather that was where we were supposed to spend the night, but we were marched 7 kilometers on beyond that, and slept on a wooden floor of a hay loft that night. The next day we went to a little town near Langres, a distance of 25 kilometers, passing at the foot of the high hill on which the ancient city, walled and fortified, of Langres is situated. There is a narrow gauged cog wheel railway leading from the base of the hill to the top, and an immense German prison camp is located at its base. We slept in a hay mow on the hay that night. The next day we traveled to Auberine, and went 26 kilometers that hike, sleeping again in a hay mow in a barn on the outskirts of the town. The next day, Sunday we went 21 kilometers to the city of Recy-S-Ource and camped out on a hillside in shelter-tents that night, attending church services in the Y. M. C. A. in town in the evening. The next day we went 23 kilometers to Meulson, where part of the organization stopped, but we had 9 kilometers more to make before they found us a place in which to sleep on the ground in some old American barracks. The last day we finished our trip, coming by way of Baigneux-les-Juifs to our new home, a little town by the name of Lucenay-le-Duc, we being the first American soldiers ever here. The people treat us fine. I have secured a single bed to sleep in and consider mysely extremely lucky, as they are very scarce, they having had difficulty in securing enough for all officers.

It rained three days of our hike. But we kept plodding along just the same, with heavy feet but a light heart, for there was always plenty of mud to stick to our shoes but always the thought in our mind that the longest lane has an ending and we all looked forward to the end of our journey with pleasure Some of the fellows were not able to hike only two days until their feet gave out, they not being used to that variety of exercise, and they were then given a doctor's permit to ride on a wagon. I walked every step of the way, but I can tell you it took some gritting of my teeth to do the stunt.

The first night after we reached this place, I slept on some straw in an attic, which was plenty hard, and the next day two of us started out looking for a good, French bed in which to sleep, as we expect to be situated in this town several weeks, and I wanted to get located as comfortably as possible. Well, we plodded all over this town without any success, and finally I cornered a young fellow coming down the alley in which we were standing, and I told him what we wanted. He studied quite awhile, and finally said for us to wait there until he returned. He was gone nearly twenty minutes, and then came and told us to go with him. He led us to his home, and took us in His mother began scolding him at once, and we thought it was because she didn't wish us here, but finally we found out it was because he brought two of us and the bed was only large enough for one. It looked dirty and untidy, someone having been sleeping in it, but I decided to tackle it. I went away and got some belongings, and then returned. The madam had changed all the bed clothes, and it was as fine and tidy a comfortable bed as any one could desire. I sat out in the living room during the evening. The old lady sits and knits, the old gentleman sits by the fireplace in a corner and smokes, his soldier son, who is now home on furlough sits at the table and plays cards with an old much be-whiskered neighbor who comes in each evening, the younger one sits at one end of the table watching them play cards, and grins at me every time I look at him and wink my eye (for he was the one who I asked concerning the room,) and the daughter, an unmarried lady of 25 or 26 teaches me French or crochets. This is the evening's program. When I was ready to go to bed, they bade me take off my leggins and shoes by the fireside and warm my feet well before retiring, and then gave me a pair of bed room slippers to slip on. They awakened me at 7 o'clock this morning, brought bowl, water, soap and towel into my room for me, and when I came out to put on my shoes, I found a pleasant surprise awaiting me. The lady had cleaned all the mud off my shoes and greased them with tallow. She gave me a great big bowl of milk to drink before I went up to breakfast, and this evening fixed hot water for me to use for shaving. So you see I am not suffering any at all We are the first American soldiers ever billeted in this town, that probably accounts for the extra fine treatment, for as the saying goes, "A new broom sweeps clean." I am enjoying myself immensely. They have two cats and a dog, and think all the world of them. They eat and drink out of the same dishes and pail without hesitation.

We have seen no snow yet, except a little sleet one day that wasn't snow. It is not very cold now. We have a nice warm fire by which to work in our office. I received a letter from you, papa, two days ago giving the election returns. Seems funny the way the democrats were beaten. What was the cause? I am glad that Baltz and Hathaway were elected. I also heard from you the same day, grandma. Very glad you were able to get away and see aunt Hatt. You people must have been disappointed when you first heard the war was over, and then learned the report was untrue, but I know about how you felt a few days later when it really was true. It is getting late, so I will close for this time, trusting this finds you all as well as it leaves me. May God bless you all.

Your loving son,
Willie G. Woodcox.

P. S. Haifley, Place and I are all in the same town now.

December 3, 1918.

Dear Father:—

Picked up a copy of the Stars and Stripes today, which was about two weeks old and saw in there the account on Father's Christmas letters and found that yours will have to be late. We are up here in the Vosiges mountains and we get no papers and it was only by luck that I ran onto this paper down at the Adjutants office. We are taking things pretty easy here. Practicing marching parades etc. Only about four or five hours each day. Somewhat different than when we used to put in the twenty-four. I suppose it might interest you some if I told you some of my experiences in France. We landed on November 1st. at St. Nasaire. We lay there five days and then went to a little town near Ligny in eastern France. Stayed there a month and in December hiked to Aprey about fifteen miles south of Langres. Stayed there until February 15, when we went to trenches with Luneville as division headquarters. Stayed in thirty days and came out for 4 days and went back in until some time in June. Using Baccaent as division headquarters. We moved out got new clothes and moved up near Chalon. On the Fourth of July we were hiking in the sector near Smppes. We lay until the night of July 14 when our fun started. The morning of the 15th. in front of us the Dutch had thirty observation balloons and about 60 aeroplanes whissing over our heads all the time. Our orders were to hold to the last. They came on us five times and we stayed. On the eighteenth we left the sector and with one day's rest and two days team ride and a fifty mile ride in trucks we found ourselves up against the Dutch at Chateau Thierry. We drove them across the Orcq river and in fifteen kilometers Our company was front line and was twice shot up. Once with machine gun and once with artillery. We retired, did ten days in reserve and loaded on the team with the promise of a rest. We went to Soulaicourt received replacements and started hiking at hight. Hiked to Toul and went over to St. Mihel. Was a walk away there. Was sent to school from there and left school November 1st Went thru Paris, stayed one day and reported to this Infantry just one day before the armistice was signed. We hiked back about forty kilometers and are simply living here.

Haven't received any mail since I left the regiment in September. I sure hope this finds you well and take things quiet and don't worry about me as I am all O. K. Had a fine Thanksgiving dinner. Well I must close and according to dope be sailing some time before spring.

Ever your son,
Forrest Kain.

Millions Making Cough Medicine at Home and Saving 400 Per Cent.

Why Pay an Extra Price When You Can Get Glando Pine —Same Quality, Same Quantity—and at the Same Old Price?

For 35c you can get 8 ounces of Glando Pine. Mix it with good syrup or strained honey enough to make a pint, and you will have the best cough medicine you ever used. It can't be beat for coughs, colds, hoarseness, throat irritation or croup. Glando Pine relieves the spasmodic coughing in whooping cough. Children love to take it. To prevent a cold from developing into pneumonia or bronchitis, hold a teaspoonful of Glando Pine well back in the mouth and take a few deep breaths before swallowing it. You can feel the air cells opening up and you will breathe deep and easy.

Mrs. W. M. J. Fellers, of Lima, Ohio, says: "I took cold, which developed into a severe cough. It hung on for several months. I coughed terribly, especially at night. I lived in a flat and my neighbors, believing me to have tuberculosis, asked the owner of the flat to have me move out, which he did. I used different remedies, but found no relief until I used Glando Pine. The first dose seemed to help me. I began gaining flesh; and by the time I had used two bottles, my cough was gone. Over a year has passed and my cough has not returned. I believe Glando Pine saved my life."

Glando Pine is manufactured by the Glando-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind.

MEAT PRODUCERS DID FULL DUTY

Increase in American Hogs Will Help to Meet World Fat Shortage.

FARMERS SAVE SITUATION.

Government Justified in Stimulation of Pork Production—Sevenfold Increase Over Pre-War Exports.

Through increased production and conservation we will be able this year to export seven times our pre-war average exports of pork products. With the heavy demands added in caring for the millions who have been freed from German oppression, the Department of Agriculture and the Food Administration are justified today in our every action of stimulation of hog production. In the coming year the greatest world shortage will be in fats, and pork will help to save this situation. The efficacy of the policy of stimulated production has built up in this country supplies which will enable us to supply a very large part of the fat deficiency of the world. In beef there must be a shortage in Europe, due largely to limited refrigerator ship capacity. All freezer ships available, however, will be filled by America, Argentine and Australia.

The contribution made by the producers of this country to the war program as applying particularly to animal food products is illustrated by the following:

Reports compiled by the U. S. Department of Agriculture indicate an increase in cattle of 10,238,000 head and 12,441,000 hogs. These figures were compiled to January 1 last.

In this period there was a decrease in sheep of 819,000 head. The indications are that this decrease will show an increase, according to recent reports.

Since January 1 unofficial information indicates an increase in hogs of not less than 8 per cent. and not more than 15 per cent. as compared with one year ago, with an increase in the average weight.

Following the request of the U. S. Food Administration for an increase in hog production for marketing in the fall of 1918 and the spring of 1919 the increase may yield not less than 1,600,000,000 pounds more of pork products than were available last year. Without this increase the shipping program arranged by Mr. Hoover regarding animal food products would have been impossible.

The dressed hog products during the three months ending September 30, 1917, amounted to 903,172,000 pounds, while for the corresponding months of 1918 the dressed hog products totaled 1,277,589,000, an increase of over 374,000,000 pounds for the quarter.

During the same period for 1917 the records of inspected slaughter of dressed beef showed 1,263,000,000 pounds as against 1,454,000,000 pounds for the three month period ending September 1, this year.

KEPT PLEDGE TO SEND BREAD

American Nation Maintained Allied Loaf Through Self-Denial at Home Table.

AVERTED EUROPEAN DESPAIR.

With Military Demands Upon Ocean Shipping Relieved, World Is Able to Return to Normal White Wheat Bread.

Since the advent of the latest wheat crop the only limitation upon American exports to Europe has been the shortage of shipping. Between July 1 and October 10 we shipped 65,980,305 bushels. If this rate should continue until the end of the fiscal year we will have furnished the Allies with more than 237,500,000 bushels of wheat and flour in terms of wheat.

The result of increased production and conservation efforts in the United States has been that with the cessation of hostilities we are able to return to a normal wheat diet. Supplies that have accumulated in Australia, Argentine and other hitherto inaccessible markets may be tapped by ships released from transport service, and European demand for American wheat probably will not exceed our normal surplus. There is wheat enough available to have a white loaf at the common table.

But last year the tale was different. Only by the greatest possible saving and sacrifice were we able to keep a steady stream of wheat and flour moving across the sea. We found ourselves at the beginning of the harvest year with an unusually short crop. Even the most optimistic statisticians figured that we had a bare surplus of 20,000,000 bushels. And yet Europe was facing the probability of a bread famine—and in Europe bread is by far the most important article in the diet.

All of this surplus had left the country early in the fall. By the first of the year we had managed to ship a little more than 50,000,000 bushels by practicing the utmost economy at home—by wheatless days, wheatless meals, heavy substitution of other cereals and by sacrifice at almost every meal throughout the country.

In January the late Lord Rhondda, then British Food Controller, cabled that only if we sent an additional 75,000,000 bushels before July 1 could he take the responsibility of assuring his people that they would be fed.

The response of the American people was 85,000,000 bushels safely delivered overseas between January 1 and July 1. Out of a harvest which gave us only 20,000,000 bushels surplus we actually shipped 141,000,000 bushels.

Thus did America fulfill her pledge that the Allied bread rations could be maintained, and already the American people are demonstrating that, with an awakened war conscience, last year's figures will be bettered.

St. Joe Wins

St. Joe High School Basket Ball stock has soared a few points since Friday night when the local cagers took the Spencerville High School team across by a comfortable margin. There was nothing but the friendliest feeling thruout the game, a thing we were delighted to see. Both teams put up a good brand of ball and the large crowd seemed well pleased. The preliminary game was staged by a pickup team of Spencerville and one of the same kind of St. Joe. The latter were defeated 10 to 5.

Corunna High School plays here Friday night, January 17.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Paulding, Paulding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

FAITH JUSTIFIED BY EVENTS.

I do not believe that drastic force need be applied to maintain economic distribution and sane use of supplies by the great majority of American people, and I have learned a deep and abiding faith in the intelligence of the average American business man, whose aid we anticipate and depend on to remedy the evils developed by the war.—Herbert Hoover, August 10, 1917.

Be Proud to be a food saver

Our exports since this country entered the war have justified a statement made by the Food Administration shortly after its conception, outlining the principles and policies that would govern the solution of this country's food problems.

"The whole foundation of democracy," declared the Food Administration, "lies in the individual initiative of its people and their willingness to serve the interests of the nation with complete self effacement in the time of emergency. Democracy can yield to discipline, and we can solve this food problem for our own people and for the Allies in this way. To have done so will have been a greater service than our immediate objective, for we have demonstrated the rightfulness of our faith and our ability to defend ourselves without being Prussianized."

Sending to Europe 141,000,000 bushels of wheat from a surplus of apparently nothing was the outstanding exploit of the American food army in the critical year of the war.

GREATEST OPPORTUNITY WOMEN EVER HAD.

It was given to the women of this country to perform the greatest service in the winning of the war vouchsafed to any women in the history of the wars of the world—to feed the warriors and the war sufferers. By the arts of peace, the practice of simple, homely virtues the womanhood of a whole nation served humanity in its profoundest struggle for peace and freedom.

FIRST CALL TO FOOD ARMY.

This co-operation and service I ask of all in full confidence that America will render more for flag and freedom than king ridden people surrender at compulsion.—Herbert Hoover, August 10, 1917.

A year ago voluntary food control was a daring adventure in democracy; during the year an established proof of democratic efficiency.

SOLONS BEGIN GRIND

Seventy-First Session of Law-Making Body Opens.

Many Important Bills Dealing With Reconstruction Problems Ready to Be Introduced.

Indianapolis.—The seventy-first Indiana state legislature now is in full swing, the opening of the session the past week, with the many recommendation of Gov. James P. Goodrich, affording much food for thought, in addition to the vast amount of other business that will be brought to the attention of the law-makers.

The rules of the 1917 session will prevail until the new rules committee reports and new rules are adopted.

It was decided that the patronage committee may employ a maximum of 29 persons, and such others as may be needed in the engrossing room now being planned for the two houses.

The women, who are guiding the woman suffrage bark through the session, scored their first direct victory immediately after Governor Goodrich ceased rending his message to the joint session. Before the joint session could adjourn, Senator John S. Alldridge of Anderson introduced a joint resolution providing that the Indiana legislature should memorialize the senate of the United States to pass immediately the equal suffrage amendment to the Constitution, in order that the Indiana legislature might ratify it at this session. The resolution was adopted.

It is understood that two "blue sky" bills have been prepared for early presentation to the house and senate. It has also been stated that the motion picture men of the state have a measure ready for presentation providing for the legalizing of Sunday motion picture exhibitions.

Hospital for Randolph.

Indianapolis.—Randolph county is to have a hospital. The trustees of the Hetty Vorhis Home for Aged Women have deeded the home to the board of county commissioners and it will be known as the Randolph County hospital. The county will build an addition, which will be used as an operating room. In 1914 Mrs. Vorhis deeded to a board of five trustees 240 acres of land and her city residence, besides several thousand dollars. The money was to be used in the purchasing of a site and erecting the home. Teh home was opened in the fall of 1915, but in the three years of its exitsence only a few elderly women availed themselves of the opportunity of entering it.

For Highway Commission.

Indianapolis.—The state highway commission bill, as finally approved by the special committee of Republican members of both houses of the state legislature, and also by many civic and commercial bodies of the state, was submitted by Luke W. Duffey, senator from Marion county, to L. W. Henley, secretary of the Republican state committee, who will have it printed and distributed to the majority members of the legislature.

Action on Highway Matters.

Indianapolis.—Resolutions indorsing the highway commission bill and urging its passage by the state legislature and another emphasizing the importance of the road schools at Purdue university in the highway improvement plan of the state, were adopted at the annual meetings of the County Surveyors' association and the County Highway Superintendents' association, which were held in connection with the fifth annual road school at Lafayette.

Open Emergency Hospital.

Indianapolis.—Influenza is again giving the authorities of Indiana university at Bloomington some trouble. It has been found necessary to open an emergency hospital for girl students in the student building. An nouncement is made that it will not be necessary to close the school.

Suffrage Day January 18.

"Suffrage day" in Indiana will be celebrated January 18 with a single purpose—to raise money for suffrage; specifically, to put through the legislative program of the Woman's Franchise League of Indiana. This is the plan announced by the state organization.

May Erect Memorial Colosseum.

Indianapolis.—A committee representing the General Memorial association of Indianapolis has informed Mayor Charles W. Jewett that the association will support the mayor's plan for the erection of a colosseum to be known as Liberty hall, as a memorial to the Marion county heroes, living and dead, who participated in the world war.

State Lumber Dealers to Meet.

Indianapolis.—The Retail Lumber Dealers' association of Indiana has completed the program for its annual convention, which will be held in Indianapolis on January 22 and 23. Joe Mitchell Chapple, editor of the National Magazine, Boston, will speak at the association's dinner on January 23. Speakers at the convention sessions will include Ben H. Vardaman of Des Moines, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of the United States, and L. R. Putnam of New Orleans.

Want a State Weighmaster.

Indianapolis.—The midwinter meeting of the Indiana Millers' association has been called for January 17, and the annual meeting of the Indiana Grain Dealers' association for January 21 and 22, both associations to hold their sessions at the Board of Trade building. The two associations are especially interested in a bill to be presented to the state legislature which would provide for official weighmasters for weighing farm, mine and manufactured products in counties, cities, towns and townships.

The proposed measure provides that the state commissioner of weights and measures shall prescribe all rules and regulations concerning the duties of all official weighmasters, defining the form of weight certificates to be used by them, the fees, if any, to be charged by them and the bond to be executed for the faithful performance of their duties.

Another bill which is to be pushed by the grain men is a measure which proposes to direct the public service commission to supervise and direct the leasing of certain real estate owned or controlled by the railroads and electric interurban railways. This has to do chiefly with grain elevators erected on railroad ground.

Child Hygiene Bureau.

Indianapolis.—The state board of health is considering establishing a child hygiene bureau as a department of the board.

The bureau will probably be in the charge of Dr. Ada Sweitzer, who has been with the state board for a number of years, but within the last year was lent to the United States children's bureau.

It is proposed tentatively to have the bureau organize child hygiene commissions in each county. The commissions would be centers for the dissemination of health encouragement for children.

"There are too many short graves in Indiana," said Dr. John N. Hurty, secretary of the state board. "Children's health is the greatest problem in our line today. If we can do more for child health we will be called on to do less for adult public wards."

The board may ask the legislature for a $10,000 appropriation to put the bureau and its plan into operation.

It is declared that the plan for a child hygiene bureau is in line with the policies of the most progressive states.

Indiana 1917 Fire Losses.

Indianapolis.—The Indiana report of fire losses for the year 1917, compiled by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, shows an increase in losses over 1916 of 31 per cent. The report released by the National Board of Fire Underwriters shows losses in Indiana are eighth in a list of 20 states. The 1917 loss in strictly preventable fires was $1,864,621, as compared with a loss of $1,500,081 in 1916. Losses in 1917 from partly preventable fires amounted to $2,843,792, as compared with $1,991,305 in 1916. Losses in 1917 from fires probably largely preventable amounted to $1,026,364, as compared with $893,107 in 1916. The total fire loss in Indiana for 1917 was $5,734,777, as compared with $4,374,492 for 1916. The average amount of claims paid as the result of fires in 1917 was $372.41, as compared with $317.89 in 1916.

As compared with other states showing increased fire losses in 1917, Indiana is eighth in a group of 20 states.

Withhold Market Highway Approval.

Indianapolis.—Indorsement of proposals for the Highways Industrial association for the establisment of federal control of the construction and maintenance of main market highways was withheld by the good roads committee of the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, after forms of resolutions supplied by the association had been discussed. A resolution was adopted that the sense of the committee favors the control for construction and maintenance of roads of Indiana under a state highway commission to be established according to the provisions of the bill which has been outlined by the legislative committee on this subject. A letter to this effect will be forwarded to Washington, D. C., where the Highways Industrial association, composed of representatives of road paving material interests, has its headquarters.

Scores Township Roads.

Indianapolis.—The fifth annual road school closed at Purdue university, bringing to an end what is said to have been the most interesting and helpful meeting in the history of the County Highway Superintendents' association.

In an address Emsley W. Johnson, county attorney of Marion county, advocated the abolition of township roads and the duties of township trustees with reference to township roads. "All public highways, bridges and culverts," he said, "should be placed under the supervision of the board of county commissioners except those highways under the control of the state highway commission."

Anthracite Not to Drop.

Indianapolis.—No reduction in the price of anthracite coal to the retail dealer or consumer is to be looked for before April 1, according to Alex R. Holliday, assistant state fuel administrator, who the past week returned from Philadelphia, where he was in conference with the federal anthracite committee. Recently all restrictions on the shipment of anthracite coal into Indiana were removed, and Mr. Holliday says that this was the first state to take such a step. In other states priority lists still exist.

PROUD RECORD OF INDIANA IN WAR

Message of Gov. James P. Goodrich Tells of Raising of Fighting Men and Food.

RECONSTRUCTION PROBLEMS

Executive Recommends Reforms in Administrative and Taxation Methods, Justice to the Negro and Policy of Strict Economy.

Indianapolis.—Gov. James B. Goodrich, in his message to the Indiana general assembly which convened Thursday in its seventy-first biennial session, pointed out the Hoosier state's proud war record in raising fighting men and food, and made recommendations concerning reconstruction problems. He said in part:

Happily, the abilities of the general assembly of 1919 will be tested by problems of reconstruction instead of those of war. While these problems are national in scope, the legislative and executive departments can assist the state as well as the country as a whole by putting into effect such laws as will tend, as far as possible, to equalize the burdens of government. They are more acute now than ever before. There is before us the greatest opportunity for, and also as never before, the need of providing wise, efficient and economical government.

Never have we had more cause to be proud of our state. In every war activity, in raising troops, in organization, in production and in conservation, Indiana has stood foremost. Indiana's quota of volunteers for the regular army was placed at 5,400 by the war department, but the state gave to the service 25,148 volunteers, a record unequaled by any state in the Union. Our quota of volunteers to the navy was 800. Indiana, an inland state, furnished 5,516 men, a record greater than that of any state in the Union, based on population. In all branches of the service Indiana furnished approximately 130,000 men. The state raised and drilled an extra regiment of artillery, and 28 companies of state militia. Two hundred companies of Liberty Guards were organized and ready for service at home if needed.

In war food production, Indiana, too, has no equal. Over 500,000 war gardens were planted. The corn acreage was increased by about 600,000 acres over 1916. About 524,000 more acres of wheat were sowed in the state in 1917 than the year before. The production of hogs and all of our food products was greatly increased. Indiana increased its output of coal 25 per cent.

The state was particularly free of strikes and disturbances. The working men and women have done their best without complaint, in spite of the steadily mounting cost of living.

That this record is so satisfactory is not due to the efforts of any one man, or to any organization of men, political or otherwise. It is due to the spirit of our Americanism, the high patriotism, the natural intelligence and efficiency of the average Hoosier as a citizen of America.

Tasks of Peace.

It is necessary for us to be impressed with the fact that the task before us is just as important, just as patriotic, now that the enemy is defeated, as were the things we were called on to accomplish before the end of the war. The patriotism of peace calls as earnestly for service and sacrifice as did the patriotism of war.

A survey of the industrial situation has revealed that the employers of labor in Indiana will give to the men, as they are mustered out, the positions held by them at the time they entered the service or positions equally as desirable.

At least forty million dollars of deferred public improvements are waiting authority to go forward. We may look forward with confidence to 1919 as a year of general prosperity. Little reduction in the cost of living can be expected during this year. It is manifest that no reduction in wages can be anticipated, for, after all, the real measure of the daily wage is not the sum of money received, but its purchasing power. I am happy to say that the employers of Indiana have agreed to the policy of maintaining wages at the present level so long as it is possible for them to do so.

Our tax laws have not been revised for more than a quarter of a century. Under our present system of taxation and administration, the grossest inequalities exist. In many cases their burdens fall heaviest on those least able to bear them.

Our tax laws should be amended so as to require the state board of tax commissioners to devote their entire time to the work, with original and exclusive assessment jurisdiction over all public service corporations and a greater degree of supervision over local taxing authorities. The largest measure of classification possible under our constitution should be provided for intangible property so that this form of wealth will be required to come out of hiding and contribute to the support of the state.

A state highway bill was passed by the last general assembly. The constitutionality of this law has been attacked and the case is now pending in the supreme court of the state. The existing law is unsatisfactory to those who believe in the extension of the good roads system of our state and I urge upon you the necessity of passing a comprehensive highway law vesting in the state highway authorities the absolute right to establish and build upon their own initiative the main market highways of the state.

Conservation Out of Politics.

I recommend that the office of state geologist as an elective office be abolished; that a conservation commission, nonsalaried and bipartisan, be created; that it be given full power over the departments of geology, entomology, fish and game, forestry and parks and waters of the state. All of these departments require the service of trained men and their tenure of service should not be subject to the changing fortunes of political parties.

The departments of banking and insurance are now attached to the auditor's office. I recommend that bills be passed, effective at the end of this fiscal year, creating separate departments of banking and insurance, the heads of which shall be appointed by the governor.

The office of state veterinarian is filled by appointment by the governor and in the past it has been the custom to change this department and its various employees with each changing administration. I believe this important department should be removed from partisan politics, placed upon a nonpartisan basis and the control placed in the hands of a bipartisan commission. I recommend that the state board of veterinary medical examiners be abolished; that there be created in its place a live stock sanitary board composed of four members, to serve without salary, two of whom shall be veterinary surgeons, two to be livestock raisers and not more than two of whom shall be members of any one political party.

Constitutional Amendments.

The supreme court has held that a constitutional convention can be called only by a referendum to the people.

That our constitution, adopted when we were an agricultural state, with no large cities, no longer meets the demands of our complex social, industrial and economic relations is evident.

Should the general assembly submit the question of the calling of the convention to a vote of the people in 1920, no one can foresee the result of the referendum. Some changes in our constitution are imperative. I, therefore, recommend that the following amendments be adopted by the general assembly for reference to the session of 1921:

Providing for equal suffrage.

Limiting the right to vote and hold office to citizens of the state.

Abolishing the elective offices of state superintendent of public instruction and clerk of the supreme court.

Providing for the budget system and authorizing the governor to veto any item in an appropriation or bill.

Against increasing the salary of any official for the term of office for which he is elected.

Authorizing the general assembly to classify counties for registration purposes so as to make unnecessary the registration of voters in the smaller counties of the state.

Giving the general assembly larger power in dealing with the tax question and especially power to adopt an income tax and classify property for the purpose of taxation.

Justice to the Negro.

In this connection, I call your attention to the discrimination against the colored people of Indiana in our state constitution. It is unfair to them and not consistent with the spirit of the times that the word "white" remains in our constitution. In justice to them and as a tribute to their loyalty and spirit of sacrifice, I recommend that a joint resolution be passed, submitting an amendment striking the word "white" from our constitution.

The office of attorney general was created by the legislature and its status may be changed at any time by the legislature. The present system is expensive and inefficient and in the past has resulted in the creation of many new and useless places and a large and unnecessary burden upon the state. I recommend that the office of attorney general as an elective office be abolished and that the governor be authorized to appoint the attorney general on and after the expiration of the term of the present incumbent, Mr. Stansbury.

In 1909 a law was passed in Indiana, providing that upon petition of parents or guardians of twenty-five or more children in attendance of any school in a township, town or city, the German language should be taught as a branch of study in such school. Whatever may have been the purpose behind the enactment of this law, it should not be allowed to stand upon our statute books. We should have only one language taught in the common schools of our country—the language of the Declaration of Independence. If we are to think as Americans, act as Americans and ever make this truly a nation in heart and soul, it can only be through the teaching of a common tongue to our children. I recommend that this law be repealed.

There has been certified to me a resolution passed by the congress of the United States, a joint resolution submitting to the states the question of amending the Constitution of the United States so as to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. It becomes my duty to transmit this resolution to you for your consideration and this I now do.

The cities of Indiana should be given a larger measure of home rule. I, therefore, recommend the enactment of a law that will permit cities to adopt the commission or city manager form of government.

Women in Industry.

Recognizing the need of a woman's division of the inspection department in the industrial board to meet the new situation so created, I have appointed, paying the expense out of my contingent fund, Mrs. Arthur T. Cox of Lake county, to give her entire time to women and children in industry. I recommend that a law be passed making permanent the women's division in the inspection department, regulating the hours and safeguarding the working conditions of women in industry.

It is the first duty of the state to do everything possible to conserve the health, the physical and moral well-being of our people. A sound mind must depend upon a sound body and our educational system should be so organized as to provide for the compulsory physical education of our young people. I trust that laws may be enacted by this general assembly that will bring about the reforms suggested.

Teachers' Pension Law.

I call your attention to the teachers' pension law, which passed the general assembly in 1913. This law is not based upon sound actuarial principles, is unfair and unjust.

The law should be amended at once so as to provide that no further units or individual members shall be accepted under the provisions of the law. Provision should be made for the appointment of a commission to study the whole question and to submit a bill to the next general assembly based upon solid actuarial principles.

The state's financial affairs are upon a sound basis. We have no debts. Two years ago the general assembly reduced the state tax levy for all purposes more than 12 per cent. The balance in the treasury on Janpary 1, 1919, was $6,546,797.74, $2,370,786.94 of which is in the general fund.

I recommend that a commission be created and an appropriation made to erect either in the statehouse grounds or University park a suitable monument in commemoration of the life and public service of Charles Warren Fairbanks.

BREEZY BUBBLES

Porcelain money has been made in Siam for circulation among the natives.

Reports from the field indicate that the Greek currant crop this year will be satisfactory.

A new and valuable copper ore has been discovered in the district of Varmland, Sweden.

Mrs. John Mahoney of Germantown, Philadelphia, has five sons in the service, three being in France.

CUBEB.

Cubeb berries are from the climbing plant called Piper Cubeba, native of the West Indies, being extensively cultivated in Java and Sumatra. It is used as local stimulant in indigestion and as a flavoring vehicle in mixtures and gargles. It is valuable particularly in diseases of the mucous membrane, especially of the bronchi. Frequently smoked in cigarettes for their effect on the mucous membrane of the bronchi and larynx.

INDIANA State Happenings

Indianapolis.—Recommendations of the Indiana Chester White Swine Breeders' association that the state board of agriculture increase the number of awards for hogs at the state fair from three to five, were discussed at the convention of the Indiana Swine Breeders' association, in session here. The Chester White organization passed a resolution at its meeting asking the increase. The three organizations affiliated with the state body elected officers. Bruce Hillyer of Attica was elected president of the Chester White organization; Arthur Thomson of Wabash, vice president, and W. E. Horton of Rushville, secretary and treasurer. L. D. Stewart of Tipton was named president of the Indiana Duroc Swine Breeders' association; George W. Bartley of Switz City, vice president, and E. K. Morris of Indianapolis, secretary and treasurer. W. G. Riley of Thorntown heads the Poland China organization; Arthur Stewart of Greensburg, vice president, and W. E. Furnas of Westfield, secretary and treasurer.

Indianapolis.—Nomination of candidates for all judicial offices in Indiana except justices of the peace and municipal court judges, by petition of voters and not by political parties in convention or by primary, is provided in a bill drafted by a comittee of the Indiana State Bar association. The effect of the proposed bill would be to place the nomination of judges on a nonpartisan basis and would, in the opinion of the committee, give bar associations throughout the state more influence in the nomination of judges and remove judges with successful records from the danger of being caught in an adverse political landslide when up for re-election. The bill as drafted requires that candidates for the supreme and appellate courts shall have 500 signatures to their petitions and county judicial officers are required to have 25 signatures for each county under the jurisdiction of the court.

Evansville.—Two Democratic members of the board of county commissioners and Henry Buente, whom the commissioners had elected county attorney, were forced to resign their offices when 500 soldiers marched on the courthouse of Vanderburgh county and demanded the reinstatement of Albert J. Veneman, Democrat, as county attorney. It was asserted that refusal to re-elect Veneman was due to patriotic utterances he had made during the war. Veneman, who is a former speaker of the Indiana house of representatives, was re-elected after Attorney Buente resigned.

Indianapolis.—Charles E. Rush of Indianapolis was elected president of the Indiana Library association, and Mark L. Sontag of Evansville was named president of the Library Trustees' association at a joint meeting of the bodies held here. Indiana persons gave 123,863 books for war camps and contributed $51,934 for library war service during the year just ended, according to the report of William J. Hamilton, secretary of the public library commission for Indiana.

Lafayette.—Up to January 1 the epidemic of influenza-pneumonia claimed 132 victims in Lafayette, this number dying of the disease in the period between September 1 and January 1, according to the annual report of Dr. James D. Hillis, city health officer. Despite the deadly effects of the epidemic and a higher rate than usual in tuberculosis, cancer and accidental deaths, the number of births exceeded the number of deaths during 1918 by 147.

Indianapolis.—At the annual meeting of the Indiana Fair Managers' association held here officers were elected as follows: John Isenbarger, North Manchester, president; A. B. Carter, Carmel, secretary; and H. C. Vanway, Shelbyville, treasurer. The legislative committee is composed of Fred Terry, Indianapolis; George Montgomery, Indianapolis; E. G. Bilby, Lawrenceburg; G. R. Kemper, Osgood, and Senator Thomas Grant of Lowell.

Bloomington.—After being closed 18 weeks because of influenza, the public schools of Bloomington were advertised to start work again Monday, January 6, but when the pupils reached the various buildings they were informed that the situation was worse and were advised to return to their homes and keep out of crowds. The opening of the schools has again been indefinitely postponed.

Kempton.—John Harlow, a farmer, sold 26 head of cattle to a Chicago packing house for $3,620, an average of $220 a head.

Seymour.—The city of Seymour closed the year of 1918 with a deficit of $5,563.80, according to a statement which has been completed by the city treasurer. The deficit, the officials say, is due to a reduction of the tax rate for the general fund of from $1.25 to $1, and also to the loss of liquor license fees, amounting to $8,000 annually. C. W. Burkart, mayor, declares that the deficit would have been avoided with the same tax rate in 1918 as in 1917, despite the reduced revenue from liquor licenses. Temporary loans have been made to meet the deficit.

Chicago.—Analysis of figures in the fourth Liberty loan campaign were completed by J. J. Sheehan, statistician for the Seventh federal reserve district. These figures show that Indiana, with a quota of $108,750,000, set a mark of $117,654,200, with a total of 593,659 subscribers. In Iowa bonds were sold to the amount of $162,094,200 on a quota of $147,900,000. The number subsribing was 643,917. Michigan subscribed $104,654,400. Its quota was $147,900,000. In the state 853,348 persons subscribed. Wisconsin, with its quota of $100,050,000, subscribed $108,907,950 worth of bonds, with a record of 473,045 subscribers. In Chicago and Cook county, with a quota of $252,000,000, bonds to the amount of $289,206,950 were sold. The number of subscribers reached 1,085,985. Fifty-seven counties of Illinois outside of Cook county made a record of $127,900,000 on a quota of $113,100,000, with a total of 591,749 subscribers. The record for the Seventh district was: Quota, $870,000,000; subscriptions, $969,646,600; subscribers, 4,241,702.

Crawfordsville.—J. G. Collicott of Indianapolis, state director of vocational education, said in an address before the Crawfordsville chamber of commerce at a luncheon for new township trustees of Montgomery county, that no fewer than 200,000 children of school age in Indiana are not regularly in school. Mr. Collicott expressed the opinion that the majority of these do not stay out of school because of absolute necessity, but most of them quit because the courses offered in the schools at present do not sufficiently interest them. These children, he asserted, if the situation is permitted to continue, will constitute a powerful and dangerous element of the population of the state. Of the 7,000 children of school age in Montgomery county, it was brought out at the meeting, 5,000 are in school and 2,000 are not in school. The opinion was expressed that these 2,000 will not be in school so long as there is not some modification of the present educational system.

Lafayette.—Relieved of its strenuous military program which threw the regular college work into the background, Purdue university reopened on its normal peace-time basis. On account of the time lost in class work during the fall it will be necessary to make the rest of the year's work intensive in order to cover the ground. The first semester will be extended a month, which will make the second semester shorter than usual, too. Although a number of freshmen are expected to drop out, this number including those who came to Purdue only because of the student army training corps, the attendance is expected to be large. About 800 freshmen are expected.

Vincennes.—As a gift and memento of the world war from the citizens of Vincennes in France, two small flags, one an American and one a French flag, have been expressed to the citizens of Vincennes in Indiana, which was named after the historic suburb of Paris. The flags waved over the fort of Vincennes in France, one of the strongholds defending the French capital, the day the armistice was signed by Germany. Two large flags also are on their way to the people of Vincennes in Indiana to "commemorate their love and friendship."

Evansville.—The World War Veterans, which is intended to be to the men who served in the war with Germany what the Grand Army of the Republic is to the men who served in the Union army in the Civil war, held its first formal meeting here at the soldiers and sailors' coliseum. About 300 returned soldiers, sailors and marines attended. An executive council was appointed to draw up a constitution and by-laws and to try to obtain a charter from the United States government.

Indianapolis.—An investigation into Austin and Scottsburg public schools by Horace Ellis, state superintendent of public instruction, resulted in the resignation of C. R. Piety, superintendent of the Austin schools, and in a recommendation to the Scottsburg school board that it at once take up the case of Lee Craig, who is superintendent of schools in that town. Both men were found by Superintendent Ellis to be teaching in violation of the law regarding the licensing of teachers.

South Bend.—Disappearance of the $250,000 worth of fourth Liberty bonds, consigned by the First National bank of Detroit to the offices of the Studebaker corporation here developed into one of the most baffling mysteries with which the South Bend authorities have ever been confronted.

Newcastle.—Mayor Elliott, in his annual message to the Newcastle city council, revealed his plan for financing a commercial lighting plant for the city. The bonded debt will be increased from $100,000 to $200,000 or more in order to meet the obligations for the ensuing year.

Brazil.—The annual report of the Clay county health commissioner shows there were 2,641 cases of influenza in the county last year. A total of 220 deaths were reported. The number of birth is given as 344 and the marriages are reported as 355.

South Bend.—With the purpose of furthering the construction of a Lake Erie-Lake Michigan canal from Toledo, O., to Michigan City, Ind., the Interurban Deep Waterways Executive association was formed here. Six northern Indiana cities—Goshen, Elkhart, Mishawaka, Laporte, Michigan City and South Bend—are members of the organization. Richard Eibel of South Bend was elected president; S. F. Spohn of Goshen, vice president, and Walter K. Greenebaum of Michigan City, secretary. The mayor of each city of the association is to name three members of the association.

JANUARY

—14—

"Pick him up and put him on the sled here, boys," Mr. Stagg said. "I'll carry Hannah's Carlyn myself."

The party, including the excited Prince, got back to the docks without losing any time and without further accident. Still the chapel bell was ringing and somebody said:

"We'd have been up a stump for knowing the direction if it hadn't been for that bell."

"Me, too," muttered Chet Gormley. "That's what kep' me goin', folks—the chapel bell. It just seemed to be callin' me home."

Joseph Stagg, carried his niece up to Mrs. Gormley's little house, while one of the men helped Chet along to the same destination. The seamstress met them at the door, wildly excited.

"And what do you think?" she cried. "They took Mandy Parlow home in Tim's hack. She was just done up, they tell me, pullin' that chapel bell. Did you ever hear of such a silly critter—just because she couldn't find the sexton!"

"Hum! you and I both seem to be mistaken about what constitutes silliness, Mrs. Gormley," grumbled the hardware dealer. "I was for calling your Chet silly, till I learned what he'd done. And you'd better not call Miss Mandy silly. The sound of the chapel bell gave us all our bearings. Both of 'em, Chet and Miss Mandy, did their best."

Carolyn May was taken home in Tim's hack, too. To her surprise, Tim was ordered to stop at the Parlow house and go in to ask how Miss Amanda was.

By this time the story of her pulling of the chapel bell rope was all over Sunrise Cove and the hack driver was naturally as curious as anybody. So he willingly went into the Parlow cottage, bringing back word that she was resting comfortably, Doctor Nugent having just left her.

"An' she's one brave gal," declared Tim. "Pitcher of George Washington! pullin' that bell rope ain't no baby's job."

Carolyn May did not altogether understand what Miss Amanda had done, but she was greatly pleased that Uncle Joe had so plainly displayed his interest in the carpenter's daughter.

The next morning Carolyn May seemed to be in good condition. Indeed, she was the only individual vitally interested in the adventure who did not pay for the exposure. Even Prince had barked his legs being hauled out on the ice. Uncle Joe had caught a bad cold in his head and suffered from it for some time. Miss Amanda remained in bed for several days. But it was poor Chet Gormley who paid the dearest price for participation in the exciting incident. Doctor Nugent had hard work fighting off pneumonia.

Mr. Stagg surprised himself by the interest he took in Chet. He closed his store twice each day to call at the Widow Gormley's house.

Mr. Stagg found himself talking with Chet more than he ever had before. The boy was lonely and the man found a spark of interest in his heart for him that he had never previously discovered. He began to probe into his young employee's thoughts, to learn something of his outlook on life; perhaps, even, he got some inkling of Chet's ambition.

That week the ice went entirely out of the cove. Spring was at hand, with its muddy roads, blue skies, sweeter airs, soft rains and a general revivifying feeling.

Aunty Rose declared that Carolyn May began at once to "perk up." Perhaps the cold, long winter had been hard for the child to bear.

One day the little girl had a more than ordinarily hard school task to perform. Everything did not come easy to Carolyn May, "by any manner of means," as Aunty Rose would have said. Composition writing was her bane and Miss Minnie had instructed Carolyn May's class to bring in a written exercise the next morning. The little girl wandered over to the churchyard with her slate and pencil—and Prince, of course—to try to achieve the composition.

The windows of the minister's study overlooked this spot and he was sitting at his desk while Carolyn May was laboriously writing the words on her slate (having learned to use a slate), which she expected later to copy into her composition book.

The Rev. Afton Driggs watched her puzzled face and laboring fingers for some moments before calling out of his window to her. Several sheets of sermon paper lay before him on the desk and perhaps he was having almost as hard a time putting on the paper what he desired to say as Carolyn May was having with her writing.

Finally, he came to the window and spoke to her. "Carolyn May," he said, "what are you writing?"

"Oh, Mr. Driggs, is that you?" said the little girl, getting up quickly and coming nearer. "Did you ever have to write a composition?"

"Yes, Carolyn May, I have to write one or two each week." And he sighed.

"Oh, yes! So you do!" the little girl agreed. "You have to write sermons. And that must be a terribly tedious thing to do, for they have to be longer than my composition—a great deal longer."

"So it is a composition that is troubling you," the young minister remarked.

"Yes, sir. I don't know what to write—I really don't. Miss Minnie says for us not to try any flights of fancy. I don't just know what those are. But she says, write what is in us. Now, that don't seem like a composition," added Carolyn May doubtfully.

"What doesn't."

"Why, writing what is in us," explained the little girl, staring in a

"Carolyn May," He Said, "What Are You Writing?"

puzzled fashion at her slate, on which she had written several lines. "You see, I have written down all the things that I 'member is in me."

"For pity's sake! let me see it, child," said the minister, quickly reaching down for the slate. When he brought it to a level with his eyes he was amazed by the following:

"In me there is my heart, my liver, my lungs, my verform pendicks, my stummick, two ginger cookies, a piece of pepmint candy and my dinner."

"For pity's sake!" Mr. Driggs shut off this explosion by a sudden cough.

"I guess it isn't much of a composition, Mr. Driggs," Carolyn May said frankly. "But how can you make your inwards be pleasant reading?"

The minister was having no little difficulty in restraining his mirth.

"Go around to the door, Carolyn May, and ask Mrs. Driggs to let you in. Perhaps I can help you in this composition writing."

"Oh, will you, Mr. Driggs?" cried the little girl. "That is awful kind of you."

The clergyman did not seem to mind neglecting his task for the pleasure of helping Carolyn May with hers. He explained quite clearly just what Miss Minnie meant by "writing what is in you."

"Oh! it's what you think about a thing yourself—not what other folks think," cried Carolyn May. "Why, I can do that. I thought it was something like those physcology lessons. Then I can write about anything I want to, can't I?"

"I think so," replied the minister.

"I'm awfully obliged to you, Mr. Driggs," the little girl said. "I wish I might do something for you in return."

"Help me with my sermon, perhaps?" he asked, smiling.

"I would if I could, Mr. Driggs." Carolyn May was very earnest.

"Well, now, Carolyn May, how would you go about writing a sermon if you had one to write?"

"Oh, Mr. Driggs!" exclaimed the little girl, clasping her hands. "I know just how I'd do it."

"You do? Tell me how, then, my dear," he returned, smiling. "Perhaps you have an inspiration for writing sermons that I have never yet found."

"Why, Mr. Driggs, I'd try to write every word so's to make folks that heard it happier. That's what I'd do. I'd make 'em look up and see the sunshine and the sky—and the mountains, 'way off yonder—so they'd see nothing but bright things and breathe only good air and hear birds sing—Oh, dear me, that—that is the way I'd write a sermon."

The clergyman's face had grown grave as he listened to her, but he kissed her warmly as he thanked her and bade her good-by. When she had gone from the study he read again the text written at the top of the first sheet of sermon paper. It was taken from the book of the prophet Jeremiah.

"To write every word so's to make folks that heard it happier," he murmured as he crumpled the sheet of paper in his hand and dropped it in the waste-basket.

CHAPTER XV.

The Awakening.

With the opening of spring and the close of the sledding season, work had stopped at Adams' camp. Rather, the entire plant had been shipped twenty miles deeper into the forest—mill, bunkhouse, cook shed and such corrugated-iron shacks as were worth carting away.

All that was left on the site of the busy camp were huge heaps of sawdust, piles of slabs, discarded timbers and the half-burned bricks into which had been built the portable boiler and engine.

And old Judy Mason. She was not considered worth moving to the new site of the camp. She was bedridden with rheumatism. This was the report Tim, the hackman, had brought in.

The old woman's husband had gone with the outfit to the new camp, for he could not afford to give up his work. Judy had not been so bad when the camp was broken up, but when Tim went over for a load of slabs for summer firewood, he discovered her quite helpless in her bunk and almost starving. The rheumatic attack had become serious.

Amanda Parlow had at once ridden over with Doctor Nugent.

"How brave and helpful it is of Miss Amanda!" Carolyn May cried. "Dear me, when I grow up I hope I can be a gradjerate nurse like Miss Mandy."

"I reckon that's some spell ahead," chuckled Mr. Parlow, to whom she said this when he picked her up for a drive after taking his daughter to the camp.

"Mr Parlow," the girl ventured after a time, "don't you think now that Miss Amanda ought to be happy?"

"Happy!" exclaimed the carpenter, startled, "What about, child?"

"Why, about everything. You know, once I asked you about her being happy, and—and you didn't seem favorable. You said 'Bah!'"

The old man made no reply for a minute and Carolyn May had the patience to wait for her suggestion to "sink in." Finally he said:

"I dunno but you're right, Carlyn May. Not that it matters much, I guess, whether a body's happy or not in this world," he added grudgingly.

"Oh, yes, it does, Mr. Parlow! It matters a great deal, I am sure—to us and to other people. If we're not happy inside of us, how can we be cheerful outside, and so make other people happy? And that is what I mean about Miss Amanda."

"What about Mandy?"

"She isn't happy," sighed Carolyn May. "Not really. She's just as good as good can be. She is always doing for folks and helping. But she can't be real happy."

"Why not?" growled Mr. Parlow, his face turned away.

"Why—'cause— Well, you know, Mr. Parlow, she can't be happy as long as she and my Uncle Joe are mad at each other."

Mr. Parlow uttered another grunt, but the child went bravely on.

"You know very well that's so. And I don't know what to do about it. It just seems too awful that they should hardly speak, and yet be so fond of each other deep down."

"How d'you know they're so fond of each other—deep down?" Mr. Parlow demanded.

"I know my Uncle Joe likes Miss Mandy, 'cause he always speaks so—so respectful of her. And I can see she likes him, in her eyes," replied the observant Carolyn May. "Oh, yes, Mr. Parlow, they ought to be happy again, and we ought to make 'em so."

"I Know My Uncle Joe Likes Miss Amanda."

"Huh! Who ought to?"

"You and me. We ought to find some way of doing it. I'm sure we can, if we just think hard about it."

"Huh!" grunted the carpenter again, turning Cherry into the dooryard. "Huh!"

This was not a very encouraging response. Yet he did think of it. The little girl had started a train of thought in Mr. Parlow's mind that he could not sidetrack.

It doesn't take much to convince a man that he needs a rest.

GERMANY MUST PAY

Important Commercial Centers Destroyed Beyond Repair.

PEOPLE ARE LEFT HOMELESS

Country Should Be Forced to Pay for Ruthless Destruction as Far as Within the Power of Its People.

By WRIGHT A. PATTERSON.

In August, 1914, the city of Lens in northern France was a prosperous community of close to 50,000 people. It was known as the Pittsburgh of France, and its coal fields were the one great source of supply of fuel for the nation. Its steel and iron mills supplied much of the material for French railroads, shipbuilding and other industries. Its people were industrious and thrifty, living in comfortable homes, surrounded by the modest luxuries of an industrial community.

All that is left of Lens today is a crumbling pile of debris. No single wall of the city is still standing, and hardly a piece of a wall as much as ten feet square can be seen amid the terrible ruins. Both the buildings and the machinery of its factories are gone completely. Its coal mines are flooded and the machinery with which they were operated has been destroyed.

And all this because Germany started a war for the purpose of conquest; a war in which no principle other than that of selfishness was involved. Today Germany is a crushed nation. Her plans for world domination miscarried, her armies have been defeated, but before these things happened the city of Lens had been destroyed.

I stood amid the ruins of what had once been the attractive and prosperous industrial community of Lens and watched hundreds of her people who had returned after the Germans had been driven back, as they searched for the spots on which their homes had once stood, as they dug into the debris in an effort to rescue from it some one thing, some memento of that home they had loved as much, or even more than we Americans love our homes. I saw the tears on the cheeks of many as they toiled. I saw an old woman carrying away, as the only thing she could find, a piece of a broken chair, and I thought, who shall pay for this devastation, this misery?

There Is But One Answer.

Are the broken, homeless people of Lens to pay? Are the people of France to pay? Are the people of England or America or Belgium to pay? Or are the Germans to pay?

To be sure, the city of Lens was destroyed by shells fired largely from British guns. But they were fired into the city because the invading Germans in the city must be driven out that not only France, but the world, might be freed of the menace of German domination; and the debris that once was Lens stands today as a striking monument to German greed and to the accuracy and efficiency of British artillery.

Could the people of America have seen the people searching those ruins as I saw them; could they have seen the tears as I saw them they would have said, as I said, Germany must pay, and she must continue to pay until this fair city and many, many others like it, have been restored; until these people and their descendants are again the happy, prosperous, contented people they were before the hell of German wantonness and selfishness was let loose in 1914.

What happened in Lens has happened in many other cities and towns in France, in Belgium, in Italy, in Serbia, in Roumania, in Poland, and for all of them Germany and her allies should pay, and pay, and pay.

Cruel Fate of Ypres.

Another example of the hellishness of this German war of conquest is seen in what was once the beautiful and historic city of Ypres, in Belgium. This town is today but one mass of ruins. Its wonderful Cloth Hall and St. Martin's church, both considered among the marvels of Europe and both dating back to the thirteenth century, are gone, never to be restored. There is no way by which the Germans can give back to the world these beautiful monuments of past centuries, but they can be made to pay for them as far as dollars can pay.

And with the passing of this city there passed away many thousand lives of British soldiers who today lie buried around the place they so bravely defended. One possibly better realizes here the terrors of this war than at any other one spot. Here the Germans held the hills to the east of the city, and the British defenders occupied the low-lying fields between the hills and the city. For them dugouts or deep trenches were out of the question as the land is but little above sea level. And here, in what is almost a marsh, the British Tommies lay month after month, through winter and summer, a fair target for the Boche guns on the nearby hills.

When I was in Ypres late in October, many of the people to whom it had been home, were there digging hopelessly in the rubbish in a vain effort to find some small thing that could be associated with the homes that the Germans had destroyed in their effort to secure world domination by a war of conquest.

City of Walls Only.

The city of Menin in Belgium, was not shelled by either army, and yet it is a city that Germany should pay for. The walls of Menin are standing, but it is a city of walls only. The floors, the roofs, the joists, the doors and windows and the door and window casings are gone, all torn out by the invading Boche, with the result that the people of Menin are as homeless as the people of Lens and Ypres and hundreds of other cities and towns in the invaded countries.

I rode through devastated Armentieres, Bailleul, La Bassee, Douai, Cambria, Roisel, Peronne, Albert, Arras, St. Quentin, Guiscard, Noyon, Chauny, Thiaucourt, Vigneulles and hundreds of smaller towns, and the story of devastation was always the same, with but little variation, devastation caused by the Boche, and for which the Boche should pay, and for which the price assessed will never be high enough.

In many ways the hellishness of the Boche has been demonstrated. The city of Arras has not suffered such complete destruction as has fallen upon many other cities. Here the German gunners centered their fire upon the cathedral, and day after day, week after week and month after month they continued to pour a rain of metal upon this beautiful old church until today it is nothing but a mass of powdered stone. Germany cannot give back that cathedral of Arras, but she can pay and should pay for the needless, senseless destruction.

And the fair cities and towns that have been so ruthlessly destroyed are but incidents in the devastation caused by this war, and for all of which Germany and her allies, and they alone, are responsible, and for all of which they should pay.

DO YOU YAWN AT CONCERTS?

If So, There Is a Reason, Which Is Thus Explained by Modern Song Writer.

If a person yawns during a symphony concert and twists his program instead of being absorbed in classical music it may not be his fault. It may be due to an undeveloped pituitary body, which is located in the brain, back of the temples.

This is according to Cyril Scott, the song writer, in his "The Philosophy of Modernism in Connection With Music." Mr. Scott says that this pituitary body is highly susceptible to musical vibrations, if normally developed. In other words, it is the seat of the emotions. He goes further and adds that it is the seat of the astral or sublimal self. This is in keeping with the theory of the ancients that this gland is the seat of the soul.

In commenting on Mr. Scott's statement, Medicine and Surgery Magazine says:

"At a time like this when the pituitary body is the paramount topic of conversation in medical circles on account of its influence on our underweight or overweight, Cyril Scott's message in regard to its attitude toward music should give us pause. The faulty pituitary body can be corrected, no doubt, by treatment; made supersensitive and vibrant; thus a person indifferent to music may become highly appreciative to it."

Young pea pods are largely eaten in Europe and are described as tender, succulent and wholesome.

Suffered For Years

Back and Kidneys Were in Bad Shape, But Doan's Removed all the Trouble

"My kidneys were so weak that the least cold I caught would affect them and start my back aching until I could hardly endure the misery," says Mrs. D. C. Ross, 973 Fulton St., Brooklyn, N. Y. "In the morning when I first got up, my back was so lame, I could hardly bend over and any move sent darts of pain through my kidneys. It was hard for me to walk up stairs or stoop, and to move while lying down sent darts of pain through me.

MRS. ROSS

"The kidney secretions were scanty and distressing and the water remained in my system, making my feet and hands swell. There were dark circles under my eyes and I became so dizzy I could hardly see. I had rheumatic pains in my knees and it was all I could do to get around. For years I was in that shape and I wore plasters and used all kinds of medicine to no avail until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. They rid me of the trouble and strengthened my back and kidneys. When I have taken Doan's since, they have always benefited me."

NICKNAME THAT WILL STICK

Tommy's" Idea of What Surgical Dressing Should Be Called Is Likely to Be Permanent.

A Tommy will find a nickname for anything. He calls the men who throw the bombs Tickler's artillery. At the very beginning of the war, before the British knew much about bombs, the first ones were made of empty jam tins, and because most of the jam that was used in the trenches was made by a firm called Tickler, the bombers have always been Tickler's artillery. So when they begin to talk about "bipp," is it any wonder that one has no idea whether it is a French village or a brand of tobacco, or a new bit of slang? But it is none of these; it is a new dressing for wounds, composed of bismuth, iodoform and paraffin paste, hence the name—bipp. It was discovered by a famous English surgeon, Dr. Rutherford Morrison. The wound to be treated is carefully prepared, pure alcohol is poured over it, then a thin layer of "bipp" is spread on it and it is sewed up. Its action is said to be almost miraculous.

Why Germany Should Pay!

The NEWS has arranged to publish a series of articles that is of the very greatest interest at this time when the civilized world is endeavoring to decide to what extent the German people, as well as the former rulers of Germany, shall be held responsible for the terrible destruction of life and property and the useless suffering caused by the war into which Germany plunged the world in 1914

These articles have been written by Wright A. Patterson, editor in chief of the Western Newspaper Union, who returned recently from France. During his stay abroad he visited every part of the western battle front and traversed the greater part of the French and Belgian territory that had been occupied by the Germans, but had been wrested from their control before the signing of the armistice on November 11. Mr. Patterson was a member of a party of newspaper editors who went abroad to see what England and France had done in the effort to defeat the Hun and also to see the glorious part that American boys were playing in the great conflict then being waged.

Mr. Patterson had an unusual opportunity of seeing a very large part of the terrible devastation wrought by the war. He covered in an automobile much of the battle front and the devastated district from Courtai in Belgium to Pont-a-Mousson. With the other members of his party he was the first civilian to set foot in several important cities and towns after their evacuation by the retreating Germans. He stood where there had once been prosperous and populous cities but where there is nothing now but piles of debris. He saw the suffering and helpless peasants of France and Belgium searching in vain for even a trace of the homes that they once had called their own.

And then Mr. Patterson realized, as he never had before, the terrible cost of this war for which Germany and her allies are responsible. In the series of articles that we will publish he describes this terrible cost as it can be described only by one who has seen it with his own eyes. Readers of THE NEWS will be able to see, through Mr. Patterson's eyes, what the war which Germany started has meant to the people who bore the brunt of the assault upon civilization.

Every one of these articles will be found of absorbing interest, and after you have read them all you will be better able to understand why the people who have suffered the most demand that Germany shall pay, in so far as money can pay, for the suffering and damage that she has caused.

MUST INCREASE FOOD EXPORTS

America Called on by End of War to Supply Added Millions.

ECONOMY STILL NEEDED.

Over Three Times Pre-War Shipments Required—Situation in Wheat and Fats Proves Government's Policy Sound.

With the guns in Europe silenced, we have now to consider a new world food situation. But there can be no hope that the volume of our exports can be lightened to the slightest degree with the cessation of hostilities. Millions of people liberated from the Prussian yoke are now depending upon us for the food which will keep them from starvation.

With food the United States made it possible for the forces of democracy to hold out to victory. To insure democracy in the world, we must continue to live simply in order that we may supply these liberated nations of Europe with food. Hunger among a people inevitably breeds anarchy. American food must complete the work of making the world safe for democracy.

Last year we sent 11,820,000 tons of food to Europe. For the present year, with only the European Allies to feed, we had originally pledged ourselves to a program that would have increased our exports to 17,500,000 tons. Now, to feed the liberated nations, we will have to export a total of not less than 20,000,000 tons—practically the limit of loading capacity at our ports. Reviewing the world food situation, we find that some foods will be obtainable in quantities sufficient to meet all world needs under a regime of economical consumption. On the other hand, there will be marked world shortages in some important commodities.

Return to Normal Bread Loaf.

With the enlarged wheat crops which American farmers have grown, and the supplies of Australia, the Argentine and other markets now accessible to shipping, there are bread grains enough to enable the nations to return to their normal wheat loaf, provided we continue to mill flour at a high percentage of extraction and maintain economy in eating and the avoidance of waste.

In fats there will be a heavy shortage—about 3,000,000,000 pounds—in pork products, dairy products and vegetable oils. While there will be a shortage of about three million tons in rich protein feeds for dairy animals, there will be sufficient supplies of other feedstuffs to allow economical consumption.

In the matter of beef, the world's supplies are limited to the capacity of the available refrigerating ships. The supplies of beef in Australia, the Argentine and the United States are sufficient to load these ships. There will be a shortage in the importing countries, but we cannot hope to expand exports materially for the next months in view of the bottle neck in transportation.

We will have a sufficient supply of sugar to allow normal consumption in this country if the other nations retain their present short rations or increase them only slightly. For the countries of Europe, however, to increase their present rations to a material extent will necessitate our sharing a part of our own supplies with them.

Twenty Million Tons of Food.

Of the world total, North America will furnish more than 60 per cent. The United States, including the West Indies, will be called upon to furnish 20,000,000 tons of food of all kinds as compared with our pre-war exports of about 6,000,000 tons.

While we will be able to change our program in many respects, even a casual survey of the world supplies in comparison to world demands shows conclusively that Europe will know famine unless the American people bring their home consumption down to the barest minimum that will maintain health and strength.

There are conditions of famine in Europe that will be beyond our power to remedy. There are 40,000,000 people in North Russia whom there is small chance of reaching with food this winter. Their transportation is demoralized in complete anarchy, and shortly many of their ports will be frozen, even if internal transport could be realized.

To Preserve Civilization.

At this moment Germany has not alone sucked the food and animals from all those masses of people she has dominated and left starving, but she has left behind her a total wreckage of social institutions, and this mass of people is now confronted with absolute anarchy.

If we value our own safety and the social organization of the world, if we value the preservation of civilization itself, we cannot permit growth of this cancer in the world's vitals.

Famine is the mother of anarchy. From the inability of governments to secure food for their people grows revolution and chaos. From an ability to supply their people grows stability of government and the defeat of anarchy. Did we put it on no higher plane than our interests in the protection of our institutions, we must bestir ourselves in solution of this problem.

Obituary

Charles Owen Headley, son of C. R. and Anna Headley, was born at Coburn's Corners January 12, 1895, made the supreme sacrifice January 1, 1919, while aboard the warship Seattle, shortly after embarking for his native home from Brest, France.

After leaving school he worked in Hicksville for a period of twenty-eight months, after leaving there he worked at Edgerton, Ohio, for some time. He then went to Fort Wayne where he was employed and attended business college.

On May 27, 1918 he heeded his Country's call and left Auburn for the training at Camp Taylor, Kentucky, he was afterwaid transferred to West Point from there to Camp Mills, Long Island.

On September 17, 1918 he left for overseas duty landing at Glasgow, Scotland, on September, 29. After being transferred from different places they settled down at Vitrey, France, until the time came for them to embark for home.

During the winter of 1902 and 1903 the members of the family had a severe case of typhoid fever. Owen lay for weeks hovering between life and death. He survived but his older brother, Walter, could not withstand the shock and died January 15, 1903.

One other brother, William Herchel, died November 23, 1891.

In the spring of 1912, under the pastorate of A. M. Gillispie, Owen was baptised and united with the Church of Christ at Coburn's Corners and he always tried to imitate the example given by his Elder Brother. Many times while working some distance from home he rose early in the morning that he might be with his Sunday School and in the morning worship.

He was an affectionate son and brother and will be greatly missed by the home circle as well as his companions and friends. He leaves to mourn, father, mother, two brothers and four sisters.

The pallbearers were the boys who had just returned from camps and military schools as follows: Beeks Erick, Henry Walter, Ray Wasson, William Quance, Merritt Milliman and Walter Coburn.

The funeral was conducted from the Coburntown church, Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. The Rev. A. L. Martin of Lafountain, Indiana, officiated with the assistance of Rev. Bryan and Rev. Mumma of Spencerville.

Laura Jane Rhoads, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rhoads of Spencerville, Indiana, was born June 29, 1884, and departed this life at Defiance, Ohio, January 18, 1919, age 34 years, 6 months and 19 days.

At the age of nineteen she was united in marriage to Walter Newman, of Garrett, Indiana. To this union were born two children, Treesa, nearly 14 and Marion nearly 3 years. She united with the Evangelical church at Garrett a few years ago. She was of a very hopeful, sunny disposition. While living at Syracuse they were very active in their church duties. She leaves to mourn their loss a husband, two children, father, mother, one sister and two brothers.

The body was sent to St. Joe on Monday, January 20, and removed to the home at Spencerville, where the funeral was conducted at 2 o'clock by Rev. Glen Bryan assisted by Rev. Mumma. Burial in White City cemetery. Henry Beams funeral director.

Card of Thanks

We desire to express our sincere thanks and appreciation for the many kindnesses shown us by our neighbors and friends, also for the floral offerings.

C. A. Rhoads, wife and Children.

The death of Mrs. Newman came to the parents as a great shock, due to the fact that only a day or so before her death, they had received a letter from her stating that all were well. She took sick on Wednesday with influenza and died on Saturday morning, and the parents knew nothing of her illness. The family was not able to accompany the corps here, which made the death doubly sad.

Buzz-Saw Accident

Roscoe Place, the 18 year old son of R. F. Place and wife of southeast of town, met with a very serious accident, Monday morning, by having his left arm nearly cut off in a buzz saw.

Olen Dermott and Mr. Todd had hired Glen Cole to saw some wood in the Case woods near P. A. Walker's, and Roscoe was helping. They had just finished sawing a small pile of poles and the belt had been thrown off the pulley, ready to move the saw. As soon as this was done, one of the boys took the tongue of the truck on which the saw was mounted, and was trying to move the rig. Olen Dermott had picked up a stick of wood and was trying to stop the saw by prying on the fly wheel. Roscoe took hold of the saw table and it moved forward, cutting his left arm nearly off about four inches above the wrist.

When the boys seen what had happened they run for the log cutters near by and they bound the arm and tried to stop the flow of blood. He was loaded into an auto immediately and brought to St. Joe where Drs. Shook and Sheffer waited upon him. Seeing the serious condition that he was in they proceeded to relelve his suffering, he was then taken to Fort Wayne to the hospital by Dr. Shook.

Upon the return home of Dr. Shook we learned that an effort would be made to save the hand.

The arm was nearly severed making an ugly wound. A portion of the bones being splintered off and the flesh and blood vessels torn.

We also learned that had Mr. Dermott not been attempting to stop the saw that it would have cut the arm clear off without any trouble, but as it was the saw was stopped when it struck his arm.

Mr. Place and Mrs. Olen Dermott went to Fort Wayne as soon as they learned of the accident.

Oldest Patient Under The Knife

Mrs. C. V. Huffman, mother of Frank Harper, residing along the Lincoln highway, three miles east of Wooster, Ohio, is recovering from a serious operation in Wooster hospital. Mrs. Huffman will be 82 years old in April, and was the oldest patient ever operated upon by Dr. Stoll. Her condition is very satisfactory.

Mrs. Huffman has many friends here who will regret to hear of her sickness but wish her a speedy rebovery.

AMONG OUR SICK

H. M. Widney and wife left on No. 6, Monday evening, for the John Hopkins hospital at Baltimore where they will try to find relief for their suffering litti daughter, Doris. She has been quite ill for the past several weeks.

Wm. Hamilton, wife and daughter made a trip to Wayne, Monday, to arrange for an operation on little Miss Margaret. Will returned and reported that an operation for removing of her adenoids and tonsils gould be performed on Tuesday at 7 o'clock.

BROUGHT IT TO HER MIND

Hubby's Singing Evidently Was Not Equal to That of the Golden-Voiced Caruso.

The bride of last month puckered her brow, and glanced reproachfully toward her spouse on the other side of the fireplace.

"These accounts won't come right, John!" she burst forth at last.

"Never mind, darling," replied John, "try again."

A pause while the dutiful wife wrestled with the bills. Then:

"John, dear," she exclaimed, "just sing two or three lines of a song for me."

"What on earth for?" And the newspaper rustled into the fireplace.

"There's something I've bought I've forgotten to write down, but I believe it's got something to do with singing," she stated.

"Right-ho!" and John commenced a song.

"That's it!" broke in his wife triumphantly. "I knew it! I bought a nail file, and I'd forgotten to add it to the expenses. Thank you, dear!"—London Tit-Bits.

NO MYSTERY IN THE CASE

Probably Quite a Few Fathers Will Understand What Caused This Man's Sleeplessness.

At an engineer's shop in the East the proprietor had one man upon whom he could rely for being punctual. Just recently he had fallen from his habit and on several occasions had been late.

"I can't sleep at nights, now, sir, and it makes me late sometimes, but I will try to alter it," replied the man.

"If it is sleeplessness you suffer from, James, why don't you consult a doctor and find out the cause?"

"Oh, I know the cause, sir; it is six weeks old."—Chicago Daily News.

"There's a Reason"

SLOW ACTION ON PART OF SOLONS

Fewer Bills Introduced in Legislature Than in 1917.

MAY ASK RAISE IN SALARIES

Many Members Claim They Cannot "Break Even" on $6-a-Day Allowance of State—Conservation Bill Introduced.

Indianapolis.—Following the week-end adjournment of both branches of the legislature, the lawmakers, who have thus far failed to accomplish the record amount of work are expected to delve into some of the most important legislation scheduled to receive attention during the present session of the body. The first week of the session attention was given principally to administration measures.

There is a quiet movement on foot among members of the Seventy-first general assembly to put the pay of the members on a basis that will be more commensurate with the cost of living at present-day prices. The constitution of the state would prevent any increase in pay of the members from taking effect at this session of the assembly, but a law enacted at this time might apply at the next session, at least to the house members and to the newly elected senators. It is doubtful if it could be made to apply to the holdover senators, since the constitution provides that increases in pay may not be voted by the legislators to themselves. One proposal is that some sort of expense money be voted to each member to help him cope with the high cost of living during the session. Many legislators say they cannot begin to "come out even" on the $6 a day allowed by law. The constitution probably would admit of expense money being granted each legislator.

The conservation commission bill, advocated by Governor Goodrich and other administration leaders, was introduced. This bill if enacted into law will do much, it is believed, to unify control of the natural resources of the state and will result in greatly increased efficiency in the care of the state's natural resources, with less cost than heretofore. The bill would provide for the abolition of the state department of geology and the incorporation of that office with others under the proposed nonpartisan conservation commission, which is to deal with such state resources subjects as fish and game, rivers and waters, geology, entomology, parks and similar subjects.

At this time in the 1917 legislative session there had been more than 100 bills introduced and some had already been sent on their way to passage. Uncertainty, it is said, as to political conditions in the senate, has been responsible for the slowness of the present session to get into the harness.

Much interest is centered on new woman suffrage amendments to be offered early in the week. A measure said to be prepared for introduction by Senator Beardsley will provide for such changes in the constitution as will grant suffrage in the state to women and it is believed certain that this amendment and the presidential suffrage law will be adopted by the legislature with few dissenting votes.

The question of the eradication of German in the Indiana public schools already is a serious one in the legislature. There are several bills under consideration, all of them aimed at changes in different existing laws to the end that the taint of Germanism shall be less odorous in the Hoosier school system. Some of the leading educators of the state are said to have had to do with the formulation of the measures that are to be introduced.

Jackson Club to Banquet.

The Jackson club, in Lafayette, long famous for its annual Democratic love feasts, has decided to give another annual banquet this year, although at a later day than usual. Speakers of state and national fame will be invited, among them being J. Hamilton Lewis of Chicago, who has several times been a guest of honor at the dinners. The banquet will be the twenty-eighth annual gathering.

Indiana Senate Backs Wilson.

The past week the Indiana state senate adopted a resolution by Senator Arnold indorsing a league of nations, freedom of the seas and all other points made by President Wilson in his peace program. The resolution also pledged loyalty to the representatives of the United States at the peace table.

State May Take Hand.

Henry W. Kramer, head of the state land department in the office of Otto L. Klauss, auditor of state, is investigating a project in Lake county, which has for its end the draining of Long lake, a shallow body of water three miles east of Gary. It is said that the lake is to be drained and the 1,000 acres transformed into a mammoth garden patch. Surveyors are said to be at work running lines for a ditch to Lake Michigan from Long lake, which is several feet higher than the larger body.

Crime in Indiana Much Less.

Data shows the state-wide prohibition law in Indiana which became effective April 2 last year has caused a tremendous decrease in crime throughout the cities of the state and particularly in Indianapolis and Marion county. City court cases have decreased notably, and several months ago it was found possible to abandon the Marion county workhouse, an institution used to house short-term offenders.

From other Indiana cities come similar reports, one notable instance being a small southern Indiana city where the mayor's court tried only 50 offenders during the greater part of a year, although more than double that number had been in court during the three months preceding the effective date of the prohibition law. County jails have lost hundreds in population during the nine months the law has been in effect, according to official reports from the Indiana board of state charities.

The police force in Indianapolis has been reduced since the prohibition law became effective and it has become possible to inaugurate a system whereby patrolmen travel on their beats singly, whereas formerly they were forced to go in pairs.

Highway Legislation.

The good roads legislation situation in the state has taken another abrupt turn since officials of the present state highway commission have had time to study the recent decision of the Indiana supreme court, which upheld the constitutionality of the state highway commission bill enacted by the 1917 legislature. L. H. Wright, chairman of the state highway commission, announced that in all probability the good roads program, which had been built up prior to this legislature, would be followed through in general, since the 1917 highway law has many defects which need correcting.

The whole propaganda for good roads, which has grown out of the experiences of the war, during which the armytruck traffic almost ruined the principal highways of the state, was aimed to correct the defects of the present highway law by the enactment of an entirely new statute. Under the conditions brought about by the supreme court's decision it now becomes imperative to propose the amendments to the old law, which will practically fully embody the new law that had been drafted. This program will be followed out, it is said.

The program, as now proposed, would link up every county seat town and city in Indiana and each city of more than 5,000 population with a main market highway and to carry out such a program it is imperative that the state highway commission be given power to construct the roads and pay for them out of state funds entirely.

If the proposed new bill is incorporated with the old law, Indiana will have available more than $16,000,000 of federal road funds during the next five years for road building and a like sum practically from the state treasury and such a sum as this expended to better the main market highways of the state will put Indiana out in front of all other states in the Union, according to statements from good roads enthusiasts here.

Grange Calls for New Acts.

In resolutions on legislation the Columbus grange advocates the following: Prohibit the teaching of any foreign language in any schools to children over sixteen years old; require poll tax receipt before a voter is eligible to vote; decrease the number of appointive offices in the state and reduce salaries of appointive officers consistent with pay for other services; abolish office of county road superintendent; take control of township roads from the township trustees and replace it in the hands of road supervisors; require farmers to work out all their road tax; return of railway, cable, telegraph and telephone systems to control of private owners.

The grange also adopted resolutions opposing centralising the appointive power in the governor or other officials. It opposes the proposed tax law "because of its tendency toward socialistic principle of single tax; because of the inequality of its assessments and because it confers too much power on local authorities to increase assessments, tax rates and bonding powers."

The resolutions adopted will be submitted to the state grange at its annual meeting in Indianapolis.

For Women and Children.

Miss Eleanor Barker, chairman of the Indiana committee on women and children in industry, has announced the appointment of an executive committee with authority to act for the large committee which includes many members from all parts of the state. Arrangements are now being made for the two-day meeting in Indianapolis January 28 and 29, which will mark the culmination of a series of meetings in the state in the interest of the legislative program of the state committee.

Will Seek More Pay.

Plans for the preparation of a bill, providing for an increase in the salaries of probation officers throughout the state, to be introduced in the legislature, were perfected at a meeting of representatives of the Indiana Association of Probation Officers and Police women, at a meeting in Indianapolis. The proposed bill, it is understood, will not only provide for a "living wage" for probation officers, but will compel every county in the state to employ at least one probation officer.

Hoosier State Happenings

Lebanon. — Stockholders of the Boone County Agricultural association, at their annual meeting in this city, voted to discontinue the annual fair.

Columbia City—The West Ward school building in this city was closed for ten days by D. S. Linville, city health officer, because of the prevalence of scarlet fever in the city. Four serious cases of the disease have been reported among grade pupils.

Indianapolis.—Representatives from practically every county in Indiana pledged the state's quota of $629,172 to the $30,000,000 to be raised in the nation for Armenian and Syrian relief. At the session of the state conference held here and during luncheon and in a brief meeting following, all details of the campaign were discussed.

Lafayette.—Mr. and Mrs. Michael Layden, a wealthy couple living in Tippecanoe county, gave away land valued at $125,000, dividing 700 acres among their children. Each of the eight children received from 60 to 130 acres of rich farm land under cultivation. Mr. Layden came here from Ireland fifty years ago and after starting in penniless he amassed a fortune in farming.

Peru.—A large number of citizens of Miami county appealed to Gilbert H. Hendren, chief examiner of the state board of accounts, with headquarters at Indianapolis, to make an investigation of the county affairs in this county. Mr. Hendren sent A. L. Donaldson, civil engineer, and J. M. Healey, field examiners, here. They have made a report to Mr. Hendren, a copy of which is on file in this city.

Huntington.—The plant of the Huntington Brewing company, now the Huntington Products company, will manufacture materials for the making of dyes. Work will start in four months. By a deal completed recently the plant is taken over by the Huntington Chemical company, which is composed of former stockholders in the Huntington Brewing company and interests in Toledo, O.

Lafayette. — Tippecanoe county school teachers held a meeting to protest against the proposed modification of the teachers' pension law, as recommended by Governor Goodrich in his message to the legislature. The local school teachers are strongly opposed to the proposed changes and will send a committee to Indianapolis to urge the general assembly to permit the law to remain as it is unless it can be actually improved.

Elkhart.—Although during the war members of the Mennonite church consistently maintained an attitude as "conscientious objectors," large amounts were contributed by the members of the church to relief work. Now that the war is over even more will be provided for this purpose, according to G. L. Bender of this city, treasurer of the Mennonite relief commission for war sufferers and also of the Mennonite board of missions and charities.

Indianapolis.—The state board of medical registration and examination will hold on examination February 26, 27 and 28 of medical students wishing to practice medicine in Indiana. The examination will be held especially for the benefit of the class which ordinarily would be graduated next June. The continuous session at the medical schools last year, because of the war need for doctors, resulted in turning out the regular June class in February.

Indianapolis. — Influenza-pneumonia is making its third recurrence in the state, according to reports received by the state board of health. For the last several weeks the average number of new cases reported daily was from 200 to 300. One day the past week there was a total of 409 new cases reported. Maj. William F. King, assistant secretary of the state board, said that there was no question that the disease is making a slight recurrence in epidemic form. Brown county reported 44 cases. Allen, Hendricks and Vigo counties reported increases in the disease.

Gary.—Three Gary banks with resources aggregating $1,200,000 were consolidated when the International Trust and Savings bank and the Union Trust and Savings bank were merged and the two institutions purchased the entire assets of the Northern State bank which was closed last August by the auditor of the state and which since that time has been in the hands of a receiver. The assets of the closed bank approximate $300,000, including a building which will be occupied by the International Trust and Savings bank, by which name the new institutions will be known. The combined resources of the International Trust and Savings and the Union Trust and Savings are approximately $418,000.

Owensville.—A great many churches in southern Indiana will forego the usual midwinter religious revival this year on account of the epidemic of influenza which is prevalent to some extent in every community. In most communities no midwinter revivals were held last year because of unprecedented bad weather and a shortage of coal.

Indianapolis.—Members of the state highway commission will meet January 24. The commissioners will reorganize their body in view of the recent supreme court decision holding valid the highway commission law.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON FOR JANUARY 26

ISRAEL CROSSING THE RED SEA.

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 14:13-15:21.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thus the Lord saved the Israelites that day out of the hands of the Egyptians. Exodus 14:30.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Deuteronomy 4:32-40; Psalms 78:1-14; 106:7-12; Hebrews 11:29.

The tenth stroke from the strong hand of the Almighty made Pharaoh willing to let Israel go. The tenth turn of the screw of omnipotence brought him to time. The Israelites go out on their way to the promised land with a high hand. Through the land of the Philistines the journey would have been comparatively short; but God commanded them to turn from that way lest going through the land of the Philistines they see war and desire to turn back to Egypt. The Lord had respect for their needs. "He knoweth our frame, he remembreth that we are dust." (Psalms 103:14). He suits our trials to our ability to meet them.

The Lord went before them in a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night. He not only thus indicated unto them the right path, but walked with them in it. God does not deliver and then leave us alone, but becomes our companion. At the Lord's direction they turned from their first course and were made to face a seeming difficulty. The Red sea was before them, and mountains on either side. The stricken Egyptians had recovered from their sorrow and now saw the Israelites in a situation from which they could not extricate themselves. They interpreted this to mean that Moses was unable to lead them out of their difficulty; therefore, they went in pursuit, hoping yet to prevent them from going out of the country.

I. The Miraculous Escape of the Israelites (14:13-22).

They were in a straitened condition but had no reason to fear, for the Lord had led them there. It is safe to be where the Lord leads, though every avenue is closed against us. There seems to be a two-fold object in leading them into this peculiar place: to strengthen the faith of the people and to lay a snare for the overthrow of the Egyptians. The people, as usual, displayed their unbelief and even censured Moses for leading them out of Egypt. Moses replied to their murmurs by saying, "Fear ye not, stand still and see the salvation of the Lord." Standing still in such a trial is faith taking hold on God's promises. This is hard for the natural man to do. Before the salvation of the Lord can ever be seen or experienced we must come thus to him. While reposing our confidence in the Lord, there comes a time when we must make our faith active. God said, "Wherefore criest thou unto me? Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." Having had his definite promise, to have prayed longer would have been unbelief. The thing to be done then was to step out upon his eternal promise. The lifting up of the rod simply served as something tangible upon which their faith could act. They were to go forward a step at a time, without raising any question as to the outcome; for from the same source from which came the command, came the power to obey. The presence of the Lord was adapted to their needs as they went forward. As they went forward the very thing which seemed their destruction became a wall of protection on either side.

II. The Overthrow of the Egyptians (23:27).

Having seen the Israelites go across dry-shod, Pharaoh and his hosts madly pursued them. They insanely thought that they in their unbelief could follow in the wake of God's children. The very things which are a wall and defense to the faithful become a snare and a means of destruction to the enemies of God's people. The Lord looked forth from the cloud and wrought confusion among the Egyptians. There is a day coming when a look from the Almighty will cause a much greater consternation among the wicked (Revelation 6:16, 17; 20:11-15). He not only looked upon them but took off their chariot wheels, which caused them to realize that God was fighting against them. He then directed Moses to stretch forth his rod and bring destruction upon the Egyptians. So complete was the overthrow that it is said that not one escaped.

III. The Song of Triumph (15:1-21).

Standing on the other shore of the Red sea, they could fittingly sing the song of triumph, because of the miraculous deliverance and the overwhelming defeat.

Instruments of Strength.

He is able to bear the crosses of others because he bears his own. He can be of use to men because he can do without men. He is ethically effective because he is spiritually free. He is able to save because he is strong to suffer. His sympathy and his solitude are both alike the instruments of his strength.—Francis G. Peabody.

Our Helper.

He that wrestles with us strengthens our nerves and sharpens our skill. Our antagonist is our helper.—Burke.

LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE IF SICK, CROSS, FEVERISH

HURRY, MOTHER! REMOVE POISONS FROM LITTLE STOMACH, LIVER, BOWELS.

GIVE CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS AT ONCE IF BILIOUS OR CONSTIPATED.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels needs a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative;" they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—Adv.

How It Happened.

"Pardon me," said the army cook, for military chefs are prone to address their underlings courteously, "but I prithee tell me where you learned to peel potatoes so artistically? I observe that you do not cut off the cuticle in great hunks, as, alas too many do, but lodsen a bit of the skin of the tuber and then deftly strip it all off. You must have had much experience in skinning e'er entering upon a soldier's life?"

"I did, thank you, sir," replied the accomplished member of the kitchen police. "Before I decided to make the world safe for democracy I was a country banker."—Kansas City Star.

Lives 200 Years!

For more than 200 years, Haarlem Oil, the famous national remedy of Holland, has been recognized as an infallible relief from all forms of kidney and bladder disorders. Its very age is proof that it must have unusual merit.

If you are troubled with pains or aches in the back, feel tired in the morning, headaches, indigestion, insomnia, painful or too frequent passage of urine, irritation or stone in the bladder, you will almost certainly find relief in GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. This is the good old remedy that has stood the test for hundreds of years, prepared in the proper quantity and convenient form to take. It is imported direct from Holland laboratories, and you can get it at any drug store. It is a standard, old-time home remedy and needs no introduction. Each capsule contains one dose of five drops and is pleasant and easy to take. Resourceful Doughboy.

I have seen a doughboy with a command of the French language embracing three words, and two of them were vin ordinaire—I have seen such a doughboy make himself thoroughly at home in a French family, entering their life like a brother. He was able to make them understand whenever he wanted anything, he was able to glean all their family history, and he imparted a lot of information about the United States that would have done credit to an old stock salesman. What's more, he told stories to the children, learned all about Suzanne's affair with a soldier, and taught grandpa to shoot dice for five centimes a throw—one cent—George Pattullo, in Saturday Evening Post.

What Doctor Pierce Has Done for Humanity

BY DOCTOR CRIPPS.

It has always seemed to me that Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., should be placed near the top when a list of America's great benefactors is written. He studied and conquered human diseases to a degree that few realize. Whenever he found a remedy that overcame disease, he at once announced it in the newspapers and told where it could be bought at a small price. He did not follow the usual custom of keeping the ingredients secret, so that the rich only could afford to buy the medicine, but openly printed the name of each root and herb he used. And so today the names of Dr. Pierce and his medicines are widely known, and they stand for better health and better citizenship.

One of this great physician's most successful remedies is known as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. These are little, sugar-coated pills, composed of Mayapple, leaves of aloe, root of jalap—things that Nature grows in the ground. These Pellets are safe because they move the bowels gently, leaving no bad after-effects, as so many pills do. Very often they make a person who takes them feel like a new man or woman, for they cleanse the intestines of hard, decayed and poisonous matter that accumulates when one is costive. If you are constipated, by all means go to your druggist and get some of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They may prove to be the very thing your system requires to make you well and happy.

GIRLS! LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR

A small bottle of "Danderine" makes hair thick, glossy and wavy.

Removes all dandruff, stops itching scalp and falling hair.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—it costs but a few cents—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp, and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this. Adv.

GERMANY MUST PAY

Kaiser's Men Responsible for Millions of Murders.

CANNOT PAY FOR LIVES LOST

Nation Must Be Forced to Pay and Pay and Pay, Until It Has Learned That Might Is Not Right.

By WRIGHT A. PATTERSON.

There are in France and Belgium today very close to 3,000,000 soldier graves that would not have been there had Germany not started a war of conquest to gratify the selfish ambitions of a selfish people for world domination.

In these graves are buried the heroes of America, of England, of France, of Belgium, of Italy, of Canada, of Australia, of South Africa, of India, of Portugal, of Morocco, of China and other parts of the world. These heroes gave their lives that the cruelly selfish plans of the Boche might be defeated; that the world might be a dwelling place for freemen and not for the slaves of autocracy.

And the war in which they made the last great sacrifice was started by Germany only to gratify the selfish greed of a people who had been taught that might is right.

Burial Place of Americans in Lorraine.

I realized the tragic interest of America in these graves as I walked over the hilltop at Guillimont farm, near the village of Bony, and found there two large cemeteries in which American dead lie buried. I realized it anew as Gen. Henry Rawlinson, commanding the Fourth British army, recounted to me the incidents of that battle in which American troops made the first break in the Hindenburg line, and when he told me of the wonderful gallantry of those American boys, "the most gallant troops that ever fought on a battlefield."

Today more than 1,000 of those gallant American boys are buried in soldier graves on that battlefield, and little wooden crosses mark their resting places.

Severe Lesson for Germany.

German money cannot pay for those lives, but that spirit of greed, of wantonness, of selfish ambition, that produced the senseless, needless war in which they died, must be crushed, and it can be crushed only by making the German pay, and pay, and pay, until he has learned that might is not right and that war for the purposes of conquest and domination is not profitable.

An American regiment, to which I had belonged some years ago, and in which were enrolled many personal friends, had fought on that field. As I walked beside the long rows of wooden crosses, and knew that some of them marked the resting places of my friends, I felt, as any other American would have felt under the same conditions, that Germany must pay in order that Germany should learn that might is not right.

I am sure that every father, every mother, every brother, every sister, every relative and friend of those American boys who are buried on European battlefields will feel that Germany must pay and pay heavily for the desolation she has caused throughout the world.

There is on the Somme battlefields, not far from what once was the beautiful little city of Peronne, a soldiers' cemetery in which British troops are buried. On each little wooden cross had been painted the name of the soldier buried beneath it, as well as the letter of his company and the number of his battalion. In the onrush of the Huns last March this cemetery was taken, and the wanton cruelty of the Boche is nowise better illustrated than by the fact that he went through that cemetery and painted out the names of these British dead.

Should Pay to the Limit.

Should the Boche not pay for such dastardly work as that? Should he not pay for attempting to deprive the relatives and friends of those British soldiers of knowing their final resting place, even though, thanks to the British graves commission, the attempt will not be successful? He must pay the penalty just as any other criminal must pay the penalty for his crimes. The world cannot send an entire nation to jail, but the world can today punish the nations that have committed the most terrible crimes known to modern times, at least, by making the people of these nations work only that they may pay.

Among the saddest sights to be found in the battle areas of Europe today is the lonely grave, the little cross that stands by itself and marks the spot where a soldier met death by a stray shell. There were many, many thousands of these seen along the sides of the thousand miles of roadways I covered in Belgium and northern France, and in very many cases they marked the spot where a German shell had caught a transport driver as he guided his truck to or from the front. The boys who lie in these lonely graves were heroic American boys, heroic French boys, heroic British boys, and they have paid the great price that the Boche might not destroy the freedom of the world. They gave their all, and whatever the Boche may be made to pay will be small in comparison with this sacrifice.

Near what was the city of Noyon one may see a striking comparison between the methods of the Boche and those of the nations that have been fighting the Germans. Here lie buried side by side both French and German soldiers. Around each cemetery the French have built a fence. Over each French grave flies a French flag, and on each German grave green boughs have been placed by the French. Such treatment for the German dead only emphasizes the need that Germany pay for the desecration of the graves of the allied soldiers committed by her troops in France.

Further Display of Impudence.

Just at the edge of the little French city of St. Mihiel, held by the Germans for four years and retaken by the American troops late last summer, is a German cemetery that stands as an insult to the French people. Here are buried a large number of German officers. In this cemetery the German government erected a magnificent marble shaft commemorating the valor of these German officers, and over the graves stand elaborate marble and granite monuments erected to the memory of these German officers. These monuments have been erected on what has always been French soil, and they stand there as one of the greatest pieces of impudence committed by the German nation in this war.

This is but another of the many, many incidents that add to the seriousness of the crimes committed by the Boche, and for which he should pay.

A very considerable portion of the soil of Belgium and northern France is today given over to the graves of soldiers of the allies, and these soldier boys would not be dead, these graves would not be there, millions of homes would not today be in mourning, had not a selfish people started a war for the purposes of conquest and loot; a war conducted with all the wantonness and cruelty of savages. Why should they not pay, and pay, and pay, until they find that an unholy war, such as they waged, is the most unprofitable business in which man can engage?

SPARROWS' NESTS IN A SHIP

Attracted by Grain and Not at All Affected by Noise, Birds Make Home There.

A large tramp steamer had been towed into a northeast coast port for repairs. After having discharged her cargo of grain, she was placed in a dry dock, situated in the middle of a large ship-repairing establishment, with all the usual accompaniment of noise from pneumatic hammers, steam whistles, shouting of men, and other noises common to all such works.

The grain, of which there is always a good deal left about after the holds are swept up, attracted the sparrows in large numbers, and, as if guided by instinct, they commenced to build nests in various parts of the ship. Undeterred by the noise or by the constant going and coming of the workmen, they reared their broods before the repairs were completed, and the vessel sailed. This is believed to be a unique case, for although the sparrow is a bold bird, it needed some pluck to undertake home building in such circumstances. The workmen admired the pluck of these boisterous, cheeky birds, and watched the proceedings to the flight of the young birds with great interest.

SEE CANADA LANDS

Inspection of Choice Farm Acres Will Be Profitable.

Cost Only a Trifle Compared to Possible Benefit to Be Derived—"Ye Happy Fields, Unknown to Noise and Strife, The Kind Rewarders of Industrial Life"—John Gay.

There are thousands today looking for farms to buy, and with the hundreds of thousands of acres offered for sale, there is no lack of opportunities. But there are all classes of lands, good, bad, and indifferent, much of each. The government of the Dominion of Canada has no land for sale, but within the boundaries of the Dominion there are unlimited acres of choice land owned by railway and land companies and private individuals. It holds no brief for any, nor are any of them clients. But it is to the interest of the Dominion to have the hundreds of thousands of acres placed under cultivation, for every acre thus cultivated adds to the revenue which helps pay the government of the country. It is with the purpose of setting forth the agricultural advantages that Canada, especially Western Canada, possesses, that attention is drawn to the fact. The purpose is to place before the reader truthful statements, and advise the prospective settler as to the necessity to investigate and inspect, leaving to his own deduction the matter of his selection. Once he decides, the government will render him any further information necessary as to location, prices and value of land, and assist him in every way possible to become settled.

The cost of a trip to Western Canada, to any portion of the three provinces—Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta—specially indicated in this work, is but a trifle compared with the benefits that a personal inspection may give. Therefore the advice is to do so. Low rates on railways will be arranged and every opportunity afforded for giving the country a thorough and careful examination. It may be that you wish an improved farm, all ready for occupation and cultivation; you may want raw prairie, which only requires plowing and the other preparation necessary for a seed bed, leaving it to yourself to erect your buildings, sink your well, prepare your garden, and ascertain how close you are to school, church, town and market. You may wish to go into mixed farming, combining the raising of stock with the growing of grain. In this case you will look out for some shelter from sun, wind and storm, and want a farm a portion of which may be cultivated for grain, and pasture fields connected with it. You may make this out of the open level prairie, but you will do better to secure a partially wooded lot, where water and pasture are already at hand. You may wish to go into the raising of cattle, or sheep alone; then you will care less for the open prairie, but select something that may cost you less in the more northerly districts. No matter what you may want, unless it be land upon which to grow cotton, bananas or other tropical or semi-tropical products, your inspection trip will reveal to you that Western Canada possesses possibilities beyond which any literature you may read advises you.—Advertisement.

When the Baboon Calls.

Baboons have been a sore trouble lately to many South African folk, and poison clubs have been founded to keep them away and reduce their numbers. Baboons recently raided a farm in Robertson, and, ignoring all efforts to drive them away, rode the donkeys in the back yard. In Laingsburg, driven by hunger, they raided gardens in broad daylight.

FROM The BOYS in SERVICE

The following letter is one written by Stanley Monroe to a friend operator, Mr. Fred Webb, of Peru, Ind. In turn the letter was sent to F. M. Monroe and wife.

December 2, 1918.

Dear Friend:—

Well it has been very nearly two months since I have had any mail from the United States and I don't know what the news is from home as I was wounded on the 13th. of October and am still in the hospital and expect to get out of here soon started for the states. I was burnt by mustard gas no doubt you have read a great deal of that and I can tell you that it is ——. I am O. K. now, not even a scar left. As you see before we went into battle we had to grease our body over with grease that was for the mustard burn and I sure had plenty on me so the doctors said that was the only reason that it was healed up so good without any scars. Well I dare tell you where we were, in the Argonne woods and on the Verdun front. You know that we fought there and say I never want to go through anything like it any more. We we went into the line under heavy artillery fire from the Huns and in four days we had to call on "L" company to help us as we only had 15 men left out of 250, and say it sure looked sad to see our boys laying on the battle field dying and wounded, but all we could do was to give first aid and go on. I was in the battle when we crossed the Moose river and say we sure was very thirsty and we crossed the river on a temporary bridge built by our engineers. And talk about the machine gun fire, it sure was fierce, but we filled our canteens from the river which was flowing with blood and our boys lying in and along the banks. Fred, you or any one back home do not know of what we went through but I will tell you it was ——. Oh, I could tell you many things that would be very hard to believe, but I know, and ask any one who has been there and seen the same thing.

I sure was lucky coming out the way I did when the boys right along beside me would get hit. I was on an automatic rifle the next thing to a machine gun and my first carrier was killed instantly right by my side, so I threw the gun down, took his rifle and cut his belt and took his shells and went on. You may look on a map and see where I am. About two miles from the town of Mesves and about twenty-five miles from Nevers in the state of Nevers, about central France. Oh I will tell you about going "Over the top" and what comes into your mind. I think we will be sailing for U. S. A. before long. Well I must close and tell all the boys hello for me, expect to be back working with them soon.

So Good night,

Your Friend.

Fourteen letters written by Jonathan Swift between 1732 and 1739 have just sold for $1,000 and letters written by Jane Austin brought $1,300. Now, ye editor could have written some at a greatly reduced price, had we known that letters were in demand.

The St. Joe Fire Department now has a truck for the hauling of its engine. Heretofore the engine has been hauled about by hand power by the volunteers. When calls come in for out-of-town fires the boys have been hitching the engine behind automobiles and it was not satisfactory. The engine is now independent from outside assistance unless it refuses to run when needed real badly.

A letter from our friend Samuel Nelson, of Horseshoe Bend, Idaho, brings us good news to the effect that he now has his ranch clear from all incumbrance and that he will soon have the buildings completed. He has at this time under construction a barn, 18x32 feet with a 14 foot shed on both sides. He is wintering four head of horses and two head of cattle and other stock. Sam has many friends here who will be glad to learn of his success.

A good sized crowd witnessed two fine games of basket ball last Friday evening at the hall, the first being between Butler city team and our newly organized town team. This game the locals lost but the second game, between the Asley H. S. five and our H. S. five, resulted in a different tune, the locals winning with a score of 27-7. Tuesday evening our town team played their second game, with Butler, at Butler and played a much better contest but were then defeated.

Nation Dry Only After Long Fight

Interesting Review of the Battle That Has Ended in Victory for Prohibition Appears in This Issue of The News

Nation-wide prohibition is coming to the United States, with a swiftness that could not have been foreseen one year ago. At that time the history of the battle to make the country dry contained nothing that seemed to promise final success for the cause within so short a time.

But now, a year after the prohibition amendment to the federal constitution was submitted to the states by congress, it has been ratified by more than the required number of states, and in another year the country will be dry unless the unforeseen occurs.

In view of the suddenness with which the battle has ended, at least so far as legislative action is concerned, and the tremendous importance of the event, it is of the greatest interest to review the fight that has been waged for many years to bring about this result. The News is publishing on another page of this issue a story of this fight that every reader will find well worth reading. It is the story of a battle marked by many dramatic incidents. It is not a story for prohibitionists or anti-prohibitionists, but an impartial review of events that have made history not only for the United States, but for the world.

The News feels sure that this review will be of very great interest to all its readers.

Sheets On Trial Monday

Justice of the Peace, J. C. Bailey, had his first case Tuesday evening, when truant officer, Mahlon Baker, of Auburn, made affidavit for the arrest of John Sheets, charged with neglect of sending his daughter Florence to the public school as according to law. The suit was held in the office of S. S. Widney at 7 o'clock and when the Justice read the complaint, Mr. Sheets pleaded guilty to the charge.

Mr. Sheets went on to say that he desired the daughter to attend school but that he and the mother failed to have control over her. It was further learned that Florence was in the sixth grade and that she had attended school only three days during the term. She was taken sick and because the parents have not persuaded her to return, the result was the arrest of the father.

Mr. Baker says that he had made three trips to the house and explained to the mother the consequence of their neglect as parents and it failed to impress them in the least.

The father further stated to the court that because of the large family he was unable to clothe her as she should be to go to school, but the law provides for those emergencies, and of course, had no weight with the court. Mr. Sheets further stated that the mother had lots of work to do and consequently she failed to compell the girl to return to her school work when she was able to return and now she was so far behind that she refused to go. After hearing the case there was only one thing to do, and that was to fine the father according to law. $3.50 was assessed as the costs of this misdemeanor with the understanding that Florence was to start to school Wednesday without fail, and that he, the father would be held responsible for her actions and that the second offense would be more serious.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Pauiding, Pauiding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

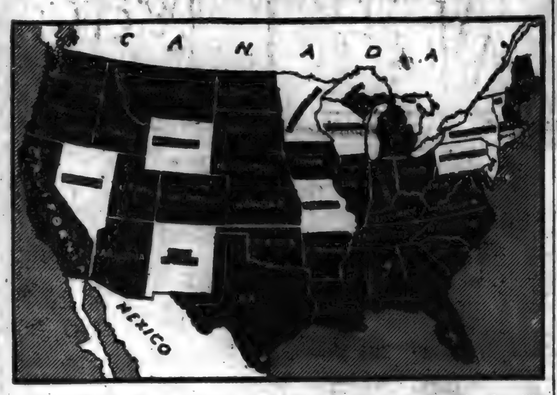
HOW THE NATION WAS VOTED DRY



The first 36 states to ratify the prohibition amendment to the Constitution are shown in black on this map. When Nebraska, the thirty-sixth state to take action, voted in favor of ratification, nation-wide prohibition was assured. Since that time several other states have ratified the amendment.

NATION DRY ONLY AFTER LONG FIGHT

Campaign Comes to End With Surprising Suddenness.

BEFORE CONGRESS 40 YEARS

Sheppard Prohibition Amendment, Eighteenth to Be Adopted, Ratified in Less Than Thirteen Months.

With a swiftness that has surprised even the most optimistic of prohibition advocates the United States has voted itself dry. It has done this by voting into the federal constitution an amendment that prohibits the manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors within the United States for beverage purposes, as well as its importation into or exportation from the United States and all territory subject to its jurisdiction.

For fifty years the campaign to obtain prohibition either by state or federal legislation has been waged without interruption, but now the desired end has been reached by writing the prohibitory regulations into the organic law. In this form, owing to the difficulties attendant upon changes in the Constitution, nation-wide prohibition becomes more of a permanent institution than an experiment that could be terminated by congressional legislation.

The Sheppard prohibition amendment, which has just been ratified by more than three-fourths of the states of the Union, the number required to make it effective, becomes the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution. The resolution providing for its submission to the state legislatures, introduced by Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas, was finally adopted by congress December 18, 1917. On January 16, 1919, less than thirteen months after the adoption of the resolution by congress, ratification of the amendment by the states was accomplished. No other proposed amendment to the Constitution has been adopted with such speed, with the exception of that which provided for the abolition of slavery. Action on the seventeen other amendments that have been adopted has required from nine to forty-three months. The average time required has been about two years.

The war is given the credit for hastening the adoption of prohibition in this country. The economic aspect of the question was emphasized by the war emergency, and the handwriting on the wall was seen when congress passed a law providing for nation-wide prohibition as a war measure, to become effective July 1, 1919, and to continue until the armies of the United States have been demobilized. If this law goes into effect, as contemplated, the country will go dry July 1, although the constitutional amendment will not become effective until one year after its ratification by the required number of state legislatures.

Text of Amendment.

The text of the resolution embodying the amendment which has now been adopted is as follows:

JOINT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AN AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, two-thirds of each house concurring therein, that the following amendment to the Constitution be, and hereby is, proposed to the states to become valid as a part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of the several states as provided by the Constitution:

Section 1—After one year from the ratification of this article the manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited.

Section 2—The congress and the several states have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Section 3—This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the legislatures of the several states as provided in the Constitution within seven years from the date of the submission hereof to the states by the congress.

CHAMP CLARK,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

THOMAS R. MARSHALL,
Vice President of the United States and President of the Senate.

I certify that this joint resolution originated in the senate.

JAMES M. BAKER, Secretary.

This resolution was adopted by the senate on August 1, 1917, by a vote of 65 to 20, and by the house of representatives on December 17 by a vote of 282 to 128. House amendments were adopted by the senate December 18.

Mississippi First to Ratify.

Mississippi was the first state to ratify the amendment, both senate and house acting on January 8, 1918. Virginia, Kentucky and South Carolina took similar action during the same month and North Dakota soon followed, but in most states action was delayed until this year, when the various state legislatures convened. Then the states took action on the amendment in rapid succession. Following North Dakota the states acted in the following order until Nebraska, the thirty-sixth to act, completed the ratification:

Maryland	West Virginia
Montana	California
Texas	Washington
Delaware	Indiana
South Dakota	Arkansas
Massachusetts	Illinois
Arizona	North Carolina
Georgia	Kansas
Louisiana	Alabama
Florida	Iowa
Michigan	Colorado
Ohio	Oregon
Oklahoma	New Hampshire
Idaho	Utah
Tennessee	Nebraska
Maine

Before Congress 40 Years.

Bills providing for nation-wide prohibition by legislation and resolutions proposing constitutional amendments for the same purpose have been before congress almost continually for more than 40 years. Senator H. W. Blair of New Hampshire proposed the first amendment in 1876. This provided only for the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of spirituous distilled liquors for beverage purposes. He introduced a similar measure nine times, changing it in 1886 to include all alcoholic liquors.

Congressman Hobson of Alabama introduced the famous "Hobson resolution" in the house December 19, 1913. The amendment was amended many times by Hobson himself, finally providing for a division of responsibility for the enforcement of the law between state and federal governments. This was done to secure the support of certain advocates of "state rights." The resolution came to a vote December 22, 1914, but received only 197 votes, while 258 were necessary for its adoption.

In 1914 Senator Works of California introduced a bill providing for the prohibition of spirituous liquors, including wine and beer, but it received little support from prohibition leaders and did not come to a vote.

May Go to Courts.

There is a probability that antiprohibition forces will attempt to secure an annulment of the ratification vote in several states and will attack the legality of the action of congress. In San Francisco a court order has been secured restraining Governor Stephens temporarily from signing the ratification of the amendment. It has been stated that similar action may be taken in other states, including Arkansas, Colorado, Maine, Nevada, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Oregon, Utah, Washington, Missouri and Nebraska. In these states, it is declared, all action taken by the state legislatures may be submitted to the people under a referendum.

The Anti-Saloon league contends that this is impossible, outlining its position in the following statement:

"Article V of the federal Constitution provides that the legislature or a state convention is the only body which can ratify an amendment to the Constitution. Congress is given the power to say which one shall have the authority. Congress had chosen the state legislatures as the bodies to ratify the federal prohibition amendment. A state referendum therefore would be illegal and void."

Attorneys for the liquor interests claim that there are many points on which the amendment may be attacked in the courts and plans have been made, it is declared, for action along these lines.

COLD WATER PARTY FIFTY YEARS OLD

Was Organized for National Political Action in 1869.

FIRST POLLED 5,607 VOTES

John P. St. John's Stirring Campaign of 1884—Great Work of Miss Willard and the W. C. T. U. in Suppressing Intemperance.

Final triumph for its cause came to the national Prohibition party almost at the time of its golden jubilee. It came into existence fifty years ago next September in Farwell hall, Chicago, by the act of a convention of about 500 delegates representing 19 states.

For several years the formation of such a party had been discussed because the leaders of the Republican and Democratic parties had virtually ignored the advocates of prohibition. The Good Templars, organized in 1851 as a society of total abstainers, urged such action, and other leaders believed it necessary. At a state temperance convention held in Pennsylvania in 1867 the plan was first publicly broached, and two years later on May 29, 1869, the call for the Chicago convention was put out by the grand lodge of the Good Templars in session at Oswego, N. Y. A committee to formulate the plans was named, comprising John Russell, Detroit; J. A. Spencer, Cleveland, O.; James Black, Lancaster, Pa.; John N. Stearns, New York, and Daniel Wilkins, Bloomington, Ill. The convention called by this committee organized the party on September 1, adopted a platform and appointed a national committee of which John Russell was chairman.

First National Ticket.

Nearly three years later, on Washington's birthday, 1872, the new party met in convention in Columbus, O., to place a national ticket in the field. James Black was nominated for president and John Russell for vice president. Mr. Black was a prominent Good Templar and also was one of the founders of the National Temperance Society and Publication house and of the Camp Meeting association at Ocean Grove, N. J. Mr. Russell, also a leader of the Good Templars and a Methodist minister, was known as the father of the Prohibition party, for he published a newspaper, the Peninsular Herald, which led the way in advocating the organization of the party for political action.

With all their devotion to the cause, the Prohibition leaders had no hope of success in the election of 1872, and they were not disappointed. Their ticket received only 5,607 votes. This did not discourage them, and four years later they put Green Clay Smith of Kentucky and Gideon T. Stewart on the ticket. These gentlemen received 9,737 votes. General Neal Dow of Maine, who had gained fame as the author of the Maine Prohibition law, was the next presidential candidate, in 1880, with H. A. Thompson in second place on the ticket. They polled only 10,366 votes.

St. John's Hot Campaign.

When the plans were being laid for the campaign of 1884, Frances E. Willard and her fellow workers of the W. C. T. U. entered the field. They sent to the Republican convention a great petition asking that consideration be given the pleas of the temperance advocates, but it was ignored and even thrown into the dirt on the floor, and Miss Willard promptly turned to the Prohibition party. Her help was welcomed and John P. St. John of Kansas was put at the head of the cold water ticket. Already he was a notable figure, for he had fought in the Frances E. Willard.

Civil war as lieutenant colonel of the 143d regiment of Illinois volunteers and later served two terms as governor of Kansas. He was a Republican, but his party thought him too warm a friend of the prohibitionists and he was defeated for re-election in 1882. Accepting the Prohibition nomination, he went into the campaign with all his vigor and delivered stirring speeches all over the country, especially paying attention to New York state, where the fight between James G. Blaine and Grover Cleveland had made things very warm. St. John was out to beat the Republicans, and he succeeded, for the Prohibition vote was large enough to let Cleveland win New York state and, in consequence, the nation. The Prohibitionists polled the surprisingly large vote of 150,626. That the Republicans credited them with giving victory to the Democrats was proved by the fact that in more than a hundred cities St. John was burned in effigy.

The Prohibition convention of 1896 split the party over woman suffrage and money. The "free silver" minority formed a Liberal party, with Bentley of Nebraska and Southgate of Illinois as its standard-bearers. They polled about 13,000 votes.

The feature of the Prohibition campaign of 1900 was a tour of the country by the candidates and a corps of speakers by special train. In 1912 the Prohibition convention renominated the candidates of 1908.

Results in Later Years.

The candidates since 1884 and their vote are as follows:

1888, Clinton B. Fisk, New Jersey, and J. A. Brooks, Missouri, 249,945 votes.

1892, John Bidwell, California, and J. B. Cranfill, Texas, 270,710 votes.

1896, Joshua Levering, Maryland, and Hale Johnson, Illinois, 130,753 votes.

1900, John G. Woolley, Illinois, and H. B. Metcalf, Rhode Island, 209,469 votes.

1904, S. C. Swallow, Pennsylvania, and George B. Carroll, Texas, 258,205 votes.

1908, Eugene W. Chafin, Illinois, and Aaron S. Watkins, Ohio, 253,231 votes.

1912, Eugene W. Chafin, Arizona, and Aaron S. Watkins, Ohio, 208,923 votes.

1916, J. Frank Hanley, Indiana, and Dr. Ira Landrith, Tennessee, 214,340 votes.

Women Prominent in the Fight.

For many years the women have been prominent in the prohibition movement, for the evils of intemperance bore heavily on their sex. To them must be given a very large share in the credit for the success of the fight. They started it publicly on a large scale in 1873 in Ohio with a crusade to pray the saloons out of existence.

This movement, inaugurated by a little band of women who held prayer meetings in saloons when permitted and on the pavements outside when not allowed to enter, spread like wildfire throughout the nation and was denominated by the press a "whirlwind from the Lord." Many saloons were swept out of existence, but it soon became evident that prayer must be accompanied by action if they would prevent the return or the re-opening of the saloons once closed.

The call for organization was issued from Chautauqua, N. Y., in August, 1874. The convention was held in Cleveland, O., November 18-20, 1874, and at that meeting there was organized the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Delegates were present from 17 states.

The plan of work was presented by Frances E. Willard and most of the thoughts embodied in the plan were later worked out in the W. C. T. U. At this convention Miss Willard offered also the famous resolution: "Resolved, That recognizing the fact that our cause is, and will be, combated by mighty, determined and relentless forces, we will, trusting in him who is the Prince of Peace, meet argument with argument, misjudgment with patience, denunciation with kindness, and all our difficulties and dangers with prayer."

Pursued Many Roads to Its Goal.

From its very earliest years the W. C. T. U. sought out a variety of avenues through which the children of the nation might be educated in the principles of total abstinence and the adult won for the absolute prohibition of the liquor traffic. Out of the juvenile work grew the Loyal Temperance Legion for the children, and the Young Peoples' branch for the young men and women. Later the children were enrolled as "Young Campaigners for Prohibition."

Over forty departments were organized, and carried on to some degree in every state and territory, and in from ten to twenty thousand local unions. Among these were: Temperance work in Sunday schools, which, with scientific temperance instruction in public schools, brought practically all the children in the nation in touch with temperance truth; medical temperance; mothers' meetings; flower mission and relief; equal suffrage; moral education and rape betterment; oratorical and declamatory medical contests; Christian citizenship, and child welfare.

MANY GAIN FAME IN SALOON FIGHT

Activities of Various Kinds Win Wide Attention.

FRANCES E. WILLARD LEADER

Known All Over World as Head of W. C. T. U.—Picturesque Career of Carrie Nation Is Recalled.

The final adoption of nation-wide prohibition calls to memory a number of men and women who have achieved not only national but world-wide fame through their connection with the prohibition, or, as it once was known, the temperance movement.

Some of these persons who have been most prominent in the movement were active so long ago that their names mean little to those who have not been closely connected with the prohibition movement, but others are well remembered by the present generation. Among those who have won the widest fame at various times through their activity in this work may be mentioned Gen. Neal Dow, who is credited with bringing prohibition to Maine, the first state to become dry; John B. Gough, who became a world-famous "temperance" lecturer after having been a drink addict at twenty-five; Frances E. Willard, who personifies the W. C. T. U., and Carrie Nation, the eccentric saloon smasher, who died only a short time ago after a tempestuous career.

Gen. Neal Dow.

Neal Dow was born in Portland, Me., of Quaker parentage. He was twice mayor of Portland and a member of the state legislature. He entered the Civil war as colonel of the Thirteenth Maine volunteers. He was wounded and was a prisoner in Libby prison and was made a brigadier general for gallant service. Yet the country knows Neal Dow simply as "Father of the Maine Law" and as a temperance reformer. Maine passed the law of which he was the author in 1851 and was the first state to establish prohibition. General Dow traveled widely in foreign countries working for temperance, and on his ninetieth birthday memorial meetings were held in many parts of the world. He died in 1897.

John B. Gough, who was the first temperance advocate to attract more than local fame, was a native of England, where he was born in 1817, but he came to the United States when he was twelve years old. He learned the bookbinding trade, but early became addicted to liquor and could not hold a position. He made such a living as he could by singing in saloons. Later he made a new start and married, but when he lost his wife and child he again took to drink and sank to new depths.

The turning-point in his life came when he was induced by a Massachusetts Quaker to sign a total abstinence pledge. He became a temperance lecturer, and after making many tours in the United States he visited England, where he conducted two campaigns. His fame spread throughout the English-speaking nations and his books have been translated into many other languages.

Frances Willard's Fame World-Wide.

Frances E. Willard's fame is world-wide. She was born in Churchville, N. Y., in 1839. A graduate of the Northwestern Female college at Evanston, Ill., in 1859, she taught and traveled and from 1871 to 1874 she was professor of esthetics in Northwestern university and dean of the woman's college, where she developed the system of self-government that has been widely copied.

In 1874 the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union was formed at Cleveland, O., and Frances Willard found her life work. She served for five years as corresponding secretary and then became president. In 1888 she founded the World's W. C. T. U., which grew to have branches in 50 countries, and in 1888 she became its president. She wrote many temperance pamphlets and was the author of four books. In the minds of women—and of most men—the world over Frances Willard and W. C. T. U. are synonymous.

Carrie Nation broke into the limelight in the fall of 1900 and made her name a household word in newspaper offices and most American homes. She was Mrs. David Nation of Medicine Lodge, Kan., and a member in good and regular standing of the W. C. T. U. It is said that her first husband died of delirium tremens. Anyway, Carrie Nation had another and more apparent incentive to use her hatchet on saloon furniture. And wield that hatchet she did; its fame temporarily eclipsed that of the Father of His Country.

Carrie Nation's Little Hatchet.

Kansas was legally a prohibition state. As a matter of fact prohibition was but a name and the saloons of the state were wide open. The general plan was to fine a saloon $25 a month for breaking the law; that solved the license difficulty. In short, prohibition in Kansas had broken down completely in the ten years it had been nominally in force and the state authorities had not the courage either to modify the law or enforce it. Carrie Nation took the situation into her own hands.

Carrie Nation first visited Kiowa and broke up two saloons with her little hatchet. Then she went to Wichita and broke up two more. She was put in jail, kept there for several days and then released. She broke up another saloon and was not even arrested. She went to Topeka and made an appeal to Governor Stanley. He told her he did not approve of her methods. She also addressed both houses of the state legislature. She visited Chicago and other cities, between times continuing the work of smashing saloon fixtures.

States Enact Dry Laws.

The activities of these early leaders of the prohibition movement gradually brought about the enactment of state legislation prohibiting or regulating the sale of liquor. Some of the early state laws provided for local option, which made possible local prohibition, as in Connecticut in 1839.

In 1837 Neal Dow, alarmed by the vast quantities of rum entering Maine through the West Indian trade, began his agitation for prohibition in that state. Stringent regulation of the liquor traffic was established in several states, but the passage of the Maine prohibitory law in 1851 afforded the first real test of prohibition. Massachusetts and Rhode Island in 1852 passed laws forbidding the sale of liquor; these laws were subsequently repealed. Massachusetts adopted local option by towns. Iowa passed a constitutional amendment in 1882; it was declared void and was superseded by a statute (1884). This in turn was done away with by the famous Mulct law, which itself was modified. Several states rejected prohibition sought to be secured either through statute or by constitutional amendment. Kansas adopted prohibition in 1890 and a little later openly violated the law. So there was spasmodic activity in most parts of the country toward prohibition, but it was without plan or cohesion. When the ratification of the eighteenth amendment began the situation by states as to prohibition was as indicated by the following table:

He knew very well that what she had said about his daughter and Joseph Stagg was quite true. In his selfishness he had been glad all these years that the hardware merchant was balked of happiness.

The carpenter had always been a self-centered individual, desirous of his own comfort, and rather miserly. He had not approved, in the first place, of the intimacy between Joseph Stagg and his daughter Amanda.

"No good'll come o' that," he had told himself.

That is, no good to Jedidiah Parlow. He foresaw at the start the loss of the girl's help about the house, for his wife was then a helpless invalid.

Then Mrs. Parlow died. This death made plainer still to the carpenter that Mandy's marriage was bound to bring inconvenience to him. Especially if she married a close-fisted young business man like Joe Stagg would this be true. For, at the reading of his wife's will Mr. Parlow discovered that the property they occupied, even the shop in which he worked, which had been given to Mrs. Parlow by her parents, was to be the sole property of her daughter. Mandy was the heir. Mr. Parlow did not possess even a life interest in the estate.

It was a blow to the carpenter. He made a good income and had money in bank, but he loved money too well to wish to spend it after he had made it. He did not want to give up the place. If Mandy remained unmarried there would never be any question between them of rent or the like.

Therefore, if he was not actually the cause of the difference that arose between the two young people, he seized and enlarged upon it and did all in his power to make a mere misunderstanding grow into a quarrel that neither of the proud, high-spirited lovers would bridge.

Jedidiah Parlow knew why Joe Stagg had taken that other girl to Faith camp meeting. The young man had stopped at the Parlow place when Amanda was absent and explained to the girl's father. But the latter had never mentioned this fact to his daughter.

Instead he had made Joe's supposed offense the greater by suggestion and innuendo. And it was he, too, who had urged the hurt Mandy to retaliate by going to the dance with another young man. Meeting Joe Stagg later, the carpenter had said bitter things to him, purporting to come from Mandy. It was all mean and vile; the old man knew it now—as he had known it then.

All these years he had tried to add fuel to the fire of his daughter's anger against Joe Stagg. And he believed he had benefited thereby. But, somehow, during the past few months, he had begun to wonder if, after all, "the game was worth the candle."

Suddenly he had gained a vision of what Amanda Parlow's empty life meant to her.

Carolyn May, interested only in seeing her friends made happy, had no idea of the turmoil she had created in Mr. Parlow's mind.

During the time that the nurse was at the abandoned lumber camp caring for Judy Mason, Carolyn May hoped that something might take Uncle Joe there.

The next Friday, after school was out, Miss Amanda appeared at the Stagg home and suggested taking Carolyn May into the woods with her, "for the week-end," as she laughingly said. Tim, the hackman, had brought the nurse home for a few hours and would take her back to Judy's cabin.

"Poor old Judy is much better, but she is still suffering and cannot be left alone for long," Miss Amanda said. "Carolyn May will cheer her up."

Mr. Parlow would drive over on Sunday afternoon and bring the little girl home. Of course, Prince had to go along.

That Friday evening at supper matters in the big kitchen of the Stagg house were really at a serious pass. Joseph Stagg sat down to the table visibly without appetite. Aunty Rose drank one cup of tea after another without putting a crumb between her lips.

"Say, Aunty Rose," demanded Mr. Stagg, "what under the sun did we do before Hannah's Carlyn came here, anyway? Seems to me we didn't really live, did we?"

Aunty Rose had no answer to make to these questions.

In the morning there was a smoky fog over everything—a fog that the sun did not dissipate, and behind which it looked like an enormous saffron ball.

Mr. Stagg went down to the store as usual. News came over the long-distance wires that thousands of acres of woodland were burning, that the forest reserves were out, and that the farmers of an entire township on the far side of the mountain were engaged in trying to make a barrier over which the flames would not leap. It was the consensus of opinion, however, that the fire would not cross the range.

"Scarcely any chance of its sweeping down on us," decided Mr. Stagg. "Reckon I won't have to go home to provide for-ever."

At the usual hour he started for The Corners for dinner. Having remained in the store all the morning, he had not realized how much stronger the smell of smoke was than it had been at breakfast time. Quite involuntarily he quickened his pace.

The fog and smoke overcast the sky thickly and made it of a brassy color, just as though a huge copper pot had been overturned over the earth. Women stood at their doors, talking back and forth in subdued tones. There was a spirit of expectancy in the air.

The hardware merchant was striding along at a quick pace when he came to the Parlow place; but he was not going so fast that he did not hear the carpenter hailing him in his cracked voice.

"Hey, you, Joe Stagg! Hey, you!"

Amazed, Mr. Stagg turned to look. Parlow was hobbling from the rear premises, groaning at every step, scarcely able to walk.

"That sciatica's got me ag'in," he snarled. "I'm a'most doubled up. Couldn't climb into a carriage to save my soul."

"What d'you want to climb into a carriage for?" demanded Mr. Stagg.

"'Cause somebody's got to go for that gal of mine—and little Carlyn May. Ain't you heard—or is your mind so set on makin' money down there to your store that you don't know nothin' else?"

"Haven't I heard what?" returned the other with fine restraint, for he saw the old man was in pain.

"The fire's come over to this side. I saw the flames myself. And Aaron

He Plunged Forward Leaped the Blazing Brand and Galloped Down the Road.

Crummit drove through and says that you can't git by on the main road. The fire's followed the West Brook right down and is betwixt us and Adams' old camp."

"Bless me!" gasped the hardware dealer, paling under his tan.

"Wal?" snarled Parlow. "Goin' to stand there chatterin' all day, or be you goin' to do something?"

"Somebody must get over to that cabin and bring them out," Joseph Stagg said, without taking offense at the crabbed old carpenter.

"Wal!" exclaimed Parlow, "glad ter see you're awake."

"Oh, I'm awake," the other returned shortly. "I was just figuring on who's got the best horse."

"I have," snapped Parlow.

"Yes. And I'd decided on taking Cherry, too," the hardware dealer added, and swung into the lane toward the carpenter's barn.

"Hey, you! Needn't be so brash about it," growled the carpenter. "He's my hoss, I s'pose?"

Joseph Stagg went straight ahead, and without answering. Having once decided on his course, he wasted no time.

He rolled back the big door and saw Cherry already harnessed in his box-stall.

Together they backed the animal between the shafts, fastened the traces, and Mr. Stagg leaped quickly to the seat and gathered up the reins.

"You'll hafter take the Fallow road," the carpenter shouted after him. "And have a care drivin' Cherry—"

Horse and buckboard whirled out of the yard and his voice was lost to the hardware merchant.

Cherry stepped out splendidly, and they left a cloud of dust behind them as they rolled up the pike, not in the direction of the abandoned camp. Forewarned, he did not seek to take the shortest way to the cabin where Amanda Parlow and Carolyn May were perhaps even now threatened by the forest fire. The Fallow road turned north from the pike three miles from The Corners.

Flecks of foam began to appear on Cherry's glossy coat almost at once. The air was very oppressive, and there was no breeze.

The streak of flame that had followed down the banks of West brook moved mysteriously. He could see the smoke of it now.

Amanda Parlow and his niece might even now be threatened by the flames!

Now that danger threatened the woman he had loved all these years, it seemed as though his mind and heart were numbed. He was terrified beyond expression—terrified for her safety, and terrified for fear that somebody, even Jedidiah Parlow, should suspect just how he felt about it.

The horse's hoofs rang sharply over the stony path. Presently they capped a little ridge and started down into a hollow. Not until they were over the ridge was Mr. Stagg aware that the hollow was filled, chokingly filled, with billowy white smoke.

Another man—one as cautious as the hardware merchant notoriously was—would have pulled the horse down to a walk. But Joseph Stagg's cautiousness had been flung to the winds. Instead, he shouted to Cherry and the beast increased his stride.

Ten rods further on the horse snorted, stumbled, and tried to stop. A writhing, flaming snake—a burning branch—plunged down through the smoke directly ahead.

"Go on!" shouted Joseph Stagg, with a sharpness that would ordinarily have set Cherry off at a gallop.

But, as the snorting creature still shied, the man seized the whip and lashed poor Cherry cruelly along his flank.

At that the horse went mad. He plunged forward, leaped the blazing brand, and galloped down the road at a perilous gait. The man tried neither to soothe him nor to retard the pace.

The smoke swirled around them. The driver could not see ten feet beyond the horse's nose. Ten minutes later they rattled down into the straight road, and then, very soon indeed, were at the abandoned camp.

The fire was near, but it had not reached this place. There was no sign of life about.

The man knew which was Judy's cabin. He leaped from the vehicle, leaving the panting Cherry unhitched, and ran to the hut.

The door swung open. The poor furniture was in place. Even the bedclothing was rumpled in the old woman's bunk. But neither she nor Amanda Parlow nor little Carolyn May was there.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Laurel to the Brave.

The heart of the man was like a weight in his bosom. With so many hundred acres of forest on fire, and that, too, between the abandoned camp and The Corners and Sunrise Cove, how would Amanda Parlow and Carolyn May know where to go?

Certainly the place must have been deserted in haste. There was Carolyn May's coat. The man caught it up and stared around, as though expecting the child to be within sight.

The old woman's clothing was scattered about, too. It did not look as though anything had been removed from the hut. Coming out, he found another article on the threshold—one of Amanda's gloves.

Joseph Stagg lifted the crumpled glove to his lips.

"Oh, God, spare her!" he burst forth. "Spare them both!"

Then he kissed the glove again and hid it away in the inner pocket of his vest.

The hardware dealer tried to think of just what the fugitives might have done when they escaped from the cabin.

If it were true that Amanda would not run toward the fire, then she more than likely had taken the opposite direction on leaving the cabin. Therefore, Joseph Stagg went that way—setting off down the tote road, leading Cherry by his bridle.

Suddenly he remembered calling Prince the day Carolyn May had been lost on the ice. He raised his voice in a mighty shout for the dog now.

"Prince! Princey, old boy! Where are you?"

Again and again he called, but there was no reply. The smoke was more stifling and the heat more intense every minute. Mr. Stagg realized that he must get out quickly if he would save himself and the horse.

He had just stepped into the buckboard again, when there was an excited scrambling in the underbrush, and a welcoming bark was given.

"Prince! Good boy!" the man shouted. "Where are they?"

The excited dog flew at him, leaping on the buckboard so as to reach him. The mongrel was delighted, and showed it as plainly as a dumb brute could.

But he was anxious, too. He leaped back to the ground, ran a little ahead, and then looked back to see if the man was following. The hardware dealer shouted to him again:

"Go ahead, Princey! We're coming!"

He picked up the reins and Cherry started. The dog, barking his satisfaction, ran on ahead and struck into a side path which led down a glade. Joseph Stagg knew immediately where this path led to. There was a spring and a small morass in the bottom of the hollow.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

PRINCESS PAT IS BETROTHED

The British court circular makes the following statement: "The king has gladly consented to the betrothal of Princess Patricia of Connaught to Commander Alexander Ramsey, brother of the earl of Dalhousie." Princess Patricia of Connaught is a daughter of the duke of Connaught, former governor general of Canada, and a cousin of King George. She is in her early thirties and long has been a favorite in court circles in England and Canada. Known as Princess Pat, she has been regarded as the most popular of the younger members of British royalty.

Several times she has been reported betrothed. The king of Spain, Lord Anglesey, the count of Turin and Grand Duke Michael of Russia were among those to whom at various times the princess was said to be engaged.

One of Canada's most famous regiments, the "Princess Pat," is sponsored by the princess, who is the honorary colonel in chief.

Alexander Robert Maule Ramsey is a commander in the royal navy. He was born in 1881, the son of the thirteenth earl of Dalhousie. He served with the British forces in the Dardanelles in 1914, and was awarded the Distinguished Service Order.

Princess Pat is described as a handsome young woman, with high spirit, keen sense of humor and a fondness for golf and horseback riding. She was a favorite with Edward VII.

NEW DOCTRINE BY SENATOR KNOX

Senator P. C. Knox of Pennsylvania, formerly secretary of state, has propounded to the senate a new American doctrine in international affairs. Holding that Washington's caution against entangling foreign alliances should not militate against a close association of the United States and other great nations for world welfare, and that his proposal would strengthen the Monroe doctrine, the senator enunciated his new doctrine thus:

"If a situation should arise in which any power or combination of powers should directly or indirectly menace the freedom and peace of Europe, the United States would regard such situation with grave concern as a menace to its own freedom and peace and would consult with other powers affected with a view to concerted action for the removal of such menace."

The Pennsylvania senator spoke in support of his resolution proposing to place the senate on record as favoring the postponement of consideration of a league of nations and the freedom of the seas question until after the settlement of the immediate issues of the great war at the peace conference.

FIRST-CLASS FIGHTING YANK

A striking tribute to the courage and skill of Brig. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commanding the Eighty-fourth brigade of the Forty-second (Rainbow) division, was given by Maj. Gen. Charles T. Menoher, formerly in command of the division, in a letter to General Pershing, urging for a second time the promotion of General MacArthur to the rank of major general.

It reviews the record of General MacArthur and discloses that the young officer, a major of engineers when the United States entered the war, has been twice wounded, has been decorated by both the French and American governments for personal gallantry in action, and in addition has been twice recommended for the French Legion of Honor.

"The contributions made to our military establishment by this general officer already have had far-reaching effects," writes General Menoher. "He has stood for the actual physical command of large bodies of troops in battle, not for a day, but for days' duration, and I believe has actually commanded larger bodies of troops in the battle line than any other officer in our army with, in each instance, conspicuous success.

"He has developed, combined and applied the use of infantry and correlated armies with an effect upon the enemy, a husbandry of his own forces and means and a resourcefulness which no other American commander in the field has.

"His efforts have been untiring, uninterrupted and without the least regard for his personal safety."

HEADS NAVAL WAR COLLEGE

© Western Newspaper Union.

Admiral William S. Sims, commander of the American fleet in European waters, will be relieved of his present duties to assume the presidency of the United States Naval War college at Newport, R. I., it is announced by Secretary Daniels. It is expected that Admiral Sims will take up his new post.

Secretary Daniels has asked for the naval war college twice the appropriation of last year. Plans have been made for its comprehensive expansion until its work reaches officers throughout the fleet.

Secretary Daniels is now preaching the necessity for the largest navy in the world for the United States. He says:

"Suppose the powers do not now agree to curtail armament? Then it is entirely obvious to all that the United States, if she is to realize her destiny as a leader of the democratic impulse, if she is to play her proper part in the protection of small nations, the preservation of the freedom of the seas for them and for the world at large, must have a navy that will be as powerful as that of any nation in the world.

"In case of a world police I am quite certain that it would be improper for America even to consider the proposition of contributing a number of units smaller than that contributed by the greatest other power."

Temperance Notes

(Conducted by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.)

WORLD PROHIBITION.

With the near approach of constitutional prohibition for the United States, and coincident with the close of the war, November 11, 1918, believing the time ripe for an intensive campaign for world prohibition, Miss Anna A. Gordon, president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance union, and one of the honorary secretaries of the World's W. C. T. U., rallied the forces of this great organization to renewed high endeavor by sending out from Evanston, Ill., this stirring proclamation:

"Proclamation for World Prohibition:

"World democracy, world peace and world patriotism demand world prohibition.

"Representatives of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the United States, a republic about to write prohibition in its constitutional law, we hereby call upon the peoples of all faiths and of all organizations in the world's family of nations, to clasp hands with the World's W. C. T. U., and help bring to full fruition its hope and its heroic service of 35 years on behalf of a sober world. Science declares against alcohol. Health, conservation and business prosperity demand total abstinence and prohibition. Together let us agitate, educate, organize and legislate, until the exalted vision of the founder of the World's W. C. T. U., Frances E. Willard, is realized; until the gospel of the golden rule of Christ is worked out in the customs of society and in the laws of every land.

"At the close of the devastating world war, in the white heat of the limitless, unparalleled opportunities of a new internationalism, depending upon the help of God and of all who love humanity we hereby proclaim, by the year 1925, the triumph of world prohibition.

"Rest Cottage, Evanston, Illinois, U. S. A.

"November 11, 1918."

GOING DRY.

By Walt Mason.

This land of ours is going dry, the grogshops close their swinging doors, and soon the man who wants old rye will have to swim to foreign shores. John Barleycorn has met his fate, he's being pushed clear off the map; and we must learn to celebrate with sparkling water from the tap. There is no ginmill in the vale, there are no ginmills on the hills; dry people call for Adam's ale, and fill themselves with babbling rills. The workman buys a house and lot with money that he used to blow for brimming bowls of liquor rot, that filled his head and soul with woe. Tired father laps up sparkling brooks, instead of seeking gilded halls, and has some coin to spend for books, and pictures for the parlor walls. The young man hits the village pond, when thirst has given him the blues; and then he buys a U. S. bond, which is a better thing than booze. The war has killed the Demon Rum, has been a hoar and deadly frost; and men will say, in years to come, the war was worth whate'er it cost. The ginmill shuts its latticed doors, the red-nosed patrons don't crowd in; the jeweled barkeeper no more pours rain water in the keg of gin. The thirsty man thinks not of beer, but to the nearest hydrant tramps and quaffs a flagon bright and clear, then buys himself War Savings stamps.

TWO GLASSES OF WINE.

One of the world's great violinists was Paganini, an Italian by birth. He played before the courts of Europe. A great artist and friend of Paganini, after attending some of the violinist's remarkable performances, said: "You have played those wonderful passages, requiring the greatest fineness of touch, absolutely without fault, except on two nights this week. On those nights you slightly blurred certain notes. Why is it?" "Ah!" replied the great violinist, "before going onto the platform on those two nights I took a glass of wine. I felt conscious myself that in the most difficult passages I had not transcribed them perfectly."

A LIBEL ON THE WORKMEN.

Why should the laborers in the war industries be branded as less loyal and patriotic, less willing to make sacrifices for the winning of the war, than other men and women? The soldier or sailor cheerfully forgoes indulgence in intoxicants without threatening to lay down his arms. Men who work on the railroads and in other important positions feel it no hardship to abstain from alcohol in all its forms. There is no reason to suppose that other men who are doing war work quite as important as that of the men in uniform are made of inferior stuff.

WORLD PROHIBITION THE SOLUTION.

In an article on "Organic Treatment for an Organic Disease," Hon. Richmond Pearson Hobson said:

"As prohibition cannot be satisfactory in America so long as any state remains wet, so prohibition cannot be regarded as organic and adequate to the world while any nation remains wet. America with prohibition in her own constitution is but on the threshold of her great mission for which she has been marked from the foundations of the world."

ARMENIA SYMBOL OF SUFFERING FOR AGES

THROUGH ALL YEARS OF PERSECUTION HAS BEEN FAITHFUL TO CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

The Belgian Tragedy Falls Into Unimportance When Compared With That of Near East.

By MARY LOUISE CARMICHAEL

Armenia, the wonderful little nation so many times overpowered but never overcome, is accepted by the world as the symbol of suffering. Since the year 311, when the Armenians first incurred the hostility of Rome because they had adopted the Christian faith, down through the centuries to the present time these people have been persecuted for their tenacity in the profession of Christianity. But persecution has only increased their fidelity.

Today those who have escaped the horrible massacres perpetrated by their oppressors are homeless wanderers, scattered througnout Asia Minor and many are found in the Caucasus under Russian rule. They have shown remarkable tenacity in preserving their individuality as a people and the ability to recover from disaster. They were the earliest nation to become Christian and have as a nation steadily adhered to the faith, although thousands of their number have suffered martyrdom on account of their religious belief.

The last Armenian king surrendered to Egypt in 1375 and never since has the nation been strong enough to regain its freedom, surrounded as it is by hostile tribes and cut off from help from western nations. For over a thousand years they have been under Turkish oppression, but although they are a subject race and have had the most fearful atrocities practised on them, they have retained their racial purity and customs, their steadfastness in the Christian faith and their language. On account of their religious belief and their sane habits of life, they have managed to keep their intellectual vigor and physical strength.

The Turks have always been jealous of the ability and intelligence of the Armenians and have feared their shrewdness. In proportion to their number, they have acquired far more of the wealth of the land than the Turks and this has aroused the envy of their rulers. Turkey has tried to abolish the Armenian question by abolishing the Armenians.

The Turkish government, with the approval if not with the direct cooperation of Germany, has tried to exterminate an entire people whose chief offense was industry and whose unforgiving crime was the profession of Christianity. As Belgium by her heroic resistance against Germany saved Paris, so Armenia by refusing to join Turkey, stood loyal to the Allies and made it impossible for Germany to carry out her plans in the Caucasus.

The American Committee of the Armenian and Syrian Relief is asking the people of this country for $30,000,000 to meet the immediate needs of the sufferers in the Near East who have been driven from their homes and deprived of their means of livelihood. More than one million Armenians and Syrians in Turkey and western Asia have perished during the past two years from exposure, starvation, disease, heartless deportation and cruel massacre. There are still two and a half millions of homeless and destitute people in Armenia and Syria, and at least 400,000 of these are children without fathers and many of them without mothers. They are experiencing a living death, enduring the horrors of hunger and the tortures of want.

The Armenian tragedy is one before which the tragedy of Belgium pales. Other martyred nations have had their friends and been provided with help, but Armenia has been virtually cut off from outside aid, left to bleed, to suffer and die. A little more and an entire Christian nation will have perished from the earth.

These two million five hundred thousand Armenians can be saved from final starvation only as America appreciates their awful condition, and extends the helping hand of fellowship and sympathy.

Indiana's quota of the national fund is $629,172. It is estimated that $5 a month, $60 a year will save a life. The amount asked of this state will rescue 21,000 people from starvation and start them on a self-supporting basis. The campaign organization in this state is completed, county quotas have been assigned and several counties have already sent in checks to state headquarters at 404 City Trust Building, Indianapolis, for the full amount of their quotas with the promise of an oversubscription. Four war chest counties, Miami, Montgomery, Ohio and Steuben and Carroll, which is a tax levy county, have voted to allow the full amount required of them. Harrison county has raised its quota and sent in a check with the word that they expected a good-sized oversubscription.

The people of Indiana have never failed to open their hearts and their purse-strings to the cry of humanity and they will not fail to respond to this appeal of dying men, women and children. This is a 100 per cent charity. Not a cent will be deducted anywhere along the line for postage or clerical help, or advertising, or transportation, or administrative expenses.

Boys Home From Oversea

Paul Maxwell, of overseas, arrived in St. Joe Tuesday morning, after receiving his discharge papers at Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill.

He bears the distinction of being the first of our local boys from abroad to return home, and in view of this fact the M. P. church bell was rung for a time.

Looking fine, is right and feeling fine too, having fully recovered from his sickness caused from being severely gassed and was placed in the hospital on November 5th., and serving seven weeks under the care of the nurses.

Paul relates many interesting events, and you would have thought so had you followed him. After receiving his training in camp he was placed in the famous Rainbow Division and embarked for somewhere overseas on October 18, 1917, remaining there for 14 long months and 8 months of this time was spent in battle. He served in the heavy artillery and was kept quite busy at all times. He served as one to load the heavy guns.

German prisoners ranked from boys of 15 years up to gray haired men and practically all that he saw were really glad that they had been captured.

It will be impossible for us to covet his conversation but one thing he regrets that he was not able to remain and go into Germany, where the remainder of his division it.

Paul, we're glad your back.

Another boy returned—Lester Coburn arrived at 10:41 Wednesday noon on the B. & O.

Soldiers Reception.

The local Red Cross organization and citizens of Concord and the north half of Newville townships, will give another reception to the returned soldier boys on next Tuesday evening at the Lutheran church.

Some of the overseas boys are home and every man, woman and child in the townships should turn out and welcome them for they "fought for US."

An excellent program including a social hour is being arranged. Remember every citizen of the township is urged to attend.

Red Cross Department

The committee in charge of the first of a series of receptions being held under the auspices of the local Red Cross, for returned soldiers of Concord and north half of Newville township, were misinformed regarding the paying of the expenses, thus incurred, from the funds in St. Joe Branch treasury. County Chairman, Knott, received the following communication Monday from Lake Division Headquarters, which he forwarded to the local chairman. Money will be returned to those who contributed.

January 16, 1919.

Mr. Fred W. Knott.
DeKalb County Chapter,
The American Red Cross,
Albany, Indiana.
Dear Sir:—

Replying to your favor of the 11th. inst., we think, after due consideration, that it would be perfectly proper for the Branch to which you refer to charge the bill of $12.30 for entertainment to soldiers to the general fund which it has created through a Red Cross sale. We are returning herewith the draft which you sent us.

Very truly Yours,
H. H. Wyman,
Director of Department of Accounts.

Special Recognition.

The Cleveland Press of last Thursday contained a list of men of the 37th. division that had distinguished themselves by valor and bravery in the severe battles in France and Belgium, among which were three names familiar to us out of about 250.

Mark M. Murphy, step-son of Alvy Coburn, residing east of St. Joe.

Clarence V. Phillips of the supply company, nephew of Joseph R. Knisely, of north-west of St. Joe.

Selye D. Hatsell, Co. F., son of H. S. Hatsell, of Hicksville.

The 37th. division is composed of many Ohio and Indiana men.

HERE AND THERE

Friends of Mrs. H. S. Garton very pleasantly surprised her on Monday evening. While sitting by the fire nursing a headache the crowd gathered close to the house and let out a "war-whoop" which frightened the family considerably. The crowd took sugar and made taffy and popcorn was served. A jolly good time was had.

W. W. Mann, son of George Mann, who lives east of Spencerville, was brought home from the hospital at Wayne Sunday morning. Last fall the son came home from the camp and took the "flu" and he has been in the hospital ever since. His condition is serious.

The Armenian-Syrian Relief campaign over the state of Indiana is progressing fine and a number of the counties have gone over the top including: Harrison, Tipton, Clark, Clinton, Miami, Montgomery, Carroll, Steuben, Huntington and DeKalb. Not many of the townships in DeKalb have finished their quotas. Spencer has raised $156 with a quota of $110; Newville $68; quota $72; Butler $114.-80. Concord is nearly over the top with a few solicitors to report.

JANUARY

Hoosier State Happenings

Anderson.—A committee from the city council has prepared an ordinance which will compel jitney bus operators to obtain a license and post $250 indemnity bond to cover injuries in accidents. Members of the council assert that the action is taken because a number of jitney bus accidents have occurred here recently.

Lafayette.—Electric lights in the coops to lengthen the working day for chickens will increase egg production, an experiment now under way at Purdue university has shown. The lights are turned on at six o'clock in the morning and kept burning until seven o'clock. In the evening the lights go from four to eight o'clock.

Terre Haute.—The Indiana Bituminous Coal Operators' association, with headquarters here, advertised a reward of $1,000 for information leading to the conviction of persons responsible for surface mine fires in the Indiana district. During the last year there have been many serious fires, most of which were believed incendiary.

Valparaiso.—Not a single cake of ice has been harvested as yet from the score of lakes near this city, and the outlook now is for imported ice this summer at advanced prices. Where this time a year ago local and private ice houses were bulging to the doors with a magnificent harvest, the ice now is scarcely five inches thick, with a soft, mushy top.

Indianapolis.—The public service commission dented the petition of the Hammond, Whiting & East Chicago Traction company for an increase in street car fare in the three Lake county cities from 5 to 7 cents. The commission held that the company was earning more than 9 per cent return on the reproduction value of the property and was therefore not entitled to an increase in fares.

Muncie.—Thomas Hintt, sheriff of Delaware county, and two squads of deputy sheriffs recently made simultaneous raids on the gambling rooms known as Gentry's place and others in the uptown district here, arrested four of the alleged operators and confiscated considerable gambling paraphernalia and several hundred dollars. The money is alleged to have been in play at the time the officers entered.

Jeffersonville.—Between fifteen and twenty farms, among the best in Clark county, have been bought during the last six months by Kentucky farmers, most of them from Spencer county. In nearly all cases the purchasers are experienced tobacco men and will raise tobacco, no doubt greatly increasing the output of Clark county of this crop, which has for several years been growing in importance, especially in the limestone lands along the river.

Newcastle.—The trustees of the fund raised for the Newcastle tornado sufferers in March, 1917, filed a petition in the circuit court here calling for an accounting and settlement and asking that the court make an equitable and just distribution of the funds remaining. A total of $96,520.04 was raised through contributions from all parts of the state and many points outside of the state. Of this fund $12,814.91 remains and the petitioners declare they are unable to determine what disposition should be made legally of the balance.

Aurora.—The Dearborn county annual corn show will be held Friday, February 21, in the reception rooms of the office of Clarence C. Madson, Dearborn county farm agent. Exhibits will be judged and premiums awarded by Robert S. Thomas of Purdue university. Premiums will be paid by the Dearborn First National bank of Lawrenceburg and the First National bank of Aurora, these banks having furnished free seed corn to a number of corn growers last spring. Premiums and medals will be awarded for the five-acre contest and members for the five-acre contest for the coming season will also be enrolled.

Wabash.—Summaries of the incomes of 16 farmers in Wabash county, who kept records of their farm business for 1918 show interesting comparisons of the profits from different systems of farming. These records which have just been summarized with the assistance of the farm management division of Purdue university, bring out the fact that Wabash county farmers are making the greatest profits on fairly large farms which are more heavily stocked than the average. It was found that on an average these farmers made a labor income of $1,847, or $1,847 above farm expenses and above 5 per cent interest on all the capital they had invested.

Indianapolis.—Three men were instantly killed when a T. H., I. & E. interurban car struck an automobile truck near Maywood, four miles southwest of Indianapolis. The dead are: J. Floyd Weatherly, age twenty-six, of West Newton; Albert Yeager, age twenty-one, of West Newton, and Albert Smock, age sixty-five, of Camby.

Kokomo.—Discovery of the lack of funds with which to pay a special prosecutor may delay the probe into the conduct of the office of D. Lawrence Bock, prosecuting attorney, which he is demanding now that his official conduct is under fire.

HEAR FROM MANY ON TAX MEASURE

Property Owners Affected by Proposed Law Given Chance to Be Heard.

FARMERS OBJECT TO CHANGE

Oppose That Part of Proposed Law Which Would Tax Intangible Property Only 25 Per Cent of Total Value.

Indianapolis.—Numerous opinions are being brought out at hearings on the matter of the proposed revision of the state taxing system. Chairman Kimmel of the judiciary committee of the house is conducting meetings to which representatives of property that will be affected may voice their sentiments. The past week one of the most important sessions was one to which members of the Indiana State Grange had been invited.

Many others were in attendance at the meeting and the whole subject of taxation was threshed out thoroughly. The bulk of the opposition from the farmers is based on that part of the proposed new law which would allow intangible property to escape with only 25 per cent of its total value assessed for taxation. Farmers are objecting to this feature, declaring that they feel that such a plan will result finally merely in the increasing of taxes to be paid by the tangible property values in the state, which include, of course, farm lands and farm property, which is visible.

Much headway was made, it is believed, by advocates of some drastic changes in the tax laws, against this belief of the farmers when it was pointed out time and time again that at the present time the intangible property of the state represents but 1 per cent of all the property listed for taxation on the tax duplicates.

The aim of the proposed deduction on intangibles is to bring the intangible classes of property from their hiding places and such a plan has worked out well in other states where it has been tried, according to those who have been studying the tax problems of the state. Governor Goodrich made a long address on the tax problem before the meeting here of the State Grange.

Fred A. Sims, a member of the state board of tax commissioners, who has had a great deal to do with forming the new tax law and who is as well informed on taxation problems in Indiana probably as any other Hoosier, addressed the legislative committee of the Indiana State Bankers' association on the proposed tax bill, and the discussion turned to many points relating to the taxation of money and credits and bank property. Discussion centered on various plans under which money in bank could be taxed more adequately than now is the case.

Many organizations that have met, or are to meet within the next few days, are devoting practically their entire programs to the tax question and it is believed that sentiment will so crystallize within the next week or more that some sort of definite action on the hill will be taken by the legislature.

The Johnson child labor bill, which will prevent children's employment between the ages of fourteen and sixteen, except during vacation periods, thus changing the present law which allows such employment under certain conditions, now is being considered by the house committee on rights and privileges following a hearing on the measure at which active argument was given both for and against the measure.

The Wright bill to amend the dry law in ways approved by the Anti-Saloon league was sent back to the committee on public morals of the house by a rising vote of 43 to 41, after it had been reported to the house for favorable action.

By a vote of 90 to 3 the house passed the Johnson bill to grant women in Indiana presidential suffrage. The bill now goes to the senate.

Urges Food Conservation.

H. E. Barnard, federal food administrator for Indiana, has renewed his request to the people of Indiana to continue the conservation of food in order that the fruits of the success on the field of battle may be saved for the benefit of all the nations of the world.

Mr. Barnard reiterates that food is the key to the present situation and without immediate and generous support from America and the sharing of the surplus in this country, it is futile to expect a satisfactory or early peace.

Indiana clubs and community centers which have contributed to the success of the food administration in Indiana are requested to "stay on the job" for perpetuating activity.

Asks Literacy Test.

Constitutional amendments on suffrage to be proposed in the Indiana senate by Senator Glenn VanAuken of Auburn, provides for a literacy test in the English language for voters, and require also that payment of poll tax shall be a qualification of voting. The amendments, in three sections, carry provisions also for universal suffrage, for the elimination of the alien voters' clause in the present constitution, and for registration of voters in cities of more than 25,000 population. It is not unlikely that the VanAuken amendments will be made a Democratic caucus measure. Constitutional changes to be proposed by the Republicans include classified registration, woman suffrage and the elimination of the alien voters' clause. The literacy test and the poll tax qualification are new proposals in this session, although they have been discussed by advanced political students of the state for a number of years. The provision for a literacy test calls for more than merely the ability to read. It sets forth that "no person shall be entitled to vote unless he shall be able to read in the English language section 2 of article 2 of the constitution." In the opinion of workers for complete Americanization of all foreigners no citizenship should be conferred until the foreigner familiarizes himself with the English language. The form in which Senator VanAuken has drafted his literacy test is due to discussion of the Americanization question produced by the war.

Flour Substitutes for Europe.

The assembling at concentration points in Indiana of more than 9,000,000 pounds of wheat flour substitutes, part of a gigantic buying campaign by the government through the United States Grain corporation, has been completed, it was announced by Stanley Wyckoff, federal food administrator for Marion county, who had charge of the buying in this state. The supplies purchased in Indiana consisted of barley flour, rye flour, corn flour, cornmeal and Victory flour, and they represent the surplus stocks of the mills, elevators, jobbers and retail food dealers on hand at the time the ban against the use of wheat flour was lifted a few weeks ago. According to Mr. Wyckoff, more than 150 cars of wheat flour substitutes, costing approximately $405,000, have been purchased from the mills, jobbers, bakers and retailers of Indiana. Most of this big supply has been assembled and shipped direct to Atlantic seaports by the various mills, while about 45 cars are being held at storehouses at Goshen, South Bend, Fort Wayne, Evansville, Richmond, Terre Haute and Indianapolis, to be shipped to the seaboard.

Reports Show Low Intangible Ratio.

Reports received by the state board of tax commissioners from 18 counties show that on the average only about 2 per cent of the property on the tax duplicate is intangible. Statistics of the federal census bureau published several years ago show that out of the $8,000,000,000 of property in Indiana $3,000,000,000 is in the form of intangibles. According to this ratio there should be about 37½ per cent of intangibles on the tax duplicate.

The percentage of intangibles to the total amount on the tax duplicate in the 18 counties follows: Harrison, one-half of 1 per cent; Hamilton, one-half of 1 per cent; Floyd, 3 per cetn; Bartholomew, 4 per cent; Greene, 1 1-3 per cent; Kosciusko, 4 per cent; Marshall, one-fifth of 1 per cent; Franklin, 4 per cent; Dekalb, 5 per cent; Madison, 2½ per cent; Hendricks, 3 per cent; Miami, 2 2-3 per cent, and Marion (three townships, Decatur, Warren and Pike), 1 per cent. The new tax bill proposes that all intangibles be listed and be assessed for 25 per cent of their value.

Memorial in State Capitol.

The erection of a bronze entablature or some other means of honoring the Indiana boys who made the supreme sacrifice in the war will be provided in a bill which Representative Ira A. Kessler of McGrawsville will introduce in the house soon. The bill will carry an appropriation of $3,500 to place the name of each boy in a suitable place in the state capitol, perhaps in the rotunda.

Postpone Health Sunday.

Public Health Sunday, which was to have been observed February 9, has been postponed until Sunday, February 23, according to a dispatch received by Maj. William F. King, assistant secretary of the state board of health, from Surgeon General Blue at Washington, D. C. The postponement was made because February 9 is to be generally observed throughout Indiana and the country as Theodore Roosevelt memorial day.

Offers Farm as Memorial.

Martin T. Kruger, formerly mayor of Michigan City, has offered a farm of 80 acres at the edge of that city to be dedicated as a memorial park in honor of Michigan City's war heroes.

No. 1—Cartwheel hat with crown of black satin and brim of straw slightly rolled up on itself back and front. It is trimmed with an immense bunch of paradise.

No. 3—Palestine turban of copper-colored tulle with a jeweled sword run through the front. The material is wrapped around the head and worn low over the eyes.

No. 3—Street turban of French blue taffeta with a wide bandeau of black straw. Alsatian bow of taffeta at side.

No. 4—Restaurant hat of chestnut-colored tulle gathered to a wire edge at the brim. It is trimmed with a rococo rose with gilded leaves.

HATS THAT START SPRING FASHIONS

New York.—Yankee Doodle, who stuck a feather in his cap and called it "macaroni," thereby creating a slang word for a gayly dressed man which has gone over two continents and lived in history, could not have felt prouder than the French king who put a piece of straw over his head to keep away the rain, and created hats.

Both the feather and the straw were trivial incidents in the life of each of these characters (for the satire on Yankee Doodle was rhymed around a man), but they were the foundation stones of millinery.

Women have always pilfered from men their tricks of apparel, asserts a fashion writer. They are snug little thieves, women, when it comes to petty pilfering from those who consider themselves superior beings. After all, it is a form of coquetry, and women discovered centuries ago that nothing so pleased a man as to do what he did, say what he said, and hold on to his hand socially, financially, politically and mentally. A woman might hate another woman for stealing her fashions, but a man would only look with more prideful adoration upon a woman who fashioned her clothes after his.

Nothing so delighted the French kings, the great and haughty Bourbons, as the fact that their women did what they did in clothes. They gave them their magnificent brocaded coats with the full skirts, the knee-length waistcoats, the precious lace ruffles and the silver and diamond buttons as a guide to their apparel. They allowed them to borrow their coiffeurs in order to have their hair perfumed, powdered and curled. They saw themselves reflected, as in mirrors, by the groups of women surrounding them.

The milliners have not permitted themselves to be limited by any one period of history. They have dipped with eager, curious hands into all the ashes and embers of the planet's past and produced for the modern woman a jumble of things that were once worn by her predecessors.

It makes for the gayety of a crowd, this bobbing up and down of hats from Babylon to the French trenches.

There is nothing dull in millinery today. If one could get together all the hats worn on the American continent, classify them, and divide them into chapters, one would be presented with a sartorial history of the world.

Novelties in Dyed Suede.

Here and there one sees a new material attached to an old shape. Such is the case when dyed suede is used for an oblong turban, with its surface perforated in an edelweiss design taken from the Swiss Alps and copied from the patterns used in the Madeira islands. Right here you have a jumble of people and nationalities all in one tiny cap tilted over the left eyebrow of a girl. These suede caps are dyed bright pink, horizon blue and pottery red. Their sole ornamentation is the perforation.

Someone has insisted that the revival of perforated designs on all our clothes came through the use of paper napkins in the war. Good thought, but hardly true. Whatever the source, the fashion is here. The milliners may have originated it, but the dressmakers borrowed it over night, for the midseason frocks of white broadcloth and velvet, or beige-colored gabardine and black taffeta, are perforated along their edges in set designs.

It is too late to talk of the Alsatian bow, for it was obvious that the milliners would revive it; but a certain woman of distinction started a fashion for it that the milliners quickly looked upon with envy.

She came to lunch in a restaurant wearing the genuine Alsatian bow, black and immense, placed across the middle of her head, with a mere apology of a little cloth cap in front of it. It stood upward and outward, and her hair was coiled high behind it. This was the real thing, and her daring made her the target of all eyes. It may be that the Alsatian bow in this form will be introduced for the evening. Let us hope that it will never appear at the theater. At the present rate of prices and the scarcity of seats, the addition of a hundred or so Alsatian bows in the audience would be the straw on the camel's back.

Charlotte Corday Cap.

The Charlotte Corday cap, minus its bow, has been introduced for the South and is taken up by the North. It is made of brilliant, dark tulle, always double, but entirely transparent. The best one is in copper tulle, its high crown trimmed at the base with a twist of tulle and one of those rococo red roses with gold outer petals and leaves which have been brought into fashion by a well-known designer of individual evening gowns.

The transparent hat is beyond question one of the smart fashions of the hour. It means that the coiffure must come back into orderliness and loveliness. The crowns of these hats are often high and gently manipulated by the fingers to give grace, and one of the best French hats takes the crown of the American doughboy hat as its model.

As brown rules in veiling, so it seems to rule in these tulle hats. It is often in the color that the French call "marron," that chestnut brown which is soft and becoming. Over there smart women wear stockings of it with black slippers, even in evening dress, and they like it in all the accessories. Over here we are just beginning to grasp its importance. The milliners believe that in copper and chestnut, the brown hat will rule the spring season.

Hats and Bobbed Hair.

The Florentine coiffure is no longer a caprice of the extremists; it is no longer a sensational bit of bravado. The war has instated it as a strong fashion. Women with gray hair wear it bobbed to the nape of the neck or curled under to appear as though it were cut. Girls with every shade of hair wear it. Matrons with half-grown children adopt it. So the milliners, after a frantic wringing of the hands, have decided that they must meet this new demand. There must be a large and creative impulse for hats that will go with this Florentine coiffure. The broad, flat hat of Naples has been brought out and is adopted by one young matron whose face figures in half the periodicals of the day, and her side companion, who also wears the ancient Italian hair cut, adopts the Florentine velvet hat with its trimming of two rows of coral beads.

It must be admitted that the women themselves have seen to it that they look well in any type of hat with this bobbed hair, whether it be turban or flat brim. They cannot, of course, wear hats of exceeding dignity, but they try a certain type of distinguished hat which is considered the leading thing by the milliners; and they carry it off with great skill. This is the immense black-thread lace hat, transparent, with its broad Alsatian bow wired across the front. This is the hat that will supersede, for the spring, the upturned, many pointed, theatrical hat of silk plush and velvet, with its aigrettes.

Waistcoat Blouse.

The fur vest is quite new and is added to blouses of fabric so thin that one marvels that it can support the heavier material of the fur. White georgette with an ermine vest is as smart as the smartest could desire. Of course underneath the coat only the fur shows, but when one removes the coat the contrast of the two fabrics is seen at once. This is a decided innovation—the waistcoat blouse. Often the waistcoat on some of the thin, fine blouses is made of rare and exquisite brocade, so rich and lovely as to catch and hold the eye. The ends of these vests are pointed like a man's waistcoat, and they are very smart, indeed.

For Polishing Brass.

For polishing brass or copper, make a paste of rottenstone and cottonseed oil. If there are bad spots or stains, use a little oxalic acid solution to remove them, but rinse off immediately with warm water and rub over with the cottonseed oil.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE RIVER'S CHANGE.

"They don't think," said the river to the ice which had formed over it, "that a river can do things differently at different times. And then if a river has done the same thing for years and years and years they get the idea it can't change its ways."

"Do you mean people?" asked the ice.

"I do," said the river. "I feel so nice and warm under here," it added. "I like this for a change."

"Well, if people fell through me and reached you they wouldn't think you were so nice and warm." And the ice laughed. It made very queer sounds, and if it hadn't been so very thick and strong, people would have said the ice was "dangerous" at that part.

"They're going to have fine winter sports," said the river. "They're going to go ice-boating and skating, and all sorts of things. That is, they're going to do that up on the lake. You know I start from the lake, and I go on and on and on."

"Where do you go on to?" asked the ice.

"I go on and on, through valleys and meadows and under bridges and past towns, and at last I pass through a city—not right in the center of the city, but by one side of the city—and then I go on a little farther; yes, a little farther, until I reach the great ocean."

"What a wonderful thing it must be to be a river," said the ice. "You start in a lake and you end off in the ocean. You know what it is to have a beautiful and quiet lake for a friend, and you also know what it is to have the big ocean for a friend. The ocean is so tremendous."

"Yes," said the river, "it's a good size, all right enough, and the other side of it cannot be seen. Not even with the big glasses which people look through. Now the lake can be seen so well, all around it and from the head to the foot."

"The lake hasn't a head or a foot," said the ice.

"It has one end and another end," said the river, "so I speak of it as the head and the foot."

"I see," said the ice.

"This is what they call my source. I rise in the lake, and for the first time in my history I've frozen over."

"Indeed!" said the ice. "Well, I'm honored."

"I thought you had such nice and cooling ways," said the river. "Usually folks like creatures and things who have nice and affectionate, friendly ways, but I like a good, cold covering of ice for a change."

"And you say that this is the first time that you have become frozen?" repeated the ice.

"The very first," said the river again.

"It's a cold winter," said the ice. "It's going to keep on being cold, I'm told. Take yesterday, for example; it was as cold as a day could be, and now today it is just as cold."

"It's a glorious change for me," said the river. "I'm warm and nice though,

The Ice Laughed.

because I am sheltered. I am really warmer this way than if I were not covered by you, Mr. Ice."

"Ha, ha," said the ice. "That is a joke. You're warm, covered by the ice, when everyone is saying that the ice and the snow and the wind and everything else seem colder than ever this year."

"Will you tell me all the news?" asked the river.

"What news?" asked the ice.

"About the skating and ice-boating and the sleighrides on the lake? They go sleigh-riding on the frozen lake when it's as cold as this. I won't be able to see it this year, as I'm covered up."

"I'll most certainly tell you all the news," said the ice.

So it told the river of the ice boats, which seemed to fly over the ice. It told of sleighs, with big horses pulling, and of children in the sleighs, wearing red caps and sweaters and coats. It told of the bells which jingled on the sleighs, and of the skating parties.

And the river gurgled with glee and said:

"I've given the people a change this year. Instead of water they see ice!" And the ice chuckled and laughed!

Asking Too Much.

Even the friends of whom we are fondest disappoint us sometimes. But stop and think how often we disappoint ourselves. If we so often fail to measure up to our own standards, how can we expect that others will always do it?—Girl's Companion.

"Go on! Good dog!" cried Mr. Stagg. "Lead the way to Hannah's Car'lyn!"

He heard the little girl screaming: "Oh, Uncle Joe! Oh, Uncle Joe! Here we are!"

Cherry rattled the buckboard down to the bottom of the hollow and stopped. There was some smoke here, but not much. The man leaped to the ground when he saw a figure rise up from the foot of a tree by the spring—a figure in brown.

"Joseph! Thank God!" murmured Amanda.

The hardware dealer strode to her. She had put out both her hands to him, and he saw that they were trembling, and that tears filled her great brown eyes.

"Oh, Joe!" she said, "I feared you would come too late!"

"But I'm here, Mandy, and I'm not too late!" he cried; and, somehow—neither of them could, perhaps, have explained just how—his arms went around her and her hands rested on his shoulders, while she looked earnestly into his face.

"Oh, Joe! Joe!" It was like a surrendering sob.

"It's not too late, is it, Mandy? Say it isn't too late!" he pleaded.

"No, it's not too late," she whispered. "If—if we're not too old."

"Old!" almost shouted Joseph Stagg. "I don't remember of ever feeling so young as I do right now!" and suddenly he stooped and kissed her. "Bless me! what fools we've been all this time!"

"Oh, Uncle Joe! Oh, Miss Amanda!" cried Carolyn May, standing before them, and pointing with a rather grimy index finger. "You aren't mad at each other any more, are you? Oh, I am so glad, so glad!" and her face showed her pleasure.

But the situation was too difficult to allow of much but practical thoughts.

"Where's the old woman?" asked Joseph Stagg quickly.

"Her husband came with a horse and buggy late last night and took her over to the new camp," was the reply.

"The fire was coming into the camp when I left. We must get out of here in a hurry," declared Mr. Stagg.

"We aren't going to be burned up now, when Uncle Joe is here, Miss Mandy," Carolyn May declared with confidence. "See how nice he and Prince found us? Why, they are reg'lar heroes, aren't they?"

"They are, indeed, child," agreed the woman. She turned to Joseph Stagg, happiness shining in her eyes, and looking prettier than ever before in her life, he thought.

The hollow was rapidly becoming filled with smoke. The man did not understand this, but it foreboded trouble. He turned Cherry and the buckboard around, and then he helped Amanda into the seat.

"Up you go, too, Car'lyn May," he said, lifting the little girl into the rear of the buckboard.

Joseph Stagg felt very serious as he seated himself by Amanda's side and picked up the reins. The horse quickly retraced his steps up the hill to the tote road. As they came out into this broader path they saw the smoke pouring through it in a choking cloud.

"Oh, Joe," gasped Amanda, "it's coming!"

"It surely is," agreed the hardware merchant. "We're in a hot corner, my girl. But trust to me—"

"Oh, I do, Joe!" she exclaimed, squeezing his arm. "I am sure you know what is best to do."

"I'll try to prove that so," he said with a subdued chuckle.

"Oh, Uncle Joe!" cried Carolyn May suddenly, "can't we get out of this awful smoke? It—it chokes me!"

"Wait," whispered Amanda to the man. "I'll lift her over the back of the seat. I think she had better be in my lap."

"P'raps that's so," he agreed, and he held in the nervous Cherry for a moment till the change was accomplished.

The roaring of the fire grew louder and louder in their ears.

Suddenly Joseph Stagg dragged Cherry's head around. The horse snorted and hesitated, for the smoke was blinding him.

"I pretty near missed these forks!" exclaimed the hardware merchant. "This left road takes us toward the lake."

"Oh, Joe, can we reach it?" whispered Amanda.

"We've got to!" he returned grimly. "It's three miles, if it's an inch, but Cherry has got to make it."

They were relieved after a minute or two in this new road. The smoke had not so completely filled it. But it was a rougher way, and the buckboard bounced until Carolyn May cried out in fear.

They drove over a little hillock that raised them higher than the tote road had done. Amanda clutched Mr. Stagg's arm again and uttered a half-stifled "Oh!"

To their left, a mass of flame broke out in the wood not far off this trail—the top of a great tree was on fire.

"The wind is carrying brands this way," muttered the man. "A dozen new fires will be started. Well, gid-ap, Cherry!" and he seized the whip again.

The horse was well spent now, but he was plucky. He tried to increase his stride. A hot breath of wind came rushing through the forest, bending the branches and shaking the leafy foliage. The wind seemed fairly to scorch the fugitives.

The roaring of the fire increased. Through the more open woods which bordered this path they saw the smoke advancing in a thicker wall—and one as high as the tree tops.

"Oh, Uncle Joe! Oh, Miss Amanda," Cried Carolyn May.

"You've got to make it, old boy," muttered Joseph Stagg, and he lashed the horse again.

The spirited Cherry leaped forward, both the woman and the child screaming.

"Is it far? Is it far?" gasped Amanda in his ear.

"Too far for comfort. But keep your heart up."

As the man spoke, a blazing brand swung through the air and came down, right on Amanda's shoulders. Carolyn May shrieked. Joseph Stagg brushed off the burning stick.

Cherry mounted another small ridge and then they clattered down into a little hollow where there was a slough beside the road. The water was green and stagnant, but it was water.

The man pulled in the hard-pressed horse and leaped down, passing the reins to Amanda. He whipped off his coat and dipped it in the mudhole. He drew it out dripping with water and slime.

"Look out, here! Have to shut your eyes!" he warned his two companions on the seat of the buckboard, and threw the saturated coat over Miss Amanda's head. The dripping garment sheltered Carolyn May as well.

"Now, good horse!" he yelled to Cherry, leaping back to the seat. "Gid-ap!"

The horse started up the slope. Another swirling brand came down upon them. Joseph Stagg fought it off with his bare hand. His shirt sleeve caught fire and he was painfully burned on the forearm before he could smother the blaze.

Another flaming brand fell, landing on Cherry's back. The horse squealed and leaped forward at a pace which Mr. Stagg could not control. Maddened by the burn, Cherry had taken the bit in his teeth and was running away.

The man threw down the reins. He could do nothing toward retarding the frightened horse's pace. Indeed, he did not want to stop him.

His left arm he flung around Miss Amanda and the child, and with his right hand clung to the rocking seat of the careening buckboard.

The wet steaming coat saved the woman and the child from injury.

Joseph Stagg had lost all count of time. The forest road might still extend ahead of them for a mile, for all he knew.

But suddenly they broke cover, Cherry still galloping wildly, and plunged down an open ravine to the edge of a lake of sparkling water.

"Bless me! The lake! the lake!" hoarsely shouted the man.

The walls of the ravine sheltered them from smoke and fire for a moment, but the brands still fell. Cherry had halted on the edge of the lake, but Joseph Stagg urged him on into the water, flank deep. The shore was narrow and afforded little space for refuge. He lifted Amanda and the child bodily from the seat and dropped them into the water.

"We're safe now," he said hoarsely, jumping in himself, and holding Carolyn May and Amanda. "We've got water enough here, thanks be! Hang on to me, Mandy. I'm not going to let you get away—no more, never!"

And by the way in which the woman clung to his arm it was evident that she did not propose to lose him.

"My, Uncle Joe! you are just the bravest man!" declared Carolyn May, finding her voice. "Isn't he, Miss Mandy? And, see, his arm is all burned. Dear me, we must get home to Aunty Rose and let her do it up for him."

CHAPTER XVII.

"Two's Company."

Toward the east the forest tract was completely burned to the banks of Cedar's creek. As the wind which had sprung up had driven the fire westward, there was little danger of the flames pressing nearer than the creek to Sunrise Cove and The Corners.

Joseph Stagg led the horse out of the water and advised Miss Amanda and Carolyn May to get into the seat of the buckboard again. Then he set forth, leading the horse along the narrow beach, while Prince followed wearily in the rear.

It was a rough route they followed, but the blackened forest was still too hot for them to pass through, had they been able to find a path. This was a lonely strip of shore and they saw no living soul but themselves.

It was a long tramp, and the horse, the dog, and the man were alike wearied. Carolyn May went fast asleep with her head pillowed in Miss Amanda's lap.

The latter and Joseph Stagg talked much. Indeed, there was much for them to say after all these years of silence.

The woman, worn and scorched of face, looked down on the smutted and sweating man with an expression in her eyes that warmed him to the marrow. She was proud of him. And the gaze of love and longing that the hardware merchant turned upon Amanda Parlow would have amazed those people that believed he had consideration and thought only for business.

In these few hours of alarm and close intimacy the man and the woman had leaped all the barriers time and pride had set up. Nothing further could keep Joseph Stagg and Amanda Parlow apart. And yet they never for one instant discussed the original cause of their estrangement. That was a dead issue.

The refugees reached The Corners about nine o'clock. Jedidiah Parlow had hobbled up to the store and was just then organizing a party of searchers to go to the rescue of the hardware dealer and those of whom he had set forth in search.

The village turned out en masse to welcome the trio who had so miraculously escaped the fire. Aunty Rose's relief knew no bounds. Mr. Parlow was undeniably glad to see his daughter safe; otherwise, he would never have overlooked the pitiable state his horse was in. Poor Cherry would never be the same unblemished animal again.

"Well, I vum!" he said to Joseph Stagg, "you done it! Better'n I could, too, I reckon. I'll take the hoss home. You comin' with me, Mandy?" Then he saw the burns on the younger man's shoulders and arms. "The good land of Jehoshaphat! here's work for you to do, Mandy. If you air any sort of a nurse, I reckon you got your hands full right here with Joe Stagg," he added, with some pride in his daughter's ability. "Phew! them's bad-lookin' burns!"

"They are indeed," agreed Aunty Rose.

It was a fact that Mr. Stagg was in a bad state. Carolyn May had suggested that Aunty Rose would dress his burns, but Miss Amanda would allow nobody to do that but herself.

When the curious and sympathetic neighbors had gone and Miss Amanda was still busy making Joseph Stagg comfortable in the sitting room, Aunty Rose came out into the kitchen, where she had already bathed and helped Carolyn May to undress, and where the little girl was now sleepily eating her supper of bread and milk.

"Yes, Isn't It Nice They Aren't Mad at Each Other."

"Well, wonders don't ever cease, I guess," she said, more to herself than to her little confidant. "Who'd have thought it?"

"Who'd have thought what, Aunty Rose?" inquired Carolyn May.

"Your uncle and Mandy Parlow have made it up," breathed the woman, evidently much impressed by the wonder of it.

"Yes, indeed!" cried the child. "Isn't it nice? They aren't mad at each other any more."

GERMANY MUST PAY

Important Commercial Centers Destroyed Beyond Repair.

Country Should Be Forced to Pay for Ruthless Destruction as Far as Within the Power of Its People.

By WRIGHT A. PATTERSON.

In August, 1914, the city of Lens in northern France was a prosperous community of close to 50,000 people. It was known as the Pittsburgh of France, and its coal fields were the one great source of supply of fuel for the nation. Its steel and iron mills supplied much of the material for French railroads, shipbuilding and other industries. Its people were industrious and thrifty, living in comfortable homes, surrounded by the modest luxuries of an industrial community.

All that is left of Lens today is a crumbling pile of debris. No single wall of the city is still standing, and hardly a piece of a wall as much as ten feet square can be seen amid the terrible ruins. Both the buildings and the machinery of its factories are gone completely. Its coal mines are flooded and the machinery with which they were operated has been destroyed.

And all this because Germany started a war for the purpose of conquest; a war in which no principle other than that of selfishness was involved. Today Germany is a crushed nation. Her plans for world domination miscarried, her armies have been defeated, but before these things happened the city of Lens had been destroyed.

I stood amid the ruins of what had once been the attractive and prosperous industrial community of Lens and watched hundreds of her people who had returned after the Germans had been driven back, as they searched for the spots on which their homes had once stood, as they dug into the debris in an effort to rescue from it some one thing, some memento of that home they had loved as much, or even more than we Americans love our homes. I saw the tears on the cheeks of many as they toiled. I saw an old woman carrying away, as the only thing she could find, a piece of a broken chair, and I thought, who shall pay for this devastation, this misery?

There Is But One Answer.

Are the broken, homeless people of Lens to pay? Are the people of France to pay? Are the people of England or America or Belgium to pay? Or are the Germans to pay?

To be sure, the city of Lens was destroyed by shells fired largely from British guns. But they were fired into the city because the invading Germans in the city must be driven out that not only France, but the world, might be freed of the menace of German domination; and the debris that once was Lens stands today as a striking monument to German greed and to the accuracy and efficiency of British artillery.

Could the people of America have seen the people searching those ruins as I saw them; could they have seen the tears as I saw them they would have said, as I said, Germany must pay, and she must continue to pay until this fair city and many, many others like it, have been restored; until these people and their descendants are again the happy, prosperous, contented people they were before the hell of German wantonness and selfishness was let loose in 1914.

What happened in Lens has happened in many other cities and towns in France, in Belgium, in Italy, in Serbia, in Roumania, in Poland, and for all of them Germany and her allies should pay, and pay, and pay.

Cruel Fate of Ypres.

Another example of the hellishness of this German war of conquest is seen in what was once the beautiful and historic city of Ypres, in Belgium. This town is today but one mass of ruins. Its wonderful Cloth Hall and St. Martin's church, both considered among the marvels of Europe and both dating back to the thirteenth century, are gone, never to be restored. There is no way by which the Germans can give back to the world these beautiful monuments of past centuries, but they can be made to pay for them so far as dollars can pay.

And with the passing of this city there passed away many thousand lives of British soldiers who today lie buried around the place they so bravely defended. One possibly better realizes here the terrors of this war than at any other one spot. Here the Germans held the hills to the east of the city, and the British defenders occupied the low-lying fields between the hills and the city. For them dugouts or deep trenches were out of the question as the land is but little above sea level. And here, in what is almost a marsh, the British Tommies lay month after month, through winter and summer, a fair target for the Boche guns on the nearby hills.

When I was in Ypres late in October, many of the people to whom it had been home, were there digging hopelessly in the rubbish in a vain effort to find some small thing that could be associated with the homes that the Germans had destroyed in their effort to secure world domination by a war of conquest.

City of Walls Only.

The city of Menin in Belgium, was not shelled by either army, and yet it is a city that Germany should pay for. The walls of Menin are standing, but it is a city of walls only. The floors, the roofs, the joists, the doors and windows and the door and window casings are gone, all torn out by the invading Boche, with the result that the people of Menin are as homeless as the people of Lens and Ypres and hundreds of other cities and towns in the invaded countries.

I rode through devastated Armentieres, Bailleul, La Bassee, Douai, Cambria, Roisel, Peronne, Albert, Arras, St. Quentin, Guiscard, Noyon, Chauny, Thiaucourt, Vigneulles and hundreds of smaller towns, and the story of devastation was always the same, with but little variation, devastation caused by the Boche, and for which the Boche should pay, and for which the price assessed will never be high enough.

In many ways the hellishness of the Boche has been demonstrated. The city of Arras has not suffered such complete destruction as has fallen upon many other cities. Here the German gunners centered their fire upon the cathedral, and day after day, week after week and month after month they continued to pour a rain of metal upon this beautiful old church until today it is nothing but a mass of powdered stone. Germany cannot give back that cathedral of Arras, but she can pay and should pay for the needless, senseless destruction.

And the fair cities and towns that have been so ruthlessly destroyed are but incidents in the devastation caused by this war, and for all of which Germany and her allies, and they alone, are responsible, and for all of which they should pay.

DO YOU YAWN AT CONCERTS?

If So, There Is a Reason, Which Is Thus Explained by Modern Song Writer.

If a person yawns during a symphony concert and twists his program instead of being absorbed in classical music it may not be his fault. It may be due to an undeveloped pituitary body, which is located in the brain, back of the temples.

This is according to Cyril Scott, the song writer, in his "The Philosophy of Modernism in Connection With Music." Mr. Scott says that this pituitary body is highly susceptible to musical vibrations, if normally developed. In other words, it is the seat of the emotions. He goes further and adds that it is the seat of the astral or sublimal self. This is in keeping with the theory of the ancients that this gland is the seat of the soul.

In commenting on Mr. Scott's statement, Medicine and Surgery Magazine says:

"At a time like this when the pituitary body is the paramount topic of conversation in medical circles on account of its influence on our underweight or overweight, Cyril Scott's message in regard to its attitude toward music should give us pause. The faulty pituitary body can be corrected, no doubt, by treatment; made supersensitive and vibrant; thus a person indifferent to music may become highly appreciative to it."

Urbana, Ill.—"During Change of Life, in addition to its annoying symptoms, I had an attack of grippe which lasted all winter and left me in a weakened condition. I felt at times that I would never be well again. I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it did for women passing through the Change of Life, so I told my doctor I would try it. I soon began to gain in strength and the annoying symptoms disappeared and your Vegetable Compound has made me a well, strong woman so I do all my own housework. I cannot recommend Lydia E. Confined to Her Bed Days at a Time

But Doan's Brought a Quick and Lasting Cure.

Mrs. Herrman Ruschke, 177 Fourth St., Long Island City, N. Y., says: "The pains in my back were almost unbearable. I always felt tired and listless and found it almost impossible to attend to my housework. Gradually the pains increased—day by day my suffering became worse. Often flashes of light and black specks would appear before my eyes and dizzy spells would come over me. My hands and feet were swollen and my head pained me so at times I thought it would split. My kidneys annoyed me, too. I became despondent. Sometimes I would have to take to my bed for three or four days at a time. I had the good fortune to hear of Doan's Kidney Pills, so I began using them and was soon back in perfect health again. My cure has stood the test of time, so I am only too glad to recommend Doan's to other kidney sufferers."

Mrs. Ruschke

Mrs. Ruschke gave the above statement in April, 1916, and on April 4, 1917, she added: "I gladly repeat all I have said about Doan's Kidney Pills, for they have cured me of kidney complaint."

FROM The BOYS in SERVICE

Stenay, France.
December 4, 1918.

Dear Friends:

I received both your letters one addressed to Camp Mills where I was stationed only a few days. Both reached me after I landed in France. We came via Liverpool, England and landed there July 17 after an uneventful trip of eleven days across the Atlantic. From Liverpool we went to Southampton and thence across the English Channell to Cherborough, France about July 23rd. I think England is a most beautiful country and resembles a large park. The English camps didn't give us much to eat and of course this didn't raise our opinion of the English army any but they are alright I guess. From Cherborough, France we went to a camp at St. Nazairre on the Bay of Biscoy and were there about ten days. We then moved several hundred miles to near Dijobn which is southeast of Paris, I think. We were at this place a couple of weeks taking gas drills etc., and August 16th., we moved on the front. Our first sector was near Toul and Nancy and we operated here about a month preceeding the St. Mihiel drive. We worked all through that drive and September 27 moved up near Verdun and took part in the fighting in the Argonne forest and around Verdun and wound up here at Stenay on the Muese river which our division, the 90th., had its last fight. Our division is one of the best having never failed to get their objective in any fight. We weren't off a day from August 16th. to Thanksgiving and many times lost all count of days. We didn't have any turkey for Thanksgiving but we certainly have much to thank God for. No one who never saw the front can have any idea of the horror of it all. Our company seemed to have special protection from providence for we never lost a single man from enemy fire and only had one wounded and that one slightly, and they were under shell fire on many occasions.

The climate of France is very bad I think for it has rained almost continuously since we arrived at the front. We of America never knew what a grand country we had nor what a grand race the Americans really are until we came to Europe but I can tell you that I for one will know how to appreciate the U. S. A. if I ever get back there and you can rest assured that I am anxious to get back there as soon as possible. We hear that we are to go into Germany as part of the army of occupation, but I don't know and only time will tell. Only two companys of our regiment of nine companys ever saw active service on the front, ours C and A. I have always been in the best of health and never have been disheartened in the least and have said my prayers regularly and some times irregularly when the shells were coming close. Well I must close this volumn and I hope to see you all in the states not later than Easter and I hope sooner.

Yours truly,
Eugene Wells,
Co. C 315th. Am. In.

Why Pay an Extra Price When You Can Get Glando Pine —Same Quality, Same Quantity—and at the Same Old Price?

For 50c you can get 8 ounces of Glando Pine. Mix it with good syrup or strained honey enough to make a pint, and you will have the best cough medicine you ever used. It can't be beat for coughs, colds, hoarseness, throat irritation or croup. Glando Pine relieves the spasmodic coughing in whooping cough. Children love to take it. To prevent a cold from developing into pneumonia or bronchitis, hold a teaspoonful of Glando Pine well back in the mouth and take a few deep breaths before swallowing it. You can feel the air cells opening up and you will breathe deep and easy.

Mrs. W. M. J. Fellers, of Lima, Ohio, says: "I took cold, which developed into a severe cough. It hung on for several months. I coughed terribly, especially at night. I lived in a flat and my neighbors, believing me to have tuberculosis, asked the owner of the flat to have me move out, which he did. I used different remedies, but found no relief until I used Glando Pine. The first dose seemed to help me. I began gaining flesh; and by the time I had used two bottles, my cough was gone. Over a year has passed and my cough has not returned. I believe Glando Pine saved my life."

Glando Pine is manufactured by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind.

SHARE OUR SUGAR WITH THE ALLIES

British Get Two Pounds a Month. French Pound and Half, Italians One Pound.

GERMAN SUPPLY PLENTIFUL.

All Nations Permit Use of Sweetening for Home Preserving Purposes.

America's new sugar ration of two pounds a month per person is equitable when compared with the sugar ration enforced by rigid governmental order in England, France and Italy, nations with which we are sharing sugar.

Each Allied nation—in the matter of sugar consumption—is sharing on nearest possible equal terms the hardships imposed by greatly altered conditions in the world sugar situation.

Formerly classed as a luxury, sugar is now a war time essential. The fair and just division of this essential is in the hands of the various Allied food controllers.

The United States Food Administration has asked this nation to observe a voluntary sugar ration of two pounds per person a month.

In the other countries at war with Germany sugar is one of the scarce articles on every menu—whether in the households of both rich and poor, or in the hotels.

England today has a sugar ration of two pounds per month per person. In France the ration is a pound and a half and in Italy it is one pound a month. And the prices in allied countries are from two to three times as high as in America.

If you go to a hotel in England or France these days and order tea or coffee they serve absolutely no sugar with it. If you want sugar you must bring it with you.

In England it is allowable to use one-seventh of an ounce of sugar in the preparation of each luncheon. In France many persons carry little saccharine tablets about with them for use in hotels and in England rich and poor must take their sugar with them if they wish to have sweetened tea while visiting friends.

Before the war started France had 625,000 acres devoted to sugar production. By 1917 the French sugar acreage had decreased to 180,000 acres. Today the French man or woman with a sugar card has no assurance whatever that he or she will be able to actually buy sugar. To buy it, one must first find it.

Italy Has "State Sugar."

Especially drastic regulations govern the use of sugar in Italy. Its manufacture, distribution and sale are closely controlled, and in part actually taken over by the state.

Saccharine is permitted to be sold and used as a substitute for sugar and the government manufactures a mixture of saccharine and sugar called "State Sugar," which is largely used.

German Sugar Ration Adequate.

Germany, before the war, produced a great surplus of sugar and exported large quantities. Today the Germans have virtually gone out of the export business, but have plenty of cheap sugar for home use.

Wholesale prices prevalent in the Allied nations, according to information received by the United States Food Administration are as follows: England, 10 cents a pound; France, 12 cents; Italy, 26 cents.

While these high prices are being paid abroad the American wholesale price is being held at 7½ cents.

Our exports since this country entered the war have justified a statement made by the Food Administration shortly after its conception, outlining the principles and policies that would govern the solution of this country's food problems.

"The whole foundation of democracy," declared the Food Administration, "lies in the individual initiative of its people and their willingness to serve the interests of the nation with complete self effacement in the time of emergency. Democracy can yield to discipline, and we can solve this food problem for our own people and for the Allies in this way. To have done so will have been a greater service than our immediate objective, for we have demonstrated the rightfulness of our faith and our ability to defend ourselves without being Prussianized."

Sending to Europe 141,000,000 bushels of wheat from a surplus of apparently nothing was the outstanding exploit of the American food army in the critical year of the war.

GREATEST OPPORTUNITY WOMEN EVER HAD.

It was given to the women of this country to perform the greatest service in the winning of the war vouchsafed to any women in the history of the wars of the world—to feed the warriors and the war sufferers. By the arts of peace, the practice of simple, homely virtues the womanhood of a whole nation served humanity in its profoundest struggle for peace and freedom.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Pauiding, Pauiding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

MICKIE SAYS

AMERICAN SPIRIT RELIED ON TO WIN.

In the light of succeeding events it is interesting to recall the confidence with which the United States Food Administrator viewed the gloomy outlook in July of 1917, when this country had been in the war for less than four months and the Germans were steadily sending the western front nearer and nearer to Paris.

"Even though the situation in Europe may be gloomy today," he declared in a public statement, "no American who has knowledge of the results already obtained in every direction need have one atom of fear that democracy will not defend itself in these United States."

MUST PROVIDE FOOD

Duty Devolving on Farmers of This Continent.

Western Canada Well Prepared to Meet the Needs of the Old World—"The Earth Is a Machine Which Yields Almost Gratuitous Service to Every Application of Intellect"—Emerson.

Speaking with one of the commissioners appointed to make a survey of the food situation in the battle-torn countries of Europe the writer was told that the depletion and shortage of food was far greater than anybody had expected. With the investigation, which at that time had merely started, much had been brought to light that had only been surmised. Herds of live stock were completely wiped out, fields that had been prolific yielders of grain, roots and vegetables were terraced and hummocked by bombs and shells, many of them still lying unexploded and dangerous. Until this land can be gone over and cleaned nothing in the way of cultivation can be carried on, and even where that is done the work of leveling and getting under cultivation will take a long time.

Much more devolves upon the farmer on this side of the Atlantic than was at first supposed. Herds of live stock will have to be replenished, and this will take years; the provisioning of the people in the meantime is the task the farmers here will be asked to undertake. Producing countries will be taxed to their utmost to meet this demand; all that can be provided will be needed. This need will continue for some time, and during this period prices will be high. The opinion of those who have given the question most careful thought and study is that food scarcity will be greater than ever before. The Allies will have to feed Germany, Austria, Turkey and Russia and this in addition to the requirements of European neutrals for increased supplies now that there is no submarine menace.

To the Canadian and American farmer this means a demand for his grain fully as great as at any time in the past. Wheat will be needed, meat will be required. The slogan "don't stop saving food" is as necessary today as ever. The purpose of this article is to direct attention to the fact that hundreds of thousands of acres of land in Western Canada are still unoccupied, and this land is capable of producing enough to supply all needs. On its rich grasses are easily raised—and cheaply too—the cattle that will be sought; in its soil lies the nutriment that makes easy the production of the grain that will be needed, and in both the farmer will be assured of a good profit on his investment. The land can be purchased at low prices, on easy terms, and with the abundance of returns that it will give, it does not mean a matter of speculation. The facts as set out are known, and certainly are guaranteed.

These facts, the low cost of the land, and its great productivity, combined with the admirable marketing and transport facilities at the disposal of the farmer make farming in Western Canada an attractive proposition.—Advertisement.

J. W. Jones, prominent business man of Huntington, W. Va., is today again wearing on his finger a big ring with an amethyst setting from which he had been mysteriously separated for several weeks. He lost the ring in his chicken yard, he now knows, for in cutting open one of the chickens while preparing it for the table the ring was found in its stomach.

IT MUST BE RATIFIED.

By MRS. WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

Tune: "The King's Business."

The states are free to say
They will be dry for aye,
For congress passed an act
That makes our hopes a fact,
With power to right the wrong,
With voices clear and strong,
The temp'rance forces sing this song:

CHORUS:

This is the message that we bring,
O, make the very welkin ring:
It can be ratified;
It must be ratified,
It shall be ratified this year.

To save our boys from sin,
To give them strength to win
The battles o'er the sea
Where many perils be;
To save the homes we love,
To guide our thoughts above,
The temp'rance forces sing this song:
(Chorus)

Then work from sea to sea
And make the country free;
Vote for the men who stand
For home and native land.
To ev'ry candidate
In ev'ry doubtful state
The temp'rance forces sing this song:
(Chorus)

DETROIT UNDER PROHIBITION.

"Detroit, the biggest dry city in the United States, is more prosperous than ever before," asserts Zach Farmer in a paper issued by the Detroit Real Estate board. "This is the consensus of authoritative opinion, deduced from an analysis of general conditions existing at the present time as compared to the pre-dry period. From all outward appearances a casual observer would never suspect that the 'Motor City' had once been one of the most flourishing hangouts of old demon 'Booze.' Briefly, the present situation is as follows: Seldom does one hear a conversation in which the absence of liquor is lamented. Many of the former saloons have been converted into soft drink emporiums and restaurants. Most of the vacancies created by suspension of the liquor business have been reoccupied and realtors, almost without exception, state that the real estate situation has not been impaired. To the contrary, in many instances, property values have been strengthened through the exit of illegitimate and the entrance of legitimate business in some sections of the city. The old rule of fear that the elimination of a saloon in a business block would mean a loss of business on both sides, has been dissipated."

THE PASSING OF THE WASHERWOMAN.

Vote dry and you lose your washerwomen, say the householders of Indianapolis to the householders of wet states. A sad state of affairs prevails on wash day in the metropolis of the Hoosier state and prohibition is responsible. Under the old order of affairs whole family washings were done by the inmates of the woman's prison. Since John Barleycorn made his exit from the state, the number of women incarcerated has fallen off to such an extent that this work can no longer be handled. Since April 1, the day of the emancipation of Indiana from the saloons, the new arrivals at the woman's prison have been cut down to one-third the former number; the third floor of the prison has been closed and one of the kitchens is no longer needed. Strange as it may seem, the resident of Indianapolis, notwithstanding the inconvenience named, is more than reconciled to conditions which enable women to work in their own homes or engage in self-respecting labor elsewhere.

THAT LOSS OF REVENUE.

Continually we hear the liquor interests predicting great loss of revenue to the government as a result of prohibition. Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, former head of the federal health bureau, answers them by saying:

"Better it would be to raise the money by a tax on patent nostrums and stock gambling than to get it from the wholesale wrecking of lives, careers, and families. The amount of revenue collected by a nation does not measure its efficiency; but the amount of revenue collected from fermented and distilled spirits does measure the inefficiency of the nation."

Frank A. Vanderlip, former comptroller of the currency, later president of the largest bank in America, now serving without pay as chairman of the War Savings committee of the United States treasury, is also on the side of prohibition:

"The plea that government revenue will be seriously curtailed by nation-wide prohibition should not influence action, for prohibition will induce a national efficiency which will open new and far richer sources of revenue."

WAR PROHIBITION.

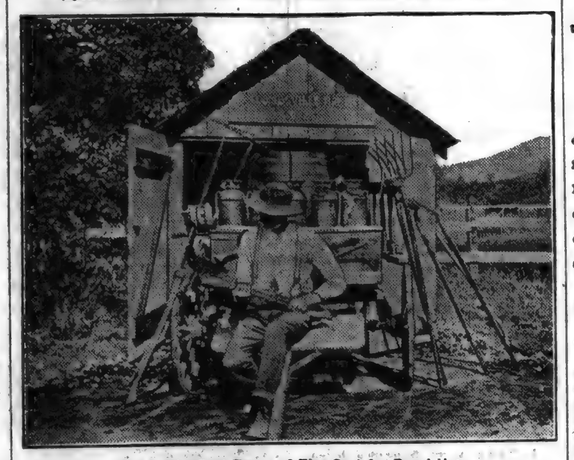
On November 22 President Woodrow Wilson signed the special agricultural food production bill, which carries the war prohibition "rider." This provides that prohibition of both manufacture and sale shall begin July 1, 1919, and continue until demobilization is complete.

Dr. Howard H. Kelly, a famous physician in Baltimore, says that "whisky is not only useless, but harmful, in the treatment of influenza and pneumonia."

Our Part in Feeding the Nation

FIRE PROTECTION FOR RURAL COMMUNITIES.

(Special Information Service, United States Department of Agriculture.)



One of the Best Types of Fire Cart for Rural Use.

FIRE COMPANIES AMONG FARMERS

Become Members of Voluntary Organizations With All the Necessary Equipment.

PLANNED BY COUNTY AGENTS

Estimated That Quarter of Million Dollars' Worth of Grain Was Saved Last Year—Wider Field of Usefulness Seen.

A smoke smudge on the horizon in the country no longer means certain and complete loss.

At least, this is true in 15,000 square miles of California where 6,000 farmers have enlisted in rural fire companies, equipped with trailer fire carts, stationed at strategic points and ready to meet the fire peril when it appears. The plan was developed by the county agricultural agents, in cooperation with the forest service of the United States department of agriculture, and it is estimated that a quarter of a million dollars' worth of grain was saved through it during the summer of 1918. The plan was devised for the purpose of reducing losses in grain fields and on grass ranges, but department of agriculture specialists believe it might be given a much wider field of usefulness in the protection of practically all kinds of farm property from loss by fire.

Under the California plan the county farm bureau becomes the central fire protection agency. A local fire company was formed at each community farm bureau center, and the members pledged themselves to respond instantly to the call of fire. Each community elected a "fire boss," who was commissioned as a deputy state fire warden, and a "fire dispatcher," whose duty it is to remain at the telephone during fires to give information and obtain help.

Trailers Carry Equipment.

In most of the communities a two-wheeled trailer fire cart was obtained. These trailers are of simple construction, may be attached to any automobile, and are completely equipped with chemical fire extinguishers, water cans filled with wet sacks, with forks and shovels, and with a container for drinking water for the fire fighters. The trailer is kept at the cross roads or other most accessible point in the community, and the first automobile passing on the way to a fire hitches to the trailer and takes it along. Out of the 366 rural fire companies organized in California last year, 257 are equipped with such trailers.

The saving of a quarter of a million dollars in a single season in this limited territory is an indication of what might result if the plan were generally adopted in communities where conditions are such as to make it workable. There are some rural communities where such a plan might not be advisable, but in the majority, perhaps, it would be workable. Prior to the extensive spread of the farm bureau system, which came primarily as a war measure during 1917 and 1918, it would not have been possible, since it is necessarily a co-operative community activity. But the farm bureau system has come to stay, and it affords the sort of co-operative effort of which community fire protection may well be a part.

Similar Need Elsewhere.

Throughout a dozen or more states, there exists a need for protection against fire in grain and grass fields, at threshers, and the like, similar to that in California. In other large areas where wooded tracts are interspersed with tilled fields and where woods fires are of frequent occurrence and often spread to crops and buildings, there exists the same need as in the extensive grain fields. And, in the general protection of farm buildings and fences, in hay loft and hay rick fires from spontaneous combustion or accident, in fires spreading from burning brush or rubbish, where in most cases water is not available, an organized neighborhood fire company equipped with a chemical cart would be of the greatest utility.

The office of farm management of the United States department of agriculture has for some time urged the use of chemical apparatus as more effective than water against fires on the farm, especially where kerosene, gasoline or other oil is involved, and as an indispensable reinforcement to the use of water in all cases. That is secured in the California plan together with an even more effective thing, the organization of the men of the community in such way that they can make their efforts almost immediately effective against any fire.

Meeting Labor Demand.

Although the largest acreage on record was planted in 1918 by American farmers, the great crops of the year were harvested under difficulties not appreciably greater than those in normal times, says the annual report of the secretary of agriculture.

"The department of agriculture continued throughout the year to give earnest attention to the securing and mobilization of an adequate supply of farm labor," the report states. "It maintained its representatives, stationed in each state in the spring of 1917, and perfected its own organization, enlisting the more active cooperation of the county agents and other extension workers.

"It more fully co-ordinated its activities with the department of labor, a representative of the department of agriculture having been designated a member of the war labor policies board which was created by the president. It has also aided the war department in connection with the classification of agricultural registrants. Special efforts were made, beginning early in the year, to impress upon the residents of urban communities the necessity of aiding farmers in the planting and harvesting of their crops.

"The response to appeals along this line was generous. In Kansas, for example, where the situation was especially difficult, the reports indicate that more than 45,000 workers were supplied to farmers to assist in the wheat harvest. The potato crop in two counties in Texas was saved through the aid of the business men in the local communities, and in Illinois 35,000 workers were registered for harvest work."

Many other examples could be cited, the secretary says.

Specializing Often Wins.

Many persons do not market by parcel post because they do not have a large variety of produce or because their supply is available only part of the year. While it is true that a continuous supply of a number of products is more satisfactory to customers, such a supply is not absolutely necessary in order to establish a parcel post trade.

Many persons have secured customers by specializing in one or two kinds of produce, such as butter or eggs, which can be supplied during the entire year, and then these customers have offered an outlet for other commodities which can be furnished only occasionally or for produce which is rarely to be had in city markets. In most of these cases it was necessary only to send a letter or card to satisfied regular customers asking them if they wished to obtain certain kinds of produce that were for sale at that time.

Such letters tend to keep up a personal relationship between the producer and his customers which makes it easier to keep up business relations.

Cull These Hens.

Sick; weak, lacking vigor, inactive, poor eaters, molted or started to molt, with small, puckered, hard, dry vents; with small, shriveled, hard, dull-colored combs; with thick or coarse stiff pelvic bones, pelvic bones close together, small spread between pelvic bones and rear end of keel, and full, hard, small abdomen. In breeds with yellow skin and shanks, the discarded hens should also show yellow or medium yellow shanks and yellow beaks and vents.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By Rev. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 2

THE GIVING OF THE MANNA.

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 16:1-36.

GOLDEN TEXT—Give us this day our daily bread.—Matthew 6:11.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Deut. 8:1-20; John 6:29-51.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God's gift of food.—Ex. 16:11-15.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Daily food in the desert. Memory Verses—Matt. 6:31, 26.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—Our daily dependence upon God.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—Poverty and providence in our day.

I. Lusting for the Flesh Pots of Egypt (16:1-36).

1. Murmuring against Moses and Aaron (vv. 1-3).

As they journeyed from Elim into the great wilderness they became conscious of the scarcity of some of the things they had enjoyed even in Egyptian slavery. Only a few days ago they were singing God's praises for their wondrous deliverance at the Red Sea (Ch. 15). Now at the beginning of their privation they are murmuring. They utterly lack spiritual perception. They were a free people on the way to their own land. What did it matter, with such a prospect, though they were a bit hungry?

This complaining showed a base ingratitude and was most dishonoring to God. Unthankfulness is a sign of heart corruption (Rom. 1:21).

2. God's answer to their murmurings (vv. 4-12).

(1). He promised to rain bread from heaven (vv. 4, 5). His purpose in this was to teach them that "man doth not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord." (Deut. 8:3). The manna was given by God, but the people must gather it. (2) He promised to give them a vision of his glory (vv. 6-10). This served as a warning and an encouragement. Despite their murmurings against him he invites them to come near unto him. Wonderful grace that sinful, ungrateful men should be permitted to come near to God! (3) Flesh and bread promised (vv. 11, 12). God answered the cravings of the people by giving them quails and manna to eat. How gracious is our God!

II. Quails and Manna Given (16:13-15).

At the appointed time God gave the Israelites the promised food. He first allowed them to feel their need, to show that man's highest need is to believe God and rely upon him for all needs (Deut. 8:2, 3; Matt. 4:3, 4). He then displayed his glory, showing that he was able and willing to supply their need if they would obey him.

1. In the evening the quails came up. (v. 13).

Since they desired flesh he gave them flesh to eat. This is an example of the patience and long-suffering of God. How he caters to the whims of his vacillating children!

2. In the morning God gave the manna (vv. 14, 15).

The Israelites did not know what it was. They exclaimed: "What is it?" Moses told them it was the bread which the Lord had given them to eat.

III. The Responsibilities of the Israelites (16:16:31).

1. They must gather a certain ration daily (v. 16 cf v. 20).

This was to test their faith. They must look to him for their daily bread (Matt. 6:11).

2. Every man was to gather for himself (v. 16 cf. v. 20).

The manna typified Christ (John 6: 33, 51). As each man was to gather for himself so each one must appropriate Christ for himself.

3. The manna must be gathered fresh every morning (v. 21).

This was to be done early, before the sun was up. Christ, our manna, should be taken each day, and the first thing in the day (John 6: 57).

4. They must not gather in excess of one day's supply (vv. 18, 20).

That which was in excess of the day's supply became corrupt. Christians should make use of the gifts bestowed by God. God's graces are only good when put to use.

5. The manna must be eaten to preserve life.

They were in the wilderness, so could only live by eating of the food which God gave. In the wilderness of this world only those who feed upon Christ, the true manna, have eternal life (John 6:50, 51).

6. Due consideration should be given to the Sabbath day (vv. 22-31). A double portion was to be gathered the day before.

IV. Manna Kept as a Memorial (16: 32-36).

This was to be kept as a reminder of God's favor in supplying them with bread in the wilderness for forty years.

Help From Nature Study.

The study of nature is well pleasing to God, and is akin to prayer. Learning the laws of nature, we magnify the first inventor, the designer of the world; and we learn to love him, for great love of God results from great knowledge.—Leonardo da Vinci.

Think First Upon God.

In the morning, when you awake, accustom yourself to think first upon God, or something in order to his service; and at night, also, let him close thine eyes.—Jeremy Taylor.

Weekly Health Talks

A Word About the Kidneys

BY DOCTOR WATSON.

People are easily frightened when they think something is the matter with their lungs or heart, and well they may be; but few people understand the dangers of diseased kidneys. These organs have a duty of vital importance to perform, and if they are diseased, there is no telling how or where the symptoms may appear. The kidneys are filters, and when they are healthy they remove the poisons from the blood and purify it. When the kidneys are diseased, the poisons are spread everywhere, and one of these poisons is uric acid. The uric acid is carried all through the system and deposited in various places, in the form of urate salts—in the feet, ankles, wrists and back—often forming bags under the eyes. Sometimes the resulting trouble is called rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica and backache. Finally, come stone in the bladder, diabetes and Bright's disease.

Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., in recent years, discovered that a certain combination of remedies would dissolve uric acid (urate salts) in the system. He found this combination to be harmless, so that he made it up in tablets, of double strength, and called them Anuric Tablets. They dissolve uric acid in the human system as hot coffee dissolves sugar. If you have uric acid troubles, don't delay in taking Anuric Tablets, which can be secured in the drug stores. You can write Dr. Pierce, too, and he will tell you what to eat and how to live so that more uric acid will not form in your system. Dr. Pierce will not charge for this advice.

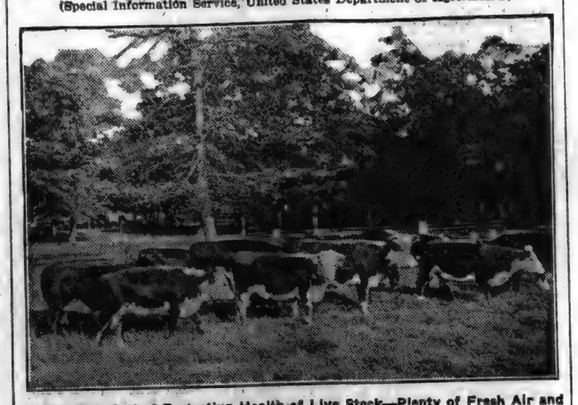
Helping the Meat and Milk Supply

PREVENT DISEASE AND STOP ANIMAL LOSSES.

(Special Information Service, United States Department of Agriculture.)



Nature's Method of Protecting Health of Live Stock—Plenty of Fresh Air and Abundance of Succulent Feed.

PREVENT LOSSES OF LIVE STOCK

Three-Fourths of a $200,000,000 Loss by Disease and Accident Is Preventable.

PROPER CARE IS NECESSARY

Closer Co-operation Between Owners and Those in Position to Give Assistance Needed to Control Different Ailments.

Losses of live stock from diseases, accident and other causes, probably three-fourths of which are preventable by proper preventive measures and modern veterinary practice, amount to enormous sums each year—in 1915 they were estimated as reaching $212,000,000. This sum, say specialists of the United States department of agriculture, would supply the entire American expeditionary force of 2,000,000 men with meat for nearly a year. To these losses may be added others which, though indirect, are nevertheless as important. The discouragement of stock raising is one indirect loss, and this in turn retards the development of diversified agriculture.

Co-operation Needed.

Although much is being accomplished in the control and eradication of destructive animal diseases, the best results can be fully realized only through closer co-operation between the live stock owner and those who are in position to give him assistance. The stockmen who fail to realize the necessity of fighting the unseen enemies of live stock by sanitation and the use of modern preventive methods that science has provided must be made to see the importance and profit which will come as a result of changing their conditions. A better understanding of feeds and feeding practices will prevent many of the common disorders of the digestive and respiratory tracts which are common among all classes of live stock. Losses from such accidents as horn wounds, bruises, wire cuts, harness sores, and broken legs, in most instances, are properly chargeable to neglect or carelessness.

The selection of breeds adapted to the climate and local conditions under which they must exist, as well as the selection for the foundation stock, is important in maintaining health. Heavy beef and dairy types are better suited to withstand the trying conditions of cold climates, while the lighter, less fleshy breeds thrive better in warmer localities. Mountain types are better adapted for hilly grazing lands, close-wooled sheep for cold regions, and the open-fleeced breeds for warmer climates.

In purchasing stock it is advisable to find out what attention the seller gives to the health of his animals. Consult some of his customers. If he is openly opposed to the tuberculin test, for example, or objects to the physical examination of horses for soundness by a qualified veterinarian, it may be for purely selfish motives.

As soon as animals are suspected of being affected with disease, especially if it is thought to be a communicable disease, they should be separated from healthy animals and be held in quarantine until this condition has been determined and remedied.

The proper handling of animals has an important bearing upon maintaining their health and resistance to diseases. Good equipment and high-grade stock are not enough. The animals should be handled by an attendant who has certain natural qualifications for his work.

Every state agricultural college maintains a corps of specialists who are willing and well qualified to help stockmen promote the health of their live stock. The United States department of agriculture is constantly giving out important information in the form of bulletins, which are available on request, and in every state has representatives employed in combating animal diseases or some other important activity connected with agriculture or stock raising. The state veterinarian is also ready to give advice and assistance in the diagnosis and control of outbreaks of disease, and in nearly every community there is a veterinarian who should be called on when needed. All these agencies exist for the purpose of rendering assistance to the live stock owner, and his losses could be minimized if he would utilize them to a greater extent.

AVOID LOSING MILLIONS

The misuse of the by-products of farm crops during the past has caused American farmers to lose millions of dollars annually. Nothing offers greater opportunity for increased and more economical production of farm meats and dairy products than by the more effective use of such products. To bring farming operations up to the highest possible state of efficiency, all by-products must be used in an economical manner. Conditions are such as to urge the conservation of every available farm resource and every American farmer should make a study of conditions existing on his own farm with the idea of utilizing such products as have heretofore been wasted.

Animal Diseases.

How the spread of live stock diseases in the United States is largely controlled and sources of infection are stamped out is explained by the bureau of animal industry of the United States department of agriculture. Approximately 190 employees of the bureau, engaged in the work, are stationed at the principal live stock markets of the country.

All receipts of cattle, sheep, and swine unloaded in daylight are inspected at the time of unloading, while all those yarded at night are inspected early in the morning, before any trading takes place. Outgoing shipments are reinspected before loading, and holdovers are reinspected in the yards each day until disposed of.

The principal diseases for which inspections are made are foot-and-mouth disease, anthrax, scabies of cattle and sheep, cattle fever, and hog cholera. If any symptoms of these or other communicable diseases are detected, all affected or exposed animals are segregated and treated, or otherwise handled in accordance with department regulations.

Officials of the state in which the shipment originated are immediately notified, as well as department field forces in that territory, and every effort is made to trace the origin of the infection. In this way centers of infection are located in most cases, and the spread of the disease to other premises and herds is usually prevented by the prompt application of appropriate sanitary measures.

During the last fiscal year ended June 30, 1918, inspectors of the bureau of animal industry made 88,700,384 inspections for contagious or communicable diseases, and supervised 703,481 dippings of cattle and sheep at market centers. The vaccination of 254,731 hogs against hog cholera and the dipping of these hogs were also supervised, in order that they might be shipped to country points for feeding without danger of spreading the disease. In addition, great numbers of horses were inspected for influenza, in the effort to control that disease and reduce losses from it.

Team Work Wins.

It is easier and more economical to prevent the introduction of disease into a herd or flock than it is to eliminate it. Every possible precaution should be taken by the stockman to prevent the introduction of disease on his premises. In recent years animal losses directly or indirectly from disease have amounted to more than $200,000,000, annually, but with proper team work between federal, state and local authorities and stockmen these losses can be promptly and greatly reduced.

Failure and Success.

One man chose for himself an easy goal. Thousands had attained it before him. He followed in their footsteps and reached it.

The world called him a success.

Another dreamed of a distant glory. He set his hopes afar. He left the beaten paths and sought to climb higher than man had ever been. The goal he climbed for was beyond his strength, yet he never ceased to struggle for it. He died without tasting victory.

Because he had spurned the easy success and chose to seek the greater goal the world called him a failure.

Yet in his failure the one had done bigger things than the successful one had ever dreamed of.

U. S. HEALTH SERVICE ISSUES WARNING

Increase in All Respiratory Diseases After the Influenza Epidemic Probable.

Influenza Expected to Lurk for Months. How to Guard Against Pneumonia. Common Colds Highly Catching—Importance of Suitable Clothing—Could Save 100,000 Lives.

Washington, D. C.—With the subsidence of the epidemic of influenza the attention of health officers is directed to pneumonia, bronchitis and other diseases of the respiratory system which regularly cause a large number of deaths, especially during the winter season. According to Rupert Blue, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, these diseases will be especially prevalent this winter unless the people are particularly careful to obey health instructions.

"The present epidemic," said Surgeon General Blue, "has taught by bitter experience how readily a condition beginning apparently as a slight cold may go on to pneumonia and death. Although the worst of the epidemic is over, there will continue to be a large number of scattered cases, many of them mild and unrecognized, which will be danger spots to be guarded against." The Surgeon General likened the present situation to that after a great fire, saying, "No fire chief who understands his business stops playing the hose on the charred debris as soon as the flames and visible fire have disappeared. On the contrary, he continues the water for hours and even days, for he knows that there is danger of the fire rekindling from smoldering embers."

"Then you fear another outbreak of influenza?" he was asked. "Not necessarily another large epidemic," said the Surgeon General, "but unless the people learn to realize the seriousness of the danger they will be compelled to pay a heavy death toll from pneumonia and other respiratory diseases.

Common Colds Highly Catching.

"It is encouraging to observe that people are beginning to learn that ordinary coughs and colds are highly catching and are spread from person to person by means of droplets of germ laden mucus. Such droplets are sprayed into the air when careless or ignorant people cough or sneeze without covering their mouth and nose. It is also good to know that people have learned something about the value of fresh air. In summer, when people are largely out of doors, the respiratory diseases (coughs, colds, pneumonia, etc.) are infrequent; in the fall, as people begin to remain indoors, the respiratory diseases increase; in the winter, when people are prone to stay in badly ventilated, overheated rooms, the respiratory diseases become very prevalent.

Suitable Clothing Important.

"Still another factor in the production of colds, pneumonia and other respiratory diseases is carelessness or ignorance of the people regarding suitable clothing during the seasons when the weather suddenly changes, sitting in warm rooms too heavily dressed or, what is even more common, especially among women, dressing so lightly that windows are kept closed in order to be comfortably warm. This is a very injurious practice.

Could Save 100,000 Lives.

"I believe we could easily save one hundred thousand lives annually in the United States if all the people would adopt the system of fresh air living followed, for example, in tuberculosis sanatoria. There is nothing mysterious about it—no specific medicine, no vaccine. The important thing is right living, good food and plenty of fresh air.

Droplet Infection Explained in Pictures.

"The Bureau of Public Health, Treasury Department, has just issued a striking poster drawn by Berryman, the well-known Washington cartoonist. The poster exemplifies the modern method of health education. A few years ago, under similar circumstances, the health authorities would have issued an official dry but scientifically accurate bulletin teaching the role of droplet infection in the spread of respiratory diseases. The only ones who would have understood the bulletin would have been those who already knew all about the subject. The man in the street, the plain citizen and the many millions who toil for their living would have had no time and no desire to wade through the technical phraseology."

COLDS, INFLUENZA, PNEUMONIA, AND TUBERCULOSIS ARE SPREAD THIS WAY

Copies of this poster can be obtained free of charge by writing to the Surgeon General, U. S. Public Health Service, Washington, D. C.

Lifes Work Is Ended.

Death should come gently to one of gentle mould like thee,
As light winds, wandering thro groves of bloom,
Detach the delicate blossoms from the tree
Close thy sweet eyes calmly, and without a pain,
And we will trust in God to see thee yet again.

Dorris D, daughter of H. M. and Hattie A. Widney, was born in St. Joe, Indiana, August 16, 1903 and died at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Maryland, January 29, 1919, to which place she had been taken with the hope of finding relief from a severe malady of eight years standing.

The only daughter in the home she wound the affections of her parents about her until almost nothing was too great for them to do for her if it was for her comfort. The past eight years have been years of affliction and the devoted parents have tried every means possible to relieve their loved one, only at last to meet seeming defeat.

Dorrie was a devoted christian and many times during her last days spoke of her faith and asked papa and mamma to prepare for the better life. Her life has not been in vain if these two only are led to christian living by her.

She united with the Methodist Protestant church at St. Joe, January 18, 1913, under the pastorate of Rev. J. C. McCaslin, and so long as she was able, and many times when she was not, she always attended her Sunday School and church services. In this leaving a good example to many of older years and experience.

Only God knows the sorrow of these loving hearts of father, mother and brother, and he alone can heal and bind up the wounds.

To die is landing on some quiet shore,
Where billows never break nor tempests roar,
Ere well we feel the friendly stroke, 'tis o'er.

Funeral services were held from the M. P. Church, Sunday afternoon, Rev. Johnson officiating.

Taken to Hospital Again

Roy Mann was brought home last week from the hospital at Ft. Wayne and on Thursday several orderlies were sent here and he was taken to a hospital at Indianapolis. Mr. Mann is a soldier and after having the Flu while at camp came home. He was taken to a Fort Wayne hospital where an operation was performed but which did not relieve him. There is very little hope of his recovery.

Another Fine Time

The second, of a series of receptions for returned soldiers from camps and overseas, given by the Red Cross, was held Tuesday evening at the Lutheran church, with a large attendance from all over the local Red Cross Branch district.

Eight young men were present at the gathering as follows: Tom Brunson, Roscoe Houghton, Paul Maxwell, Zay Sailer, Dewey Miller, Chas Bassett, Floyd Wineland and Jacob Homan of Auburn. Of this number two were from overseas, the last named gentleman and Paul Maxwell. Besides these, four of the boys that were present at the first reception were present.

Rev. Mumma gave the welcome with a response by Paul Maxwell. The program was interspersed with music. America, Here's My Boy, was sung by Alice Tustison; Indiana, by Melba Andress; Keep the Home Fires Burning, by Hildah Koch. Miss Willis gave the popular Riley reading, "Who Gave You the Name of Old Glory?"

Supt. Fred Smith gave a talk on the war conditions as he sees it, and was a very interesting one, while in his view the outlook is not just as favorable to real lasting peace as he would have us think, but that he places confidence in the head of our government to do absolutely the best for his people possible.

Word was received from Calvin Kain to the effect that while stationed at Brest, France, on guard duty, a soldier came up and touched him on the shoulder, and turning around, met his brother Forrest for the first time, and he was on his way to the states. This dates back to December 18th.

At the close of the program the audience repaired to the basement where ice cream and wafers were served.

A good time, well I should say, and if you were not there you missed a treat. The audience was large and the spirit of patriotism and loyalty filled every breast.

Another reception will be given just as soon as a sufficient number of the boys are returned home.

TAX REFORM BILL TO HOUSE SOON

Amendments Have All Been Submitted; No More Public Meetings to Be Held.

STATE POLICE FORCE ASKED

Change in Divorce Law Providing Freedom From Incurable Insane Urged by Senator Alldredge—Dry Bill Amended.

Indianapolis.—The tax reform measure is expected to reach the legislature from the committee within the next few days. No more amendments are to be accepted for consideration and public meetings to discuss the measure are at an end. Early action is predicted by those most interested in the bill.

The recent meeting was for the purpose of hearing representatives of banks, trust companies and building and loan associations. Eben H. Wolcott of Indianapolis, chairman of the tax committee of the Indiana Bankers' association, presented resolutions adopted by his committee which favor "any plan which will secure the greatest measure of return of property, of whichever kind, for assessment."

The house committee on public morals voted to report for passage the Wright dry bill, which seeks to amend the state-wide prohibition law in numerous ways.

Members of the legislative committee of the National Horse Thief Detective association of Indiana, including William Colvert of Attica, H. E. Lochry, Franklin; J. M. Carter, Indianapolis; E. J. Mendendall, Sheridan, and C. F. Martin, Jamestown, have a bill they wish introduced in the general assembly to provide for a state police force to operate in all parts of the state and to have the same powers of arrest as local police authorities.

Amendment of the divorce law so as to provide that where one of the parties to a marriage has been adjudged incurably insane and has been confined in an institution for ten years or more, the other party shall be entitled to a divorce, will be proposed in a bill being drawn by Senator Alldredge. One section will provide that the party getting the divorce must make provision for the support of the insane person from whom the divorce is obtained.

The ways and means committee of the house voted unanimously to report for passage to the house the bill to legalize the expenditures of the Indiana state council of defense during the war period, and to appropriate $105,000 for the expenses of the council during that period.

The committee voted to kill the bill introduced by Representative Southard which sought to pension employees of state institutions after they had been in the employ of the state 20 years.

The labor committee, Representative Day, chairman, decided to recommend for passage Representative Bidaman's anti-injunction labor bill; Representative McKinley's bill to provide for the guarding of gas valves and the supplying of gas masks to workmen to protect them from noxious gases; and another bill by Representative McKinley, providing that building inspectors see that buildings are constructed in compliance with laws protecting workmen in dangerous occupations.

The insurance committee, Representative Miltenberger chairman, voted to recommend for passage the bill introduced by Representative Abrams to create a separate state insurance department after amending the bill to cut the salary of the head of department to $4,000 instead of $6,000 and changing the effective date from September 30, 1919, to September 30, 1920. This action makes the bill the same as it is in the senate where it has advanced to third reading.

The senate committee on roads decided to report favorably on senate bill 80, providing for licensing of automobiles according to horsepower and weight, and house bill 10, known as the patrol bill, permitting county road superintendents to name assistant superintendents to the number of not more than four to each 100 miles of roads, to patrol highways and look after repairs. Such assistant superintendents are to get 35 cents an hour for their labor while actually employed and 50 cents an hour when working with a team. It was also decided to make favorable report on senate bill 128, authorizing county commissioners to designate important public highways for the erection of guide-posts at crossings.

W. W. V. of A. Meet February 22.

The World War Veterans of America will hold their first national convention in Evansville February 22, Washington's birthday. A large number of delegates are expected.

Gives Farm to Purdue University.

At a meeting of the trustees of Purdue university W. E. Pinney of Valparaiso offered to the university a gift of a farm and other lands near Wanatah, amounting to about 400 acres, with an estimated value of $55,000. Mr. Pinney, a Valparaiso banker, in making the gift, is actuated by a desire to promote the interests of better farming and better home life on farms. The trustees accepted the gift, agreeing in consideration thereof permanently to manage and control the property for the purposes specified.

State Death Rate High.

Influenza-pneumonia in Indiana in December raised the month's death rate to nearly double what it was in December, 1917, according to statistics compiled in the state board of health office. The rate was 22.1 to the 1,000. In December, 1917, the rate was only 13.1. The death rate for Marion county was 22.5, slightly higher than the rate for the state. Fayette county had the highest rate, 42.7, and Newton county had the lowest, 6.8. There were 3,221 deaths in the state, of which 1,917 were due to influenza and 917 to pneumonia. The normal number of December deaths due to the two diseases is only 875.

The state birth rate for the month was 18.1, with a total of 4,894 babies born. The Marion county rate was 17.7, or a total of 471. Ohio county had the highest rate, 36, and Hancock county had the lowest rate, 4.4.

Expect Many Rotarian Delegates.

A thousand Rotarians, delegates to the Eleventh district conference of clubs allied with International Rotary, will mobilize in this city February 12 and 13. They will come from Anderson, Bloomington, Decatur, Elkhart, Evansville, Fort Wayne, Huntington, Kendallville, Kokomo, Lafayette, Logansport, Michigan City, Muncie, New Albany, Princeton, Richmond, South Bend, Terre Haute, Vincennes and Wabash. A new club at Connersville also will be represented. Indiana has been made a separate conference district, the Eleventh, and the meeting here will be all Hoosier, with John Napier Dyer of Vincennes, district governor in the chair.

Will Build New Steel Plant.

The Inland Steel company has bought from the David A. Ogden estate, 93 acres of land lying along the shore of Lake Michigan, eight miles east of Gary, where the company is planning the erection of a big steel plant. The land extends for a mile along the lake and the company plans to fill in a large area of the lake, which is exceedingly shallow for a long distance out in the water at that point. The price paid is said to have been $600 an acre.

Toll Rates Injunction Dissolved.

Holding that the United States District court had no jurisdiction in the application of the Indiana public service commission for a permanent injunction to prevent collection by the telephone companies of new toll rates recently ordered into effect by Postmaster General Burleson, Judge A. B. Anderson dissolved the temporary restraining order granted several days ago. The rates became effective in Indiana immediately upon the court's ruling.

Introduces Curfew Bill.

The curfew bell is ringing again. Representative Phelps gave the rope a tug by introducing a bill prohibiting children from loitering on the streets after certain hours at night. A sliding scale has been prepared, providing that in all cities of the first, second and third classes children under sixteen years old may not loiter on the streets after 8:30 o'clock from October to March and after nine o'clock from April to September, inclusive.

Roosevelt Memorial Services.

Will H. Hays, chairman of the Republican national committee, will address the Indiana house of representatives February 7 when memorial services for the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt will be held. The services in honor of the late president will be held at two o'clock on the same date the congress of the United States holds memorial services in the capitol at Washington, D. C.

Twenty-Seven Lobbyists Listed.

Twenty-seven lobbyists have registered with the secretary of state thus far in the session of the legislature. Last session up to the corresponding time 47 lobbyists had registered. The total for the 1917 session was 76. Lobbyists this year, however, show a fine scorn for the law, which requires them to come out in the open when they elect themselves to the "third house."

Indiana Women Win in Senate.

Woman suffrage workers won their first victory with the present legislature when the senate without speeches or debate, passed by a vote of 44 to 0 the constitutional amendment providing for universal woman suffrage. The measure as passed by the senate would exclude aliens, as it provided for "suffrage for citizens" and also eliminates registration.

Makes Kindling of Bar Fixtures.

Adolph Schmitt, sales manager for the F. W. Cook Brewing company of Evansville announces that a warerooom full of saloon fixtures owned by the brewing company, which had been stored after the Indiana prohibition law went into effect, have been cut up and given away for kindling, the glass first being removed.

Defense Councils to Go.

The state and county councils of defense are expected to be dissolved by proclamation of Governor Goodrich soon after the legislature provides for the payment of the expenses of the state council and legalizes the expenditures of the various county councils. Bills covering both subjects are before the legislature, and it is expected that they will be passed without opposition. Governor Goodrich announced some time ago that it is not desirable to continue the state council as a readjustment body.

Hoosier State Happenings

Goshen.—An epidemic of diphtheria here has reached alarming proportions. Several new cases have been reported to the health authorities.

Laporte.—Dr. A. F. Finn, federal veterinarian from Plymouth, has been here probing for possible epidemic among hogs in the county. News of a pneumonia attack among pigs in the county reached Doctor Finn.

Aurora.—Dearborn County Farm Agent Clarence C. Madison, who has been inspecting the various wheat fields reports most of the growing wheat in good condition, and that the roots are deep in the ground and will not be affected by cold weather. Fruit trees have not been injured.

Connersville.—Oliver Fiant, county road superintendent, has announced that drivers of heavy trucks found on any part of Fayette county's 100 miles of county road following the next rain, thereby causing damage to the roadbed, will be prosecuted. The county roads were seriously injured by heavy hauling following rains in December.

Shelbyville.—As an incentive to young persons to engage in the business of stock raising and agriculture, several farmers of Moral township have announced that they will give awards next season to the boys and girls raising the best pigs, the best poultry and best yields of corn from an acre of ground.

Brookville.—Tobacco is being hauled into the warehouses here by the wagon and truck loads. More tobacco has been raised in Franklin county than at any time heretofore. Prices range from 15 to 44 cents. The tobacco is of a far better quality than in former years. Land that has not paid for its taxes heretofore is now bringing its owners $300 or more an acre. More acreage will be put out next year.

Defiance, O.—After electing officers and pledging $100,000 to carry on the work of the organization, the convention of the Lake Erie-Lake Michigan-Miami Deeper Waterways association came to an end here. Plans call for a canal to take a northern route through South Bend, which district has a population of approximately 160,000, while the southern route through Fort Wayne, it is said, would serve only 90,000 people.

Petersburg.—Robins are thick in the woods about Petersburg, and fish are biting, two signs of an early spring. Boys who visited White river a few days ago came back with a number of fish. The stream has not been covered with ice at any time this winter, and the water is said to be many degrees warmer than is usual in the latter part of January. Robins have not been seen this early in this region for years.

Lawrenceburg.—Sebastian J. Eisenshanks, Harry B. Honiger and Louis E. Schusterman, local fur buyers, shipped a consignment of raw furs to New York city which consisted of nearly 3,000 hides. There were many A star No. 1 all-black skunk hides and raccoon hides. It is estimated that between $30,000 and $40,000 worth of furs from native animals trapped in southeastern Indiana have been sold to the fur buyers since the first of September, 1918.

Lafayette.—Is hog cholera being permanently checked in Indiana? According to the annual report of the agricultural experiment station of Purdue university, the death rate from this devastating and costly swine disease was lower in 1918 than in any previous year for which accurate records are available. The campaign against the malady was intensive, due to the desire to prevent loss in wartime, and the results were most satisfactory. Despite the fact that the number of hogs lost last year through this disease was much smaller tha in former years, it continues to be the most prevalent disease of farm animals in the state. It is estimated that 140,000 hogs were lost from cholera during the last year.

Madison.—Tobacco sales on the market last week were heavy and prices continued to soar. Record-breaking crop averages and floor averages were made. Will Bruner averaged $65.22 for his crop, which is the highest of the season. His prices ranged from $58 to $72 for 100 pounds. All grades of tobacco showed an advance of $5 to $10 a hundred above prices of 15 days ago. The four loose-leaf tobacco houses here sold as follows last week: Snook & Co., 186,780 pounds; average, $31.87. Farmers, 197,560 pounds; average, $28.75. Planters, 192,130 pounds; average, $29.79. People's, 160,230 pounds; average $27.52. The total sales were 636,700 pounds, at an average of $28.69 a hundred. Since the sales began December 30 last, 2,906,365 pounds have been sold for an average of $25.70.

The Current of Cash.

"That old bartender who used to get all the money in Crimson Gulch had to go out of business, didn't he?"

"No," answered Broncho Bob. "His luck never faltered. He opened up a grocery store and the high cost of livin' keeps him luggin' the coin to bank same as ever."

Powerful.

"Upson is rather egotistical, yet he has a powerful brain."

"It must be to stand all the thinking he does about himself."

CLUBS HELP FILL NATION'S PORK BARREL

Boy Pig Club Members Exhibiting Their Animals at a State Fair.

CLUBS HELP TO YOUNG AND OLD

More Than Eighty Thousand Boys and Girls Enrolled in Clubs Throughout Country.

INTEREST IN HOG RAISING

Under Direction of Competent Leaders Juvenile Members Learn to Raise Better Pigs and Produce Grains Economically.

American boys and girls were not slackers when it came to answering the nation's call for an increased production of food. About two million boys and girls were connected with the agriculture and home economics clubs last year. Of this number more than eighty thousand were enrolled in pig clubs, organized and conducted by the United States department of agriculture and state agricultural colleges. Of the number who completed the year's work and made reports 71 per cent raised purebred pigs. Their records show that they know how to put fat on porkers, for more than twelve thousand pigs belonging to these juvenile club members made a daily average gain of 1.14 pounds weight, which is considerably above results obtained on most farms.

Under the supervision of 49 department specialists, in addition to county agents and local club leaders, these boys and girls are learning the fundamentals of hog raising and are becoming interested in agriculture. They are taught all phases of the hog industry and are making good in raising pigs and making economical gains.

Many of the club members are teaching their fathers how rapid and economical gains can be made in raising pigs. The members of the two De Kalb county (Indiana) pig clubs, under the direction of the local county agent, have been able to almost double the results obtained by their fathers within the same length of time and feeding pigs of the same litter. The boys used self-feeders and the fathers did not; and the pigs which were allowed to select their own feed made gains of two pounds a day. The club members have proved beyond question the merits of the self-feeder, and hog raisers in the locality of many years' experience are beginning to copy the boys' methods. As a result of the club work the county agent reports many fathers and sons are now planning to go into partnership and raise purebred hogs.

Self-Feeders Profitable.

As a result of an increased pork production campaign carried on by county agents and farm bureaus in Maine 745 self-feeders were built last year and 2,600 more hogs were raised in the state than during the previous year. Farmers who used self-feeders kept more hogs than they could otherwise, which suggested that the self-feeder be made the basis of a campaign for more pork. Building "bees," or demonstrations, were conducted and self-feeders were built with the help of the boys and their parents, and particular emphasis was placed on the advantage of using self-feeders in connection with pasturing hogs.

That boy and girl pig club members are making big records in fattening their animals is shown by a report of the work in Ames, Iowa. One Ames club boy made a gain of 2.39 pounds a day on his pig for a period of 123 days; another, 2.26 pounds a day, and 20 members succeeded in making an average daily gain of more than two pounds. Frank O. Reed, the pig club leader at Ames, says that this is the best record, from the standpoint of rate of gain, that the members have ever made. He also reports that some excellent gains and unusual profits were made in fattening beef, and that several members of the corn clubs produced over 100 bushels to the acre, one showing a yield of 135 bushels an acre, another 128 and another 124.

Red Cross Pig Club.

In Carroll county, Mississippi, where the Red Cross Pig club was organized last year, in which boys and girls as well as older people were members, 600,000 pounds of pork were produced, and $10,000 from the sale of the animals was contributed to the Red Cross funds. The club had 3,000 members and shipped 30 cars of hogs to market. As a result of the work of this club the people of the county have become enthusiastic over the possibilities of raising hogs. They are making a study of economical feeds, the use of tankage and self-feeders, and some of the members succeeded in producing as high as 118 pounds in gain on their hogs in a single month.

By no means must live stock production be allowed to lag. This is the best judgment of those who have studied the situation and who know that it is reasonable to look forward to the continuation of the European demand for meats after the close of the war. Boy and girl pig club members will play an important part in meeting this demand, for they are learning how to raise better animals and produce gains economically, and many of them will be leaders in the industry of the future.

CLUBS HELP ALL

The men and women who organize boys' and girls' clubs strive to interest and train the youth of the country in better methods of agriculture and better homemaking. The developing generation is given an incentive and a spirit that in many cases have not only spurred them to high endeavor but have caused their elders to adopt better methods of farming and housekeeping.

Feeding for Health.

Aside from the communicable diseases the owner of live stock will find that his greatest losses can be traced to the diseases and conditions arising from some form of abuse of the stomachs and intestines of his animals as a result of improper feeding. The proper balancing of rations, therefore, has a material influence upon the health of stock. Continued feeding of a ration having a deficiency or excess of any of the elements of food may result in serious digestive disturbances.

Mineral material or ash is needed in proper proportion if the animals are to continue to grow and remain in good health. The necessity of bulk in the ration is of more importance than most people imagine. In fact, much of the trouble experienced in hog feeding has been caused by rations lacking proper bulk. Succulence is another feature which should not be lacking in the ration. Feeds containing excessive quantities of hard, dry, woody fiber, unless accompanied by some form of succulent forage, produce stomach and intestinal troubles. Moldy feeds frequently produce forage poisoning. Excessive quantities of ergot in grain fed a sufficient time will produce certain diseases.

Some feeds, as for example cottonseed meal, prove to be very satisfactory and economical when fed in reasonable quantities to certain animals, but if larger quantities are fed may result in sickness or even death. Any sudden change in feeds, such as from dry to wet feed, or an abrupt introduction of fresh green grain, tends to derange the digestion, produce colic and other stomach and intestinal disorders, particularly among horses. Stock is sometimes poisoned through access to piles of lime, paint cans or fresh paint on walls.

Every calf should be provided with plenty of roughage, such as alfalfa or mixed hay, as soon as it will eat it.

The self-feeder was especially made for winter feeding. The hogs at this time need grain to produce animal heat.

DANDRUFF MAKES HAIR FALL OUT

A small bottle of "Danderine" keeps hair thick, strong, beautiful.

Girls! Try this! Doubles beauty of your hair in a few moments.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine for a few cents at any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.—Adv.

DOCTOR URGED AN OPERATION

Instead I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Was Cured.

Baltimore, Md.—"Nearly four years I suffered from organic troubles, nervousness and headaches and every month would have to stay in bed most of the time. Treatments would relieve me for a time but my doctor was always urging me to have an operation. My sister advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before consenting to an operation. I took five bottles of it and it has completely cured me and my work is a pleasure. I tell all my friends who have any trouble of this kind what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—NELLIE E. BRITTINGHAM, 609 Calverton Rd., Baltimore, Md.

It is only natural for any woman to dread the thought of an operation. So many women have been restored to health by this famous remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after an operation has been advised that it will pay any woman who suffers from such ailments to consider trying it before submitting to such a trying ordeal.

"No, I should say they're not," Aunty Rose observed with grimness. "Far from it. It's a fact! I wouldn't have believed it if I hadn't seen it with my own eyes. Holding hands in there like a pair of— Well, do you know what it means, Carolyn May?"

"That they love each other," the child said boldly. "And I'm so glad for them!"

"So am I," declared the woman, still in a whisper. "But it means changes here. Things won't be the same for long. I know Joseph Stagg for what he is."

"What is he, Aunty Rose?" asked Carolyn May in some trepidation, for the housekeeper seemed to be much moved.

"He's a very determined man. Once he gets set in a way, he carries everything before him. Mandy Parlow is going to be made Mrs. Joseph Stagg so quick that it'll astonish her. Now, you believe me, Carolyn May."

"Oh!" was the little girl's comment.

"There'll be changes here very sudden. 'Two's company, three's a crowd,' Carolyn May. Never was a truer saying. Those two will want just each other—and nobody else.

"Well, Carolyn May, if you've finished your supper, we'd better go up to bed. It's long past your bedtime."

"Yes, Aunty Rose," said the little girl in muffled voice.

Aunty Rose did not notice that Carolyn May did not venture to the door of the sitting room to bid either Uncle Joe or Miss Amanda good-night. The child followed the woman upstairs with faltering steps, and in the unlighted bedroom that had been Hannah Stagg's she knelt at Aunty Rose's knee and murmured her usual petitions.

"Do bless Uncle Joe and Miss Amanda, now they're so happy," was a phrase that might have thrilled Aunty Rose at another time. But she was so deep in her own thoughts that she heard what Carolyn May said perfunctorily.

With her customary kiss, she left the little girl and went downstairs. Carolyn May had seen so much excitement during the day that she might have been expected to sleep at once, and that soundly. But it was not so.

The little girl lay with wide-open eyes, her imagination at work.

"Two's company, three's a crowd." She took that trite saying, in which Aunty Rose had expressed her own feelings, to herself. If Uncle Joe and Miss Amanda were going to be married, they would not want anybody else around! Of course not!

"And what will become of me?" thought Carolyn May chokingly.

All the "emptiness" of the last few months swept over the soul of the little child in a wave that her natural cheerfulness could not withstand. Her anchorage in the love of Uncle Joe and Miss Amanda was swept away.

The heart of the little child swelled. Her eyes overflowed. She sobbed herself to sleep, the pillow muffling the sounds, more forlorn than ever before since she had come to The Corners.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Journey.

It was certainly a fact that Amanda Parlow immediately usurped some power in the household of the Stagg homestead. She ordered Joseph Stagg not to go down to his store that next day. And he did not!

Nor could he attend to business for several days thereafter. He was too stiff and lame and his burns were too painful.

Chet Gormley came up each day for instructions and was exceedingly full of business. A man would have to be very exacting indeed to find fault with the interest the boy displayed in running the store just as his employer desired it to be run.

"I tell you what it is, Car'lyn," Chet frankled, in confidence. "I'm mighty sorry Mr. Stagg got hurt like he did. But lemme tell you, it's just givin' me the chance of my life!

"Why, maw says that Mr. Stagg and Miss Mandy Parlow'll git married for sure now!"

"Oh, yes," sighed the little girl. "They'll be married."

"Well, when folks git married they allus go off on a trip. Course, they will. And me—I'll be runnin' the business all by myself. It'll be great! Mr. Stagg will see jest how much value I be to him. Why, it'll be the makin' of me!" cried the optimistic youth.

Yes, Carolyn May heard it on all sides. Everybody was talking about the affair of Uncle Joe and Miss Amanda.

Every time she saw her uncle and her "pretty lady" together the observant child could not but notice that they were utterly wrapped up in each other.

Miss Amanda could not go past the easy chair in which the hardware dealer was enthroned without touching him. He, as bold as a boy, would seize her hand and kiss it.

Love, a mighty, warm, throbbing spirit, had caught them up and swept them away out of themselves—out of their old selves, at least. They had eyes only for each other—thoughts only for each other.

Even a child could see something of this. The absorption of the two made Aunty Rose's remarks very impressive to Carolyn May.

A week of this followed—a week in which the trouble in Carolyn May's heart and brain seethed until it became unbearable. She was convinced that there would soon be no room for her in the big house. She watched Aunty Rose pack her own trunk, and the old lady looked very glum, indeed. She heard whispers of an immediate marriage, here in the house, with Mr. Driggs as the officiating clergyman.

Carolyn May studied things out for herself. Being a child, her conclusions were not always wise ones.

She felt that she might be a stumbling block to the complete happiness of Uncle Joe and Amanda Parlow. They might have to set aside their own desires because of her. She felt vaguely that this must not be.

"I can go home," she repeated over and over to herself.

"Home" was still in the New York city apartment house where she had lived so happily before that day when her father and mother had gone aboard the ill-fated Dunraven.

Their complete loss out of the little girl's life had never become fixed in her mind. It had never seemed a surety—not even after her talks with the sailor, Benjamin Hardy.

Friday afternoon the little girl went to the churchyard and made neat the three little graves and the one long one on the plot which belonged to Aunty Rose Kennedy. She almost burst into tears that evening, too, when she kissed Aunty Rose good night at bedtime. Uncle Joe was down at the Parlows'. He and Mr. Parlow actually smoked their pipes together in harmony on the cottage porch.

Aunty Rose was usually an early riser; but the first person up at The Corners on that Saturday morning was Carolyn May. She was dressed a full hour before the household was usually astir.

She came downstairs very softly, carrying the heavy bag she had brought with her the day she had first come to The Corners. She had her purse in her pocket, with all her money in it and she had in the bag most of her necessary possessions.

She washed her face and hands. Her hair was already combed and neatly braided. From the pantry she secured some bread and butter, and, with this in her hand, unlocked the porch door and went out. Prince got up, yawning, and shook himself. She sat on the steps to eat the bread and butter, dividing it with Prince.

"This is such a beautiful place, Princey," she whispered to the mongrel. "We are going to miss it dreadfully, I s'pose. But then— Well, we'll have the park. Only you can't run so free there."

Prince whined. Carolyn May got up and shook the crumbs from her lap. Then she unchained the dog and picked up her bag. Prince pranced about her, glad to get his morning run.

The little girl and the dog went out of the gate and started along the road toward Sunrise Cove.

The houses had all been asleep at The Corners. So was the Parlow cottage when she trudged by. She would have liked to see Miss Amanda, to kiss her just once. But she must not think of that! It brought such a "gulpy" feeling into her throat.

Nobody saw Carolyn May and Prince until she reached Main street. Then the sun had risen and a few early persons were astir; but nobody appeared who knew the child or who cared anything about her.

At the railroad station nobody spoke to her, for she bought no ticket. She was not exactly clear in her mind about tickets, anyway. She had found the conductor on the train coming up from New York a kind and pleasant man and she decided to do all her business with him.

Had she attempted to buy a ticket of the station agent undoubtedly he would have made some inquiry. As it was, when the train came along Carolyn May, after seeing Prince put into the baggage car, climbed aboard with the help of a brakeman.

"Of course, if he howls awfully," she told the baggageman, who gave her a check without question, "I shall have to go in that car and sit with him."

There were not many people in the car. They steamed away from Sunrise Cove and Carolyn May dabbled her eyes with her handkerchief and told herself to be brave.

The stations were a long way apart and the conductor did not come through for some time. When he did open the door and come into the car Carolyn May started up with a glad cry. It was the very conductor who had been so kind to her on the trip up from New York.

The railroad man knew her at once and shook hands most heartily with her.

"Where are you going, Carolyn May?" he asked.

"All the way with you, sir," she replied.

"To New York?"

"Yes, sir. I'm going home again."

"Then I'll see you later," he said, without asking for her ticket.

The conductor remembered the little girl very well, although he did not remember all the details of her story.

He was very kind to her and brought her satisfying news about Prince in the baggage car. The brakeman was nice, too, and brought her water to drink in a paper cup.

At last the long stretches of streets at right angles with the tracks appeared—asphalt streets lined with tall apartment houses. This could be nothing but New York city. Her papa had told her long ago that there was no other city like it in the world.

She knew One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and its elevated station. That was not where she had boarded the train going north, when Mr. Price had placed her in the conductor's care, but it was nearer her old home—that she knew. So she told the brakeman she wanted to get out there and he arranged to have Prince released.

The little girl alighted and got her dog without misadventure. She was down on the street level before the train continued on its journey downtown.

At the Grand Central terminal the conductor was met with a telegram sent from Sunrise Cove by a certain frantic hardware dealer and that telegram told him something about Carolyn May of which he had not thought to ask.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Home of Carolyn May.

It was some distance from the railroad station to the block on which Carolyn May Cameron had lived all her life until she had gone to stay with Uncle Joe Stagg. The child knew she could not take the car, for the conductor would not let Prince ride.

She started with the dog on his leash, for he was not muzzled. The bag became heavy very soon, but she staggered along with it uncomplainingly. Her dishevele appearance, with the bag and the dog, gave people who noticed her the impression that Carolyn May had been away, perhaps, for a "fresh-air" vacation, and was now coming home, brown and weary, to her expectant family.

But Carolyn May knew that she was coming home to an empty apartment—to rooms that echoed with her mother's voice and in which lingered only memories of her father's cheery spirit.

Yet it was the only home, she felt, that was left for her.

She could not blame Uncle Joe and Miss Amanda for forgetting her. Aunty Rose had been quite disturbed, too, since the forest fire. She had given the little girl no hint that provision would be made for her future.

Wearily, Carolyn May traveled through the Harlem streets, shifting the bag from hand to hand, Prince pacing sedately by her side.

"We're getting near home now, Princey," she told him again and again.

Thus she tried to keep her heart up. She came to the corner near which she had lived so long and Prince suddenly sniffed at the screened door of a shop.

"Of course, poor fellow! That's the butcher's," Carolyn May said.

She bought a penny afternoon paper on a news stand and then went into the shop and got a nickel's worth of bones and scraps for the dog. The clerk did not know her, for he was a new man.

That Strict Confidence.

We were listening (and who wouldn't?) to two women talking at each other on a Fifth avenue bus in the more or less busy city of Gotham, and in so doing we heard one of the master paradoxes. One woman said to the other: "Why, she told me in strictest confidence only the other day."—New York Sun.

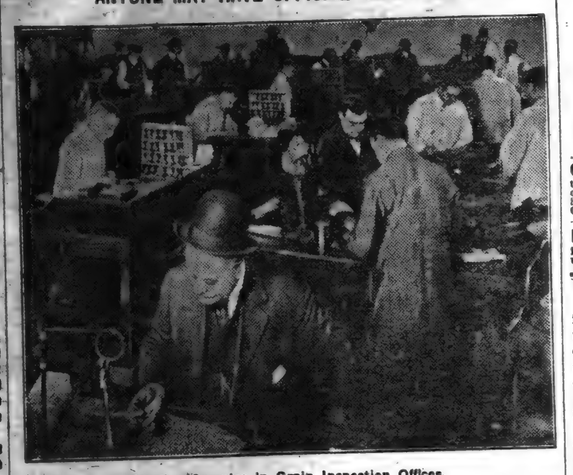
ANYONE MAY HAVE OFFICIAL GRAIN GRADE



Grading Samples in Grain Inspection Offices.

OFFICIAL GRAIN GRADE IS GIVEN

All That Is Necessary Is to Submit Sample of Required Volume in Prescribed Form.

WHEAT AND CORN STANDARDS

Principal Benefit to Farmer Is That He Gets Correct Grading by Disinterested Inspector as Basis for Prices.

The farmer, the country buyer, the miller, or anyone else may have samples of wheat or shelled corn inspected and graded by grain inspectors licensed by the secretary of agriculture. All that is necessary is to send a sample of the required volume in the prescribed form and to pay the inspection fee.

No such service was ever rendered until within the last few months. So far official standards have been established for wheat and shelled corn only. Proposed grades have been published for oats, and it is probable that official standards will be established for the 1919 oat crop.

Grading by Inspectors.

Grading is done only by grain inspectors licensed by the secretary of agriculture. The officers of federal grain supervision, bureau of markets, do not inspect and grade wheat or shelled corn except when an appeal has been entertained on a grade assigned by a licensed inspector, or where a dispute as to uninspected grain has been referred to the secretary of agriculture.

The offices of the federal grain supervision, however, may furnish the names of the nearest inspectors with advice as to taking and forwarding samples, to persons who desire to have samples inspected. There is no prescribed fee for grading samples, but the secretary has specified that fees shall be reasonable. This information can be obtained from the nearest federal grain inspector. The list of offices is given in the accompanying box.

When grade is assigned on samples submitted, the inspection certificate covers only the sample, it being specifically set out that such grading does not apply to the entire lot from which the sample was taken. Unless the inspector himself or an official sampler takes the sample from the lot of grain, he is not permitted to certify further than as to the sample submitted. In most cases of contemplated purchase however, it probably happens that the interested parties agree that the sample is representative and that the grade given shall apply to the entire lot of wheat or shelled corn.

Size of Samples.

The size of the sample submitted and the manner of forwarding it are important factors in enabling the inspectors to determine the correct grade. The sample should be representative of the entire lot of grain. It should be at least two quarts in volume, one and an eighth pints of which should be placed in an air-tight container and the balance enclosed in a clean cloth sack. Samples sent in paper bags, cigar boxes or other makeshift containers cannot be properly graded.

The principal benefit to the farmer is that he has a correct grading by a disinterested inspector as a basis for prices. The same advantage accrues to the miller or dealer, with the additional feature of the check upon his own grading if he has sought to establish the grade in accordance with federal standards.

Law Benefit Agriculture.

"The last five years," says the annual report of the secretary of agriculture, "have been especially fruitful of legislation and of its practical application for the betterment of agriculture.

"Special provision was made for the solution of problems in behalf of agriculture, embracing marketing and rural finance. The bureau of markets, unique of its kind and excelling in range of activities and in financial support any other similar existing organization was created and is rendering effective service in a great number of directions. Standards for staple agricultural products were provided for and have been announced and applied under the terms of the cotton futures and grain standards acts. Authority to license bonded warehouses which handle certain agricultural products was given to the department, and the indications are that, with the return of normal conditions, the operation of the act will result in the better storing of farm products, the stabilization of marketing processes, and the issuance of more easily negotiable warehouse receipts.

"The agricultural extension machinery, the greatest educational system ever devised for men and women engaged in their daily tasks, had very large and striking development. The federal aid road act, approved shortly before this country entered the war, resulted in legislation for more satisfactory central highway agencies in many states and the systematic planning of good-roads system throughout the Union. Today each state has a highway authority with the requisite power and with adequate funds to meet the requirements of the federal measure.

"The federal reserve act, which has benefited every citizen through its influence on banking throughout the Union, included provisions especially designed to assist the farming population. It authorized national banks to lend money on farm mortgages, and recognized the peculiar needs of the farmer by giving his paper a maturity period of six months.

"This was followed by the federal farm loan act, which created a banking system reaching intimately into the rural districts and operating on terms suited to the farm owners' needs. This system began operations under the troubled conditions of the world war, and its activities were impeded by the vast changes incident to the entry of this country into the conflict. But, in spite of these difficulties, it has made remarkable headway, and there is little doubt that after the return of peace, its development will be rapid and will more than fill the expectations of the people."

FROM The BOYS in SERVICE

Bendorf, Germany.
January 6, 1918.

My dear Parents:

Come take a trip with me from Brest to Bendorf.

First I will tell you something about our division, "The Famous Second," which consists of the 9th. and 23rd. Infantry, 5th and 6th. Marines, 2nd. Engineers, 12th., 15th., and 17th., Artillery. The casualties suffered by us on all fronts were (officers 724, men 23,-929,) total 24,753. This is 10% of the casualties suffered by the A. E. F. The total prisoners captured by the 2nd. division was 12,026, this is one fourth of the enemy captured by the A. E. F. The guns captured, which is enemy artillery, was 343, this is one fourth of the total guns captured by the A. E. F. How do yov like this record? No other division can come up to this standard. Where other outfits had failed we were called and the results were always successful.

Got into Brest (that is in the Bay) on the 27th., of December 1917, went to land and entrained the morning of the 31st. Left Brest at 1:30 o'clock. Reached Camp DuValdehon at 8 P. M., January 2nd. I have told you several times about these French cars how small they are but forty men were supposed to ride in one car. Well maybe we didn't enjoy the trip as well as we sho ld as long as Uncle was paying for it, but sure was cold and tiresome. But anyway we got there. Took our drilling here for modern warfare. Was here until March 19th., (Valdehon is about 2o miles from Bessancon) 19th. entrained at Bessancon at 4 P. M. 20th., there we were in a rest camp until 23rd. which time we left for Woimbey (Tryon Sector.) March 31st. Easter, turkey and pie for supper. April 3rd., first casualties in our regiments. This was my first time under shell fire. Here was where I was recommended for Croix De Guerre. May 8th. received my Croix De Guerre. Left Woimbey May 13th., hiked to Rivigney where we entrained in the evening of the 19th. Went through the factory district of Paris and detrained at Mem 3:50 P. M. The 21st. started for Lattainville at this place we stayed ten days. June 1st. entrained at Gisors, detrained June 2nd. at Ormey-Villers. On this ride we passed Chaumont, Chars, Pontoise, St. Denis going north Dammartin and up to Ormoy-Villers.

Hello ——Are you with me yet? Well let's get away from here. This is no place for us, (the 2nd., division,) no fighting here. On horseback we passed Betz, Aey, Lizy and stopped near Cochere for the night June 3rd., left here this morning for Chateau Thierry front. This is a good place for us. Ha. Ha. The doughboys got there two days before the artillery but on the morning of the 4th. we had our guns in position. Here was our order, "Don't leave the gun." As you remember this was the turning point of the war. We had an observatory in no-man's-land here. Gee, that was a great thing, not many artillery regiments have an O. P. in no-man's-land. I spent a Sunday night there myself. It only lasted two days and two nights. The enemy got next to it and cleaned it out for us.

We left this sector to the 26th. division and started for the drive at Soissons July 14. I never saw traffic in any city like it was there. Of course it had been raining for several days and the roads were muddy. Tanks, trucks, wagons, guns and even dead horses in the ditch. It took me about eleven hours to go the seven kilometers, the first day after we got up there. You see we put up in a woods about ten kilometers back of the line the night of the 16th. Then the next day I took a detail of men to make a dugout for the telephone men and officers. This drive started about four o'clock the morning of the 18th. In making this move we hiked two days and two nights without stop. We were joined here by the 1st., division and famous Moroccan division or (the ear and head hunters.)

Relieved here by the British and the 32nd. division and went back a few kilometers entrained going to Pont-a-Mouson Sector to receive and drill replacements. From here to the St. Mihiel, at this place our objective was Thiacourt, but they didn't relieve us when we got there so made many more kilometers. As soon as we were relieved the French, under Gen. Gourand, called for the famous 2nd. division to help take Blanc Mont. in the Champagne front, so here we go doing our bit under French command, (by the way this is the third time we were under French command, the first front a t Soissons and Champagne.) This was the old Hindenburg line and the line had been the same since the war started. I guess I tried to make a picture of this land here in a letter some time ago. It was sure Hell, if you please. They had a system of trenches that was a bird, dugouts in the side of the trenches forty feet deep, (here is where I got my first cooties, sleeping in German dugouts.) The attack opened with the French on each flank. But what would hold the 2nd. divis on, "nothing," so we, the artillery, put over one of those famous creeping barrages of ours for several hours a steady bang, bang. We lost many men but after two days fighting, hard fighting it was too, we gained our objective but the French couldn't keep up. Our doughboys held their ground for two more days so to give the French a chance to catch up. The Germans had been ordered to hold their ground at any cost, but they couldn't do it. This is Gen. Gourand command to his men "For the honor of the French arms don't let the Americans out flank you." The enemy put up counter attacks repeatedly, but without success. We helped send them back of the Aisne river which was better than thirty kilometers, then left them to the French and 36th. division. Now we thought sure we would get a big rest. We were even told that we wouldn't do any more fighting until next spring. So here we go back for more replacements, when the order caught us to go into the Argonne to help the Americans a little. The 1st. division had gained some few kilometers then turned it over to the 42nd. division (the rainbow) so they lost a little ground. We blew into possession the night of the 30th. of October. The morning of November 1st. the fight was on, 2nd. division against Frits. We all helped start the ball rolling here 1st., 42nd, 2nd., and a few other divisions. The first day we gained nine kilometers taking several small towns one being Bussany. Second and third days fifteen kilometers and three more days had driven them back of the Meuse river and opened the way to Sedan.

We were the cause of the German High Command to make this statement for the first time, "Our lines have been broken." We also made the last attack of the war the night before the armistice was granted and gained seven kilometers across the Meuse.

This is in brief some of the records of the 2nd. division known as the "Famous American Shock Troops."

As you see we took places where other troops failed. I am not only saying this because I belong to the division but it is true and what I have said can be backed up. No other division has been on as many fronts as we. The fronts in order as we went to them are as follows: The Verdun Sector, Chauteau Thierry, Soissons, Pont-A-Mouson, St. Mihiel, Champagne and Argonne. A record that cannot be beat.

Must close,

Biliousness

WHEN you have a bilious attack your liver fails to perform its functions. You become constipated. The food you eat ferments in your stomach instead of digesting. This inflames the stomach and causes nausea, vomiting and a terrible headache. Take Chamberlain's Tablets. They will tone up your liver, clean out your stomach and you will soon be as well as ever. There is nothing better.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Paulding, Paulding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

Move Against County Agent

A movement is on foot to abolish the office of County Agent, by some who are circulating petitions over the county. Howard W. Mounts of Garrett says:—

"The point is that the only harm these petitions can cause is to embarrass the county agent in his work. The government established this office and it is as permanent as the county clerk's office, or any other county office. The office will not be closed, in spite of all its opponents can do.

"The government, through the department of agriculture, established the county agent's office in this county after the public had provided a fund of $500 to prove the people were interested. The government pays $1,080 a year toward the agent's salary and the state pays the balance, $720. The government also pays the salary of the county home demonstrator. In addition, the government gives the agent the franking privilege and furnishes the franked envelopes. The county pays for clerk hire and other office expenses, not exceeding $1,500 a year. Do you realize how much that raises the tax levy of a farmer with eighty acres of land? About thirty cents a year!

The editor has been associated with our county agent in a number of instances and has accompanied him to many meetings and we find that the counties that have endeavored to co-operate with him, are well pleased with the results. It is impossible for him to call on each farmer and talk things over, but Mr. Arehart would call if the farmer would put in a call for him, and besides do all in his power to meet the needs of the farmer, and we believe that if every farmer will investigate carefully they will become convinced that this institution is well worth maintaining and supporting.

All of the children in the schools at Auburn are to have their eyes tested because many children in school are considered slow in their work while their difficulty often comes from bodily defects. The same is true in all schools and should be carefully looked after by the teachers as medical attention cannot be provided.

It is trimmed below the waist with brass buttons, and the lower sleeve is linked together with brass buttons. There is a cravat of the material. On the right is a tunic suit for a young girl, of red wool jersey trimmed with bands of cream-colored jersey embroidered in red and black. The large hat is of cream jersey faced with red straw and trimmed with a red cord and tassel.

GAY FROCKS FOR THE YOUNG GIRLS

Increased Brilliancy of Wardrobes in Honor of Returning Soldiers.

New York.—America has not yet found a fitting name for the girl of sixteen. The English call her the "flapper," and the Anglo-Saxon world uses the expression, whether or not it approves of it. In America it is not liked, but no one has risen to put this type of young person in a niche and give her a name.

And she is quite important, proclaims a fashion writer. She deserves a strong appellation—a quick, vibrant, significant name for her class, her type and her virility. We have buried under the cobwebs of oblivion the "sweet sixteen" phrase. Booth Tarkington has made the one word "seventeen" classify, at least for America, the youth of our land, with its awkward, stumbling tendencies toward manhood, its budding emotionalism sternly suppressed through pride and shame, its desire for girls' company, and its contempt for that desire. But if we applied the single word "sixteen" to that gay, ecstatic, poised, self-assured, highly educated, superintelligent, adventurous class of tall, slim things that spread over the land, usually setting the pace for their mothers' fashions, it would be puerile.

It is difficult to be pessimistic if one keeps close to the side of girls of that age. Their outlook on life, their faith in themselves and the world, their unbounded ability to find pleasure unaided by anyone else, renews youth in middle age. They are no longer creatures held on a leash. They are rarely asked to obey; they are constantly consulted by their mothers, and they usually take an intelligent part in the management of their home, its social environments, its financial expenditures, its ideals, and its ambitions.

Granting these things—and everyone does grant them who has had any close companionship with the typical American girl, it is natural that her interest in clothes should be strong, and not only strong but usually exceedingly good. She dresses herself, as a rule, better than her mother can dress her.

Many Cater to Girls.

Working downward—or upward, rather—through these psychological phases of girlhood among the Anglo-Saxons, and especially the North Americans, one finds the reason for the establishments of many successful dressmaking houses which cater to young girls. Few of the great establishments here or abroad neglect the "flapper." From the time she is twelve until she makes her bow to society at eighteen she is catered to by houses that expend much ingenuity and brilliancy of workmanship on her especial type of clothing.

Two of the important financial successes in the dressmaking world of New York started with the schoolgirl. Fifth avenue houses which cater to dowagers and sensational young matrons have determined this year to place young girls' clothes in their salons. Youngsters who try to look like Mary Pickford are often used as mannequins, but they have not been a success, because the sixteen-year-older doesn't wish to look like Mary Pickford. She wouldn't be caught with curls down her back, a sweet smile, and chubby legs below a short skirt. She often produces the most extreme fashions, which her older sister and her mother copy. She is the type, one might claim, for all the fashions of the civilized world today. That's a sweeping statement, but just run over the gamut of fashionable clothes for the last five years and see if you don't come to that conclusion. The bobbed hair, the short skirt, the round neck, the baby sleeves, the sashes, the buttoned-down-the-back frocks, the short coats—these are the fashions that have ruled the world and have begun in the schoolroom.

What She Wears Today.

The youngster of sixteen chooses materials for her own clothes that are the same as those worn by her elders, whom she envies little these days, because she rules a world of her own, that everyone acknowledges. She doesn't have to dress herself up in long clothes and high head dresses and play that she is old. She has been known to grudgingly loan some of her clothes to her young married sister for an especially smart affair. She likes georgette crepe for her evening gowns, and therefore she wears a good deal of it. Velveteen has found her approval, and she orders school frocks and afternoon dance frocks in it.

She has a tailored suit which was especially designed for her judgment, and which she accepted. It has a coat that covers her hips, is cut on a straight line with a slight flare out at the back, and does not fasten. She ties it at the neck with a stiff cravat made of ribbon, peltry, Chinese brocade, or the material of the coat. She may have six or eight of these cravats in her bureau drawer, or she hangs them on the electric light at the side of the bureau, in imitation of her brother. She likes her coat unfastened, for she never admits that she is cold. She has just escaped the hardening process of bare legs, bare arms and a cold nursery. The winter has no terrors for her and she dresses as she wishes, no matter what the thermometer.

Her Furs and Hats.

The "flapper" who is tall enough to carry a big fox around her neck is sure to come into possession of one. When her judgment goes against a big animal she chooses instead a coachman's collar of sealskin or squirrel, which rises about her face like the calyx of a flower and spreads downward over her shoulders, hugging them in the flat Victorian manner.

She has appropriated for her own use many accessories in peltry that the older woman has neglected. She knows the cleverness of a fur cravat and the medieval splendor of a fur girdle.

And, by the way, the "flappers" have no idea of being left out of the procession of those wearing Victory clothes. They have no shrinking about their costumery and what it signifies; they are instinctively psychological, and they wish to proclaim the side they took in the war by every manner of clothes that the dressmakers and milliners have thrown into the fashions to proclaim the day of peace.

So the "flapper" wears red—bright glowing, triumphant red. She doesn't hesitate a second in choosing several garments of it. She is not weighted down by the anxieties of her elders that certain colors must be taboo because age is drawing a map on the face.

Temperance Notes

(Conducted by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.)

SOBRIETY AS WAR'S BY-PRODUCT.

Two men were seated together at a Long Beach lodge meeting. One was in uniform. The other was not. He in uniform, pointing a remark, tapped the other on the arm and as a result discovered that the other man had been "shot," for service overseas.

"Why in thunder are you entering the service?" the volunteer sailor asked. "You have a wife and kid to take care of and you are doing your level best here at home, as much good as you could do in France. Why you?"

"I'll take my answer out of your own mouth," replied he of the sore arm. "'Why you?'"

"Well, if you must know the whole truth," replied the navy volunteer, "I enlisted partly on the same account as you, patriotism and the desire to do my very best for Uncle Sam; but I must confess an ulterior motive. I wanted to stop drinking. I tried, over and over again, in civilian life, but I couldn't get away from the gang, so I failed as often as I tried.

"I took my soaked carcass over to the training station and they have made me over. I'm sober and safe, with no more desire for the red stuff or even the hops. It's worth it all to me, aside from my satisfaction at being privileged to serve Old Glory, that I have escaped the fate of a chronic booze-fighter. This is going to be a great country, when this war is over, with another sort of manhood at the helm; manhood that is loyal to the core and sober."—Long Beach (Cal.) Press.

PROHIBITION IN UTAH.

Salt Lake City's chief of police, J. Parley White, says:

"From my own observation I can truly state that employers, employees and the community have benefited immeasurably from prohibition. Hitherto, important business interests have been handicapped by the apathy and negligence of their employees. A state of indifference, due directly to indulgence in liquor, prevailed. All that has disappeared and instead we find the workingmen today in a brisk frame of mind, eager to perform their work and thoroughly capable of doing so.

"But the best results obtained from prohibition are observed in the children of the city. School teachers with whom I have conversed on the situation tell me that a large percentage of their pupils formerly considered defectives have become the leaders of their class. The reason for their poor work and lack of application was attributed directly to under-nourishment and an absence of the little things of life that make children happy and contented. With prohibition in force the children are receiving more care from their parents, and as a consequence devote themselves to their school tasks with more energy and derive greater pleasure from their work."

IN DRY MICHIGAN.

"Evidences of the great social uplift that has resulted since May 1, are apparent everywhere. Prohibition has so materially reduced the number of arrests that peace officers can no longer live on their fees," said Sheriff Charles Berry in his address before the Michigan Association of Sheriffs, chiefs of police and prosecuting attorneys, as reported in the Christian Science Monitor. He further emphasized his remarks by pointing out that last year his county, which includes Grand Rapids, had 150 prisoners; this year it has 15. With this statement as a basis, the convention adopted a resolution to urge the legislature to grant increased fees. It is only a few months ago that all state institutions in Michigan were overcrowded; now they do not know what to do with the empty jails.

The people agree with Sheriff Berry that "The adoption of prohibition is the greatest single accomplishment that Michigan has to her credit."

JUDGE QUITS LAW FOR MILLINERY.

Gary (Ind.) men are getting so good since the town went dry that they are giving their money to their wives instead of paying the customary fines after the regular Saturday night celebrations.

At least Justice of the Peace John A. Gross has so figured it out. For four years Justice Gross had a lucrative business in dispensing the law and collecting therefrom. But most of his business was wiped out along with the liquor.

Recently he opened a millinery establishment. "Guess the women must have the money now that used to go for fines and I'll have to get it away from them," he mused.—Exchange.

PROHIBITION DECREASES DIVORCES.

According to Judge Ben M. Terrell of the Sixty-seventh District court, the number of divorces being granted in the district courts in Fort Worth has diminished fully 50 per cent since prohibition has been in effect. He adds: "At least two-thirds of the divorce cases are attributable either directly or indirectly to whisky. The decrease shown would be greater were it not for the fact that we have to deal with many hasty and ill-considered soldier marriages."

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

A SURPRISE PARTY.

"I've got an idea," said Peter Gnome.

"Are you going to tell me about it?" asked Billie Brownie.

"Of course," said Peter Gnome. And Billie Brownie hugged Peter Gnome and they both grinned.

"We want to hear about it too," said the other gnomes.

And the brownies all said, "We too want to hear about it."

"All right," said Peter Gnome. "But I would like to get hold of all the fairies, except the Fairy Queen, and I would like to get hold of all the elves and the Bogey family and the Oaf family, old Mr. Giant, Witty Witch—in short I would like to get hold of all our friends."

"We'd like to help," came some whispers.

"Fine," said Peter Gnome. "The Breeze Brothers would like to help. Well, will you tell all our friends that we'd like to have them come to a big meeting this afternoon at three o'clock?

"Tell the fairies they must see that the Fairy Queen does not come." So the Breeze Brothers went off in all directions and at three o'clock promptly every one arrived for the great big meeting.

"What did you say to the Fairy Queen?" asked Peter Gnome of the fairies. "Did she ask you where you were going?"

"No," said Fairy Princess Joy, "we spoke to our old friend the Dream King. We told him that you were arranging some sort of a big meeting and that for some very good and most excellent reason you did not want the Fairy Queen to come.

"The Dream King said he would help us, so he sent some of his messengers, the Nap Cousins, to the Fairy Queen.

"The Nap Cousins arrived at noon, promptly at twelve o'clock and they bowed low before the Fairy Queen.

"'Fairy Queen,' they said, 'his majesty, the Dream King, wishes you would do him the great honor to come and call upon him this afternoon at two o'clock in Dreamland where he is the ruler.'

"The Fairy Queen said that she would be very glad to talk to the Dream King and she told the Nap Cousins to tell him so.

"'I fancy the Dream King wants to know of some more nice children to give dreams to this very night,' the

"We'll Giver Her a Shower of Valentines."

Fairy Queen told us. And we're sure the Dream King will really have plenty to talk about.

"The Fairy Queen left at two o'clock, so we got off very easily without her seeing us."

"Fine, that's fine," said Peter Gnome. "That is all right. Now I will tell you all of my plans.

"Tomorrow is Saint Valentine's day, and I think it would be so nice to give the Fairy Queen a Valentine Surprise party."

All the gnomes, brownies, elves, fairies, old Mr. Giant and Witty Witch were delighted when they heard Peter Gnome's plan.

"We'll meet here at dawn tomorrow, and every one of us will give a valentine for the Fairy Queen. We will each make up our own valentine and when I say one, two, three, and when old Mr. Giant blows his horn we'll give her a shower of valentines, so that the earth will be covered with them."

They all hurried home to make their valentines. They wrote verses to the Fairy Queen, telling her how much they loved her.

Old Mr. Giant's valentine was very large, and as the valentine of a giant should be, and he wrote in enormous letters this verse:

Dear, beloved, most noble queen,
Our wondrous fairy you've always been;
And now I write a little line,
To ask if you'll be my Valentine?

Witty Witch's verse went like this:

It's very hard for a poor old witch,
To write a verse without a hitch;
But this is merely a little sign
To show I want you as my Valentine.

And the next day, at dawn, they gave the Fairy Queen a Valentine shower as a surprise party and oh, how happy she was. But, what do you suppose? She had a valentine for each of them as her surprise to her loving friends.

Unbounded Prosperity Ahead of Western Canada.

Opportunity Beckons Settlers of All Kinds—"With the Golden Wake That Marked the Way the Happy Reapers Went"—James Whitcomb Riley.

The war having been brought to a favorable conclusion more attention can now be given to the agricultural and industrial development of Western Canada, which were checked by the troublous times of the past four years. Now that these are over, the proper development of the country will be continued.

True, much agricultural progress has been made during this time. Crop production has been greatly increased, the number of live stock has steadily grown, and with each succeeding year the dairying and wool industries have become more important. But despite this forward march, many phases of development have been held in check. The activities of farmers, too, have been greatly hampered by shortage of labor, and, under the circumstances, what they have achieved can only be described as marvelous.

Excepting those industries closely allied to agriculture, such as butter and cheese manufacture, industrial activity in the Prairie Provinces has been almost at a standstill. And even in these branches extensions have been strictly limited to those of urgent necessity. Building has been considerably curtailed, especially in the towns and cities, though many commodious and up-to-date dwellings, barns and other buildings have been erected by farmers in the country. Indeed, the amount of building farmers have done is one of the outward signs of their prosperity; but considerably more of it would have been done had not the more important work of food production received priority in the labor available. Railway construction work has been almost entirely suspended.

With more help available and the use of the labor-saving devices that have been adopted during the last few years great advances in the agricultural development of Western Canada might be looked for even if no new settlers were expected; but the coming of thousands of prospective settlers who have hitherto been deterred only by the unsettled conditions from making their homes in this last great West will give a considerable impetus to every phase of agriculture in these Prairie Provinces.

Hand in hand with the development of agriculture, there will be a renewal of industrial activity. For the establishment of such industries as sugar refineries, canneries, and many other industries for the utilization of the products of the land, as well as for the extension of the already important industries of butter and cheese manufacture, are splendid opportunities. Mining, lumbering, quarrying, the manufacture of clay products are also a few industries capable of considerable growth, and to which greater attention can now be devoted.

To provide accommodation for present business requirements alone would keep the building trade busy for a long time, but with further development in the cities it is impossible to foresee any slackness in any branch of this trade. And the number of farmers whose needs have outgrown their present accommodation and who have been awaiting an opportunity to replace their buildings by larger and more modern ones is considerable and constantly increasing. Municipal works will be gradually resumed, and the railways have much work in contemplation.

All this points to a period of great prosperity in Western Canada—agricultural and industrial prosperity. The former is the more important, for on it the latter depends. Being primarily an agricultural country, Western Canada will probably pass through the readjustment period with little difficulty.

There is no reason to believe that farming will be less remunerative than it has been in the past; there are, on the other hand, many good and sound reasons for believing that the returns will be as large as ever. One thing is certain: Intelligent farming on the fertile prairies of Western Canada, requiring as it does the smallest possible capital outlay compared with that required to get a start in older settled countries, will continue to be one of the quickest and surest ways to independence that can be followed by the average man.—Advertisement.

The Many Mysteries of Nature

BY L. W. BOWER, M. D.

You can take an onion seed and a pansy seed, and plant them side by side in the same spot of ground. In one case, you get an onion, with its peculiarly strong odor, and in the other you get a flower of rare beauty. You can plant a poppy seed and get opium (a dangerous, habit-forming drug), or you can plant a rhubarb seed and get something that helps constipation. No scientist, living or dead, can explain these mysteries of Nature. Behind the invisible life germ in each seed is hidden the deep secret that nobody understands. Everything growing out of the ground seems intended for some use in establishing natural conditions. Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., long since found out what is naturally best for women's diseases. He learned it all through treating thousands of cases. The result of his studies was a medicine called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine is made of vegetable growths that nature surely intended for backache, headache, weakening drains, bearing-down pains, periodical irregularities, pelvic inflammations, and for the many disorders common to women in all ages of life. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is made of lady's slipper root, black cohosh root, unicorn root, blue cohosh root and Oregon grape root. Women who take this standard remedy know that in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription they are getting a safe woman's tonic so good that druggists everywhere sell it.

Favorite Prescription should have the full confidence of every woman in America because it contains no alcohol and no narcotic. Dr. Pierce knew, when he first made this standard medicine, that whisky and morphine are injurious, and so he has always kept them out of his remedies.

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 9

JETHRO'S COUNSEL.

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 18:1-27.

GOLDEN TEXT—Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ. —Gal. 6:2.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Luke 10:1; Acts 13:1-3; Rom. 16:1-24; I Cor. 12:12-31.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Moses chooses helpers. Memory Verse—"Come thou with us and we will do thee good."

JUNIOR TOPIC—Working together. Memory Verse—I Cor. 3:9.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—Team work in religion.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—Co-operation in the work of the kingdom.

I. Jethro's Visit to Moses (18:1-6).

1. The occasion (v. 1). Upon receipt of the news of the marvelous deliverance of the Israelites from the Egyptians Jethro went out to meet Moses.

2. The object (vv. 2-4). It was to bring to Moses his wife and children. When God called him to go to Egypt to deliver his people Moses did not deem it wise to take with him his wife and children, therefore left them with his father-in-law. Now that God had wrought so wonderfully it was deemed wise for his family to join him.

3. The place (vv. 5, 6). At Mt. Sinai, where the Israelites were encamped.

II. Moses' Reception to Jethro (18:7-12).

Moses honored him not only as his father-in-law, but as the priest of Midian. Jethro, though outside of the covenant people, evidently retained traditions of the true God, as Melchizedek before him did. It seems to have been a case of mutual affection and esteem. Moses rehearsed to Jethro the wonders which God had wrought through him, and Jethro. (1) "Rejoiced for all the goodness which the Lord had done unto Pharaoh and the Egyptians for Israel's sake" (v. 9). (2) Blessed the Lord (v. 10). (3) Confessed the supremacy of the Lord (v. 11). (4) Offered sacrifices to God (v. 12).

III. Jethro's Counsel (18:13-26).

1. The occasion thereof (vv. 13-18). The day after Jethro came to Moses he observed how completely Moses' time was taken in judging Israel. When he saw the greatness of the task he inquired as to why he was doing the work all alone. Jethro was a shrewd man—he saw that a wise administration of affairs would make a division of labor. Moses explained to him that his task was not merely a matter of judging, but of teaching the statutes and laws of God to the people. Jethro recognized Moses' motive, but insisted that the method was not a good one, as it would result in the wasting away of his strength. Many times one wastes his strength in doing that which others could do so that he is unable to do the more important things.

2. Jethro's plan (vv. 19-23). (1) Moses to be unto the people Godward —to bring their causes unto God and teach them the ordinances and laws, to show them the way wherein they must walk, and the work which they must do. (2) Suitable men should be provided as rulers over thousands, hundreds, fifties and tens (v. 21). All great matters should be disposed of by Moses and all subsidiary matters should be adjusted by these judges.

3. Qualifications of these subordinate judges (v. 21). (1) "Able men," that is, men of strength. They must be men of such intellectual power as would enable them to understand the problems presented, and of such will power as to execute the judgments rendered. A strong man is one who knows his own mind and is faithful to it. (2) "Such as fear God." This is the basis of true strength. Only those are fit to judge and rule men who recognize the rule of God over their lives. The true statesman is the man who gives God the rightful place in his life. The one who really trusts and fears God can be trusted to administrate the affairs of men. (3) "Men of truth." The one who really trusts and fears God must himself be a lover of the truth. He must be willing to follow after the truth at any cost. His nature must be open to the truth. (4) "Hating covetousness." He must be a hater of unjust gain. The man who is to be a ruler of the people must be free from the suspicion of following his profession because of personal gain. The one set to do such work should be able to show clean hands.

IV. Moses Accedes to Jethro's Counsel (18:24-26).

This common sense advice met a response in Moses' heart. He recognized that God was speaking through Jethro. After all, the knowledge and fear of God was wider than the chosen people. According to Deuteronomy 1:9-18 the people selected the judges and Moses appointed them.

GERMANY MUST PAY

Boche Entitled to No More Sympathy Than Any Criminal.

WRECKED CITIES AND LIVES

Many Girls in Lille Are Mothers of Babes Whose Fathers Are Germans—Punishment Cannot Be Too Severe.

By WRIGHT A. PATTERSON.

When a robber breaks into your house and steals that which he can carry away and then destroys that which he cannot steal, you expect that when caught he will be punished both for what he stole and for what he destroyed.

So it is with Germany.

The German army, acting under the orders of the German government, stole everything it could carry away in the invaded sections of Belgium and France, and what it could not carry away it destroyed.

I was in the city of Lille very shortly after the retreating Germans had evacuated it. Before the war Lille had been one of the busiest and most prosperous manufacturing towns in all of Europe. Its great factories, producing linens, cottons, velvets, ribbons and woolen goods, had patrons all over the world, and its sugar and chemical plants supplied much of France with these products.

For four years, during the German occupation, the factories of Lille had been idle. They are idle today, and they will be idle for many months to come. The reason is that Germany stole the machinery from all of these factories, or in the very few cases where actual theft was not possible or profitable, they destroyed the machinery. The people of Lille told me that this theft of machinery had been carried to such lengths that the Huns even invaded the homes of the people and took from them their sewing machines.

Germans Fathers of Their Babes.

The German army looted this beautiful French city of more than 200,000 population. It stole not alone the machinery from its factories and its homes, but even its people. French mothers told me of how 8,000 young girls of twenty-two years of age and under had been carried away at one time. They told me of another time when more than 10,000 boys of from fourteen to twenty years of age had been carried away to Germany. When I was in Lille on October 22 it had very few inhabitants except old people or very young children. Among the few exceptions were girls of from seventeen to twenty years of age nursing babies, which they told me were the offspring of German fathers, and the pathos of the situation of those young girls is something I shall never forget.

And this condition at Lille is the result of German ambition for world domination, an ambition fostered among the German people through years of training, the ambition of a people whose boast has been that "might makes right."

I am sorry to say I have heard people attempt to excuse this looting of Lille on the ground that it could be shown to be a war measure—the need of Germany for this machinery and for the labor of the people deported to Germany. But these people cannot find any reasonable excuse for the war itself, a war that was started only for the selfish purpose of a selfish people.

Shall Germany not pay for this condition at Lille? Shall she not pay for the machinery that was carted away or destroyed, for the people that were deported? Shall she not pay for the years of idleness of these factories, for the years of idleness of the employees denied the opportunity of profitable employment? Shall she not pay for the markets that have been destroyed and which it will take years to re-establish if it can ever be done?

No, Germany will never be able to pay for all of it. She will never be able to pay, and no sum of money could pay for the anguish of those mothers who were forced to stand aside and watch their sons and daughters carried away into virtual slavery. She will never be able to pay for the anguish, the wrecked lives, of those girls with German babies. Money will not pay for these things, but money and work can in some small degree pay for the wrecked factories and ruined business of the city of Lille, and through the payment of this money and labor the people of Germany will learn that might is not right, and that war for the purpose of gratifying a selfish ambition is not profitable.

Why Lille Was Not Destroyed.

The German retreat from Lille came near the close of the war when the Germans knew they were beaten and they would have to pay, and for that reason the city itself was not destroyed. But the fact that it was not destroyed is but another evidence of German selfishness rather than of virtue.

There are hundreds of cities and towns that have been destroyed after being looted as Lille was looted; hundreds of towns where even the material of which they were built has been carried away that it might be used in the construction of fortifications behind which the German army might defend itself and its ill-gotten gains. For all of these Germany should pay now, and for generations to come.

No sympathetic pardon board should sit on Germany's case. No sentimentalist should have a voice in deciding her punishment. There is no more, if as much, reason for leniency in fixing the punishment of Germany than there would be for leniency in fixing the punishment of the ruthless slayer of your son or your daughter. Germany must pay all that the present and future generations can pay, and she will even then have expiated her crime only in a small degree.

Any Demand Not Too Great.

I am sure I know the desire of the American people for fair play in all things, including the settlement with Germany. They would not wish to do the German people an injustice in the demand for reparation. As I rode mile after mile over the devastated fields of Belgium and northern France, as I passed through town after town that had been destroyed because of a mad craze for loot and world domination, I felt that could the American people but see the things I was seeing, they would feel, as I felt, that any demand that might be made could not be unfair. Could they have seen the ruins of the beautiful cities of Ypres, Armentieres, La Bassee, Peronne, St. Quentin, Noyon, Lens and many hundreds of others, they, too, would say with one voice: "Germany must pay."

The boche will appeal, and in fact is appealing, for the sympathy of the world, but the boche is entitled to just the same degree of sympathy that the world accords to any other criminal. We feed and clothe the criminal that he may live to expiate his crime, and we will feed and clothe the German people that they may live to expiate their crime, and that after they have done that they may again be entitled to the place in the world's civilization that only those who are cleansed may occupy. Germany is entitled to nothing more than this, and this is fair play.

BRITISH HONDURAS HOT SPOT

Steam-Heating Plants and Heavy Overcoats Never in Demand in That Part of the Earth.

British Honduras keeps its Christmas in the shade. From its position, pretty near to the equator, and wedged in between Yucatan and Guatemala, it it is always hot in that country, and especially so when it is midwinter with us. It is a land of costly woods, innumerable semivarieties of them, and of lovely flowers. It is one of the native homes of hummingbirds and gorgeous butterflies. In fact, nature is rather more gaudy than neat in that part of the world. English people settled there from Jamaica as long ago as in 1657, but it was not until over a century later that treaty arrangements with Spain made their position secure as still inhabitants of the British empire. A good deal of the country is marshland but the Cockscomb mountains which run into Honduras from Guatemala are in places 2,000 feet high, and wherever really dry land is found the ground is wonderfully fertile. Mahogany grows there to perfection; so does the logwood used for dyeing, also bananas, plantains and coconuts. The capital, Belize, is the chief port of entry, and the center of the rubber industry, which depends upon regularly tended plantations.

Acid-Stomach Ruins Health of Millions

Besides those painful attacks of indigestion; that awful bloated, lumpy feeling after eating and downright stomach misery that you who have experienced it know so well; besides disgusting belching, food-repeating, sour stomach and distressing heartburn —besides all this, ACID-STOMACH undermines the health and saps the strength of millions.

If you don't get rid of those stomach miseries there is no telling where your stomach troubles will end, for it is a well known scientific fact that many serious ailments have their start in an acid-stomach.

Start now—this very day—to get rid of your stomach miseries. Take EATONIC—the wonderful remedy that absorbs the excess acid from the stomach and brings INSTANT relief. You simply have no idea how much better, stronger and brighter you feel at once. There can be no further excuse for you to allow acid-stomach to wreck your health—pile up misery upon misery until you get to the point where you feel down and out and that life has lost all its joys. Remember, just as acid-mouth ruins teeth, so acid-stomach ruins health.

Take EATONIC. It's good, just like a bit of candy and makes the stomach feel fine. You can then eat the things you like and, what is more, every mouthful you eat will count in creating power and energy. You'll feel so much better—have punch and pep—the power and will to do things and get results, and your stomach misery will be gone.

A Happy Social Event

On last Wednesday evening the Knights of Pythias entertained their families in the K. of P Castle Hall by inviting all to a potluck supper. There were about one hundred present. A short program was arranged consisting of songs and recitations. After the program was disposed of the chefs came in and invited the guests to file past the commisary window and secure a handout which consisted of ice cream and cake. After lunch those present who desired engaged in games of various kinds and spent a a very enjoyable evening. Such social events help to create good fellowship and gives people an opportunity to visit and know their friends.

Harry Wyatt Died Saturday

AUBURN STAR

Harry Wyatt of Harrison street, twenty-eight years of age, died Friday night after a week's illness. He was first sick with influenza, which soon developed into pneumonia and although careful nursing was given him and several physicians endeavored to save his life, he passed away about 11 o'clock.

Mrs. Wyatt is also seriously ill with influenza-pneumonia, as well as their six months old son, George Sidney. Mr. Wyatt had been a chronic asthma sufferer and this was a handicap to him in his fight for life.

He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Wyatt of Midway street, and a brother of Clarence Wyatt of North Jackson street.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon with Rev. S. E. Slater in charge.

Mr. Wyatt carried $2,000 in life insurance. Less than a month ago he filed his application for $1,000 in addition to the $1,000 policy he has carried for several years. The policy wys only completed a few days ago and was at the local agent's office at the time of his death Friday.

Clean Up Is Ordered

The Government is asking for a spring billboard cleaning before the Victory Liberty Loan campaign begins. Hundreds of thousands of tattered old posters from former patriotic drives still cling to walls, windows and fences in the Seventh Federal Reserve district.

It is recommended now by the heads of the district and state loan organizations that citizens everywhere get their premises in order for the new loan. Great patriotic enterprise, it is pointed out, was displayed by the people in offering window space, bill boards, the walls of handsome new business buildings and other space for the posters of the various Liberty Loans and for the Red Cross, United War Work and other such campaigns. Positions such as no amount of money could buy for use by advertising agencies in the usual course of peace-time propaganda, it is explained, were offered free to the Government and to the semi-Governmental agencies helping to care for the armed forces. Property owners and tenants allowed their places of business and residence to be plastered over with these bills.

Now, however, the patriotic gift of this space will not be complete until all old posters have been removed and everything made ready for the reception of the new posters that are now being printed at Washington for distribution. Some ten million of these will be sent out to the various districts. It is greatly desired by the loan authorities that no trace of former literature be left to compete with the appeal of the Victory Liberty Loan posters. The old dirty posters have long since disappeared from the regular billboards, but thousands of them are still in evidence in empty store windows, on fences and building walls.

WELL-FILLED ICEHOUSE MEANS SUMMER SAFETY

Sour Milk and a Bitter Man—He Tried to Run a Dairy Without Ice.

LAST CALL FOR ICE HARVESTING

Fairly Safe Storage May Be Secured in Cellar, or Some Other Convenient Nook.

LIBERAL USE OF SAWDUST

Many Other Advantages Besides Keeping Milk Cool During Heated Term —There Appears to Be No Justification for Neglect.

Probably the greatest advantage from having a farm ice house properly filled is that the milk may always be kept cool. But there are a score of other advantages not to be ignored. Some of them pertain to things that may be classed as—summer luxuries?—no, summer necessities. Ice cream, iced tea, lemonade, buttermilk, iced watermelons, iced cantaloupes, iced fruits—every one of them an item in the summer diet that can be regarded as contributions to the health, happiness and prosperity of the family. Unless there is natural ice in the farm ice house, they are rarely to be had. Even if the head of the family is perfectly willing to bear the expense of buying artificial ice, the time is sure to come—in most cases, it comes frequently—when there is not time to get the ice out from town, times when everybody is busy in the harvest or hay field and when the familiar but disheartening plea of "let it wait till tomorrow" is heard and must be heeded.

Ice Relieves Suffering.

Indeed, it can be heeded with some degree of patience when the ice would mean only a more palatable dessert for dinner. But, on one of those hot harvest days, one of the men is brought in overheated from the field, or one of the children becomes suddenly ill of something that an ice pack would go a long way toward relieving. Such things seem to occur just at those times when the icebox is empty—and the need is so urgent that there is no time for going to town for ice. Unnecessary suffering is the inevitable result—inevitable except when there is on the farm an ice house filled from the pond or stream during the winter.

The harvesting of ice is so simple a matter that there appears no justification for its neglect by those who live in natural ice regions. Yet, the fact remains that many such do neglect it. Even for those who have not a regularly constructed ice house, there are possibilities. Ice may be stored and kept with a fair degree of success in the cellar, a corner of the woodshed, in any one of a score of nooks, to be found about every farmstead. Such storage places cannot be recommended for permanent use. They entail a much heavier loss by melting than do properly constructed houses. But, with the proper use of sawdust, planing-mill shavings or other cheap insulator, they can be made to keep ice through the summer. The United States department of agriculture goes so far as to say that, where ice is abundant and the cost of gathering it low, storage in makeshift places may be more economical than the building of scientifically constructed houses, and does not hesitate to recommend it as an expedient to serve until there is time for the construction of the right sort of house.

Thick Cakes Not Essential.

Of course, if the ice is to be available for next summer, there is no time for constructing houses now. This is nearly the last call for filling the houses already built—and for making use of such expedients as are possible on farms where there is no ice house.

The mild character of the early part of the winter, of course, has made the potential supply of ice less than usual, but the actual supply—much greater than will be gathered—is adequate for all needs. It is not necessary that ice be of any particular thickness. Six-inch ice is desirable, but it is not essential. Four-inch or even three-inch ice will serve every purpose that thicker ice could be made to serve. And it does not require weather very cold and long-continued to put a three or four-inch coat over the pond.

The department of agriculture recommends neighborly co-operation in ice harvesting. Two, three, or more families joining forces and using the same pond or stream, if convenient, can do the work much more easily and expeditiously than the working force of one farm alone ordinarily can do it. Also, when done by two or more families jointly, ice harvesting partakes of the nature of a picnic and the work is done without anybody thinking of it as a disagreeable task.

The cutting of ice is a very simple operation. The method recommended by the department of agriculture is to mark off the pond in rectangular figures of convenient size, then to saw out a strip from shore to shore and force it under the ice, leaving an open channel to the bank. Pieces as large as can be handled are then sawed out on either side, pulled ashore by men with ice hooks or by a horse on the bank, then loaded on the wagon or sled.

The method of storing varies. If the ice is to be stored in a properly constructed ice house with commercial insulation, little packing is needed. If a house not equipped with commercial insulation, or some other makeshift storage space is used, the ground should be covered with 12 inches of sawdust or planing-mill shavings before the ice is put in. A 12-inch space should be left between the ice and the walls and should be tightly filled in with sawdust or shavings, and a covering of 18 inches of sawdust or shavings should be placed over the ice.

Planing-mill shavings are preferable to sawdust, being more absorbent and not so much inclined to pack. Whether sawdust or shavings are used, care must be taken that the material is thoroughly dry.

ISN'T IT DISAGREEABLE TO HEAR—

Your best customer's patient complaint, "The milk was sour again yesterday."

The milk inspector's judicial declaration, "Your bacterial count is too high."

The factory manager's peremptory decision, "I can't make good butter out of this cream and I can't make good cheese out of this milk."

If they are disagreeable, don't listen to them. You don't have to.

The bacterial count is high, the milk is sour, the quality of butter and cheese is poor often because the milk or cream wasn't kept cool because there was no ice available, and there was no ice available because you let all of it melt where it froze instead of gathering it and putting it in your ice house.

Fill the ice house full of natural ice from the pond or stream. That will help to stop the disagreeable things that people say about your milk and cream.

Provide Farm Buildings.

It will be the part of good farming to provide the necessary buildings. As soon as labor can be had and building materials secured it will pay to shelter stock and save crops.

HOW AMERICAN HOG GROWERS MET WAR'S NEED

A Coming Herd of Porkers. They Produce Profits for Their Owner and Meat and Fats for His Country.

COUNTY AGENTS AID HOG RAISER

Remarkable Growth of Business in Cotton States as Well as in Other Sections.

LARGE GAIN SEEN IN 1918

Department of Agriculture Advises Conservative Policy in Production Until High Prices of Feed Are Overcome.

There are 75,587,000 hogs in the United States, according to recent estimates of the bureau of crop estimates of the United States department of agriculture. Of this number 34,776,000 are found in the six corn belt states of Iowa, Illinois, Nebraska, Missouri, Indiana and Ohio, while 24,052,000 porkers are in the 15 Southern states and the remainder are distributed over the other 27 states of the Union. Under present conditions the South ranks second only to the corn belt as the leading pork producing section of the country. The remarkable fact that the growth of the hog business in the cotton states, as well as in many other sections of the country where the development has been rapid during the last five years, is that the progress has been the direct result of the untiring efforts of county agents to popularize pork production.

Last year at least 2,485 counties had the service of an agricultural agent and in every locality where conditions were favorable for hog raising, these agents devoted their efforts to increasing the hog population to meet the increased demand for meat and fats brought about by the war.

County Agents' Work.

An example of the county agents' work to increase pork production is shown in 17 counties of southern Alabama. Not a single carload of hogs was shipped to market from these counties during 1912-1913. This was before the county agent got in his work. During the year ending April 1, 1918, these 17 counties marketed 2,352 carloads of hogs.

County agents in Mississippi have been getting results in their work to enlarge the swine industry. In 1914 this state exported 7,244 hogs while in 1917 it sent 88,730 fat porkers to the market, an increase of 1,224 per cent. An increase of corn production was necessary to develop the hog supply and the county agents have been boosting this source of fattening feed. In 1900 North Carolina raised 84,000,000 bushels of corn, while in 1918 it harvested 64,365,000 bushels, which enabled the state to fatten 1,599,000 hogs. In Georgia approximately 29,475,000 bushels more corn were produced in 1918 than in 1909. Other Southern states have made similar records in increasing corn and pork yields.

Agent Is Versatile Helper.

While working to increase pork production, county agents have shown how pork could be produced economically; how, by fighting disease, particularly cholera, much loss could be prevented; and how, by proper selling, producers could dispose of their animals to the best advantage.

County agents in Pennsylvania, working through farm bureaus, have conducted numerous demonstrations in the feeding of hogs, in which they showed methods worked out by experiments for making cheap gains. These demonstrations taught many hog raisers how to save at least one-half of the grain feed bill in raising hogs by providing green feed throughout the growing season.

Saves Wheat With Hogs.

In a certain section of Montana, nearly 50 acres of choice wheat were beaten down by a hailstorm just a few weeks before harvest. It looked like a total loss, but the county agent called a meeting of the farm bureau and told the members that the wheat could be saved if hogs could be secured to clean up the fields. The county agent was then authorized to go "hog hunting" and as a result he secured 2,300 head which were put to work salvaging the damaged wheat.

In many localities the limiting factor in hog raising is easy access to market. County agents are solving this question by inducing farmers to market hogs co-operatively, thus greatly reducing the expense to each farmer. In Utah recently more than 100 farmers supplied 18 carloads of hogs from sections 85 to 90 miles from a market shipping point. The hogs were brought in wagons and even automobiles to the shipping point and were there handled under the supervision of county agents. Similar work is being done by county agents or through farmers' organizations in many parts of the country.

THE HOG SITUATION

A conservative policy with respect to increasing the number of swine until the relative shortage and high price of feed are overcome is the recommendation of the United States department of agriculture, recently made in a statement on American agricultural production in 1919. In summarizing the hog situation the department reports that the number of swine fell from 65,620,000, the high point in 1911, to 58,933,000, the low point in 1914; and under the stimulus of war demand and a record corn crop in 1917 the number increased to 70,978,000 on January 1, 1918. Reports indicate that the number on farms on January 1, 1919, was 75,587,000, or an increase of 6.5 per cent.

The number of swine per capita of population in 1911 was 0.679 of one animal. On the same basis there should be 72,474,000 on farms in 1919.

Exports of pork products fell from 1,678,000,000 pounds in the fiscal year 1899 to 707,000,000 in 1910, and rose 1,692,000,000 in 1918. Although definite data are lacking, reports indicate a considerable reduction in the number of swine in Europe. A representative of the food administration reports a reduction of 25 per cent in the United Kingdom, 12½ per cent in Italy and 49 per cent in France. However, in estimating probable demand in Europe for American pork products certain factors must be borne in mind; namely, (1) large stocks now on hand in the United States, and (2) the rapidity with which the number of swine can be increased in Europe. Another factor of importance is the relatively large proportion of lard in the exports of this country, amounting to about 50 per cent of all pork products exported in the five-year period from 1910 to 1914, and about 200 per cent more than the total quantity of beef exported. Exports of lard amounted to 481,000,000 pounds in 1914, 476,000,000 pounds in 1915, 427,000,000 pounds in 1916, 445,000,000 pounds in 1917, and 892,000,000 in 1918. All reports emphasize the shortage of fats and oils in Europe at the present time. No shipments to Germany and Austria have been included in the exports of lard from the United States since 1914. However, prior to the war, Germany was our second largest customer, taking 146,000,000 pounds in 1914, or about 30 per cent of our total lard exports. The foreign demand for lard is likely to be heavy during the present year.

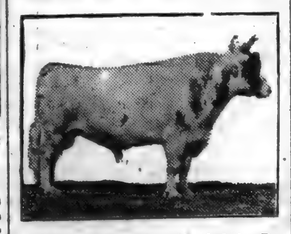
DAIRY FACTS

TO ELIMINATE SCRUB BULLS

Interesting Figures Brought Out by Department of Agriculture in Several Sections.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That the need of pure-bred bulls is urgent in many parts of the country is evident from the facts brought out by the United States department of agriculture's study of eight districts in the states of Iowa, Minnesota and Massachusetts in which there were no associations. In this survey information was obtained regarding 1,219 farmers owning 817 bulls whose average value was $76. Had the owners of these cheap bulls been properly organized the same investment would have purchased the necessary bulls at an average of $283. On the farms mentioned nearly four times as many bulls were used as would have been required under proper organization. The farmers were therefore feeding four bulls when they should have been feeding only one.



Pure-Bred Bulls Are Needed to Develop Profitable Dairy Herd.

Data from one of the first bull associations organized under the direction of the department of agriculture illustrate this very well. Before the association was formed the bulls in use had an average market value of $89. The average price paid by the association for registered bulls was $240. Price does not always correspond to value, yet as the bulls were carefully selected the price in this case is doubtless a fair index of true worth. In this association each farmer's investment for a share in a good registered bull was $14 less than his former investment in an animal of inferior breeding and doubtful merit.

Actual first-cost figures from other co-operative bull associations are even more encouraging. In one association having more than 100 members the original cost to each member was only $23. The members already have had the use of good pure-bred bulls for four years and probably will have their use six years longer without additional cost other than for maintenance. Another association with more than 50 members has had the use of good pure-bred bulls for more than seven years at an average investment of less than $25 a member, with prospects of being able to use them for three or four years more. Practically all dairymen desire to raise pure-bred cattle, but comparatively few can afford individually to purchase such bulls as are needed to develop a profitable pure-bred herd. The bull association overcomes the difficulty, and the money saved can be used toward the purchase of registered females.

When questioned regarding the value of co-operative bull associations, 150 farmers in Maryland, Michigan and Minnesota estimated that the use of bulls belonging to the organization increased the value of the offspring in the first generation from 30 to 80 per cent, with an average of 65 per cent. Usually in business transactions in which there is a probability of great gain there is a possibility of heavy loss, but in bull associations the chances of profit are excellent, with little probability of loss. The investment is so small and the chance for herd improvement so great that the net returns greatly exceed the small original investment.

HIGH PRODUCING DAIRY COW

Animal Is Delicate and Well-Balanced Piece of Machinery—Good Shelter Is Important.

A high-producing dairy animal is a delicate and well-balanced piece of machinery, and consequently she cannot continue normal production if she is exposed to severe winter weather. It is therefore essential that the discomforts incident to cold weather be eliminated if possible. The comfortable cow will repay in milk the necessary labor for her protection. Dairymen as a rule are more careful with their cows than the average farmer who merely produces the milk for family use.

DAIRY COWS REQUIRE SALT

Best Plan to Give Small Quantity in Feed and Place Rock Salt in Boxes in Yard.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The dairy cow requires an ounce of salt a day, and while she should be given all she needs, she should not be forced to take more than she wants. It is best, therefore, to give only a small quantity in the feed and to place rock salt in boxes in the yard.

Carolyn of the Corners

—18—

They ventured along their block. The children all seemed strange to Carolyn May. But people move so frequently in Harlem that this was not at all queer. She hoped to see Edna or some other little girl with whom she had gone to school. But not until she reached the very house itself did anybody hail her.

"Oh, Carolyn May! Is that you?"

A lame boy was looking through the iron fence of the areaway. He was the janitor's son.

"Oh, Johnny! I'm real glad to see you!" cried the little girl. Then she added more slowly, "We—we've come home again—me and Prince."

"You've growed a lot, Carolyn May," said the boy. "My pop and mom's away."

"I'll go up into Edna's flat, then," the weary little girl sighed.

"The Prices have gone away, too. They won't be back till tomorrow sometime."

"Oh!" murmured Carolyn May.

"But, say, I can get the keys to your flat. The water's turned on, too. Everything's all right up there, for Mrs. Price she sweeps and dusts it all every once in a while. Shall I get the keys?"

"Oh, if you will, please!" returned the relieved child.

The boy hobbled away, but soon returned with the outer-door key and the key to the apartment itself. Carolyn May took them and thanked him. Then she gladly went in and climbed the two flights to their floor.

She saw nobody and easily let herself into the flat. It had been recently aired and dusted. Every piece of furniture stood just as she remembered it.

"Oh, Princey, it's home!" she whispered. "This is our real, real home! I—I loved 'em all at The Corners; but it wasn't like this there!"

Prince perhaps agreed, but he was too deeply interested in snuffing at the package of meat scraps she had purchased for his supper to reply.

"Well, well, Prince," she said, "you shall have it at once."

Dropping the bag in the private hall, she went into the kitchen and stood on tiptoe to open the door of the closet above the dresser. Securing a plate, she emptied the contents of the paper into it and set the plate down on the floor.

In spreading out the paper she saw some big-type headlines on the front page:

ROMANCE OF THE GREAT WAR

The Experiences of This Newspaper Man Like Those of a Character in a Novel—Lost for Eight Months in the Desert—At the Mercy of Semi-savage Tribes, Man and Wife Escape at Last to Return in Safety and Health.

His Story Told to Beacon Reporter at Quarantine.

Carolyn May read no further. It did not particularly interest the little girl. Besides, she was very tired—too tired to think of her own supper. Had she read on, however, even her simple mind might have been startled by the following paragraphs printed below the heading of this startling story:

Their wonderful good fortune in escaping from the disaster that overtook the steamer on which they traveled and which was caught between the gunfire of a French battleship and two of a Turkish squadron can only be equaled by the chance which followed. Naturally, as a journalist himself, Mr. Cameron is prepared to tell the details of his remarkable adventure in the columns of the Beacon at a later date.

The boat in which they left the sinking Dunraven was separated in the night and fog from that of the other refugees and was carried by the current far to the south. In fact, they were enveloped by fog until they landed upon a stretch of deserted beach.

There was no town near, nor even an encampment of Arabs. But soon after their disembarkation and before the officer in command could take means to communicate with any civilized, or semi-civilized, place a party of mounted and armed tribesmen swooped down on the castaways.

These people, being Mohammedans, and having seen the battle the day before between the French and the Turks, considered the castaways enemies and swept them away with them into the desert to a certain oasis, where for nearly eight months Mr. John Lewis Cameron and his wife and the other refugees from the Dunraven were kept without being allowed to communicate with their friends.

Mr. Cameron was on furlough from his paper because of ill health. At the beginning of his captivity he was in a very bad way, indeed, it is said. But the months in the hot, dry atmosphere of the desert have made a new man of him, and he personally cannot hold much rancor against the Mohammedan tribe that held him a prisoner.

There was more of the wonderful story, but the sleepy little girl had given it no attention whatsoever. Prince had eaten and lain down in his familiar corner. The little girl had gone softly into her own room and made up her bed as she had seen her mother and Mrs. Price make it.

Then she turned on the water in the bathtub and took a bath. It was delightful to have a real tub instead of the galvanized bucket they used at Uncle Joe's.

She put on her nightgown at last, and said her prayer, including the petition she had never left out of it since that first night she had knelt at Aunty Rose's knee:

"God bless my papa and mamma and bring them safe home."

The faith that moves mountains was in that prayer.

Carolyn May slept the sleep of the wearied if not of the carefree. The noises of the street did not disturb her, not even the passing of the fire-department trucks some time after midnight.

Nor did nearer sounds arouse her. She had no knowledge of the fact that a procession of A. D. T. boys and messengers from the railroad company came to ring the bell of the Price's apartment. Later the janitor's family was aroused, but the little lame boy thought it would be better for him to say nothing about having seen Carolyn May and of having given her the keys.

So when in the early morning a taxi-cab stopped at the street door and a bushy-haired, troubled-looking man got out and helped a woman clad in brown to the sidewalk the janitor had no knowledge of the fact that Carolyn May and Prince were upstairs in the apartment that had been so long empty.

"And the Prices are away," said Uncle Joe in a troubled voice. "What do you think of that, Mandy?"

"Oh, Joe! where could the dear child have gone?"

"I haven't seen her," declared the janitor. "But I can let you into the flat. There's been lots of telegrams to Mr. Price in the night—and they weren't all yours. You're Carolyn May's uncle, ain't you?" he asked Mr. Stagg.

Uncle Joe acknowledged the relationship. "Let's go upstairs," he said to Amanda. "Now that I'm here—"

"Oh, dear, Joe!" almost wept Amanda, "could anything have happened to her in this big city?"

"Most anything, I s'pose," growled Joseph Stagg, following close on the janitor's heels.

The janitor's passkey grating in the lock of the private hall door started something that none of them expected. A startling bark echoed in the rooms which were supposed to be empty.

"Whatever is that?" gasped the janitor.

"It's Prince! It's her dog!" shouted Uncle Joe.

"The child is here!" cried Amanda Parlow, and she was the first to enter the apartment.

Prince bounded wildly to meet her. He leaped and barked. A cry sounded from a room beyond. Miss Amanda and Uncle Joe rushed in.

Sleepily, her face flushed, rubbing her blue eyes wide open, Carolyn May sat up in bed.

"Oh, Uncle Joe! Oh, Miss Amanda!" she said. "I—I was just dreaming my own papa and mamma had come home and found me here."

"My dear! My dear!" sobbed Amanda Parlow, dropping to her knees beside the bed.

"You're a great young one!" growled Uncle Joe, blowing his nose suspiciously. "You've nigh about scared ev'rybody to death. Your Aunty Rose is almost crazy."

"Oh—I'm sorry," stammered Carolyn May. "But—you—see— Uncle Joe! You and Miss Amanda are going to be happy now. Aunty Rose says 'twas comp'ny. So you wouldn't have room for me."

"Bless me!" gasped the hardware dealer. "What do you know about this child's feeling that way, Mandy?"

"I am afraid we have been selfish, Joe," the woman said, sighing. "And that is something that Carolyn May has never been in her life!"

"I dunno—I dunno," said Uncle Joe ruefully and looking at the little, flower-like face of the child. "How about Aunty Rose? How d'you s'pose she feels about Hannah's Carlyn running away?"

"Oh!" ejaculated the little girl.

"It may be that 'two's company and three's a crowd,' but you and Aunty Rose would be two likewise, wouldn't you, Carlyn May?"

"I—I never thought of that, Uncle Joe," the child whispered.

"Why, your running away from The Corners this way is like to make both Mandy and me unhappy, as well as Aunty Rose. I—I don't b'lieve Mandy could get married at all if she didn't have a little girl like you to carry flowers and hold up her train. How about it, Mandy?"

"That is quite true, Carolyn May," declared Miss Amanda, hugging the soft little body of the child tightly again.

"Why, I—I—"

Carolyn May was for once beyond verbal expression. Besides there was a noise in the outer hall and on the stairway. The door had been left open by the surprised janitor.

A burst of voices came into the apartment. Uncle Joe turned wonderingly. Miss Amanda stood up. Carolyn May flew out of bed with a shriek that startled them both.

"My papa! My mamma! I hear them! They're not drownd-ed! God didn't let 'em be lost in the sea!"

She was out of the room in her nightgown, pattering in bare feet over the floor. A brown man, with a beard and twinkling blue eyes, caught her up in his strong arms and hugged her swiftly—safely—to his breast.

"Snuggy!" he said chokingly. "Papa's Snuggy!"

"My baby! My baby!" cried the woman at whom Joseph Stagg was staring as though he believed her to be the ghost of his lost sister Hannah.

It was several hours later before a really sane thing was said or a sane thing done in that little Harlem flat.

"It's like a lovely fairy story!" cried Carolyn May. "Only it's better than a fairy story—it's real!"

"Yes, yes, it's real, thank God!" murmured the happy mother.

"And I'm never going away from my little girl again," added the father, kissing her for at least the tenth time.

"But what Aunty Rose is going to do I don't see," said Uncle Joe, shaking his head with real commiseration. "I've sent her a dispatch saying that the child is safe. But if we go back without Hannah's Car'lyn—"

"The poor soul!" said his sister. "I can believe that in her secret, subdued way Aunty Rose Kennedy is entirely wrapped up in Carolyn May. She will suffer if they are separated for long—and so abruptly."

"That's true," Miss Amanda said gently. "And Joe will feel it, too."

"I bet I will," agreed Joseph Stagg "But I have you, Mandy. Aunty Rose isn't going to have anybody. And for her to go back alone into her old house—for she won't stay with us, of course—" he shook his head dolefully.

"Let us write to Aunty Rose," said Hannah Cameron briskly. "We want her here. Why, of course we do! Don't we, Carolyn May?"

"Why!" cried the child delightedly, "that's just the way out of it, isn't it! My! how nice things do come about in this world, don't they? Aunty Rose shall come here. You'll like her ever so much, papa. And Prince will be glad to have her come, for she always has treated Princey real well."

Prince, who had been standing by with his ears cocked, yawned, whined and lay down with a sigh, as though considering the matter quite satisfactorily settled.

Carolyn May, having climbed up into her father's arms, reached out and drew her mother close beside her.

THE END.

MADE OCCASION FOR FESTIVAL

Travelers in Northern Russia Fittingly Celebrate the Crossing of the Arctic Circle.

On the trains running northward across north Russia, the crossing of the arctic circle is made the occasion for a festival similar to that which tourists used to enjoy on shipboard when crossing the equator. The train makes a stop of several hours in the midst of a snow-covered waste on the shores of the White sea. The passengers stretch their legs and take a constitutional out over the frozen surface of the White sea, while a picnic dinner is being prepared.

The exact spot where the railroad crosses the circle is probably not determined with scientific accuracy, but the men who built the railroad apparently agreed on an approximate location, and this is marked with a suitable inscription. At this point also the railroad builders have left a slight gap, probably not more than a quarter of an inch, between the rails, so that, as passengers often notice, "when the train passes over the circle there is a distinct jolt and jar."

The Whippoorwill.

The favorite hunting ground of the whippoorwill is about the edges of a forest, or over the tops of the trees, where the big, fat moths are to be found at night. It makes no noise as it flies, because its feathers are soft and fluffy, but as it darts past you sometimes it utters a sort of groan. The nighthawk occasionally gives out to a loud "yawk" as it flies through the evening air.

VOTES TO ABOLISH HIGH COURT CLERK

Senate Passes Resolution by Vote of 31 to 11.

GOVERNOR GIVEN VETO POWER

Measure Providing for New Registration System Is Introduced in Upper Branch of the Legislature.

Indianapolis.—The senate of the Indiana state legislature adopted the resolution to abolish the office of the clerk of the supreme court, 31 to 11. The resolution, which is one of the Republican platform measures, originally provided that the governor would select the clerk, but now places the power in the hands of the legislature to provide the method of selection.

Another of the platform measures giving the governor power to veto separate appropriation bills, was passed by the senators, 30 to 12.

Senator Alldredge introduced a measure providing for a new registration system. The system provides for the registration of precincts to be held on primary day and on the twenty-ninth day before election. Registered voters are to be given a card, similar to a draft card, which entitles them to permanent registration providing they do not move from the residence that is registered.

The feature of a recent session in the house was the contesting of the majority report of the committee which would prohibit all sports, baseball games and horse races, where an admission is charged on May 30 and fixing a fine on violators of the proposed law. The majority report was for passage of the bill and the minority report for indefinite postponement. The majority report was sustained by the representatives by a vote of 75 to 19.

The senate finally passed the shotfirers' bill, which has been before every session of the state legislature for a number of years. The bill was passed 29 to 16 and as it now stands will require the mine operators to employ the shotfirers instead of the miners as heretofore.

The constitutional amendment authorizing the classification of counties for registration was passed, 40 to 0.

One of the most important measures to come before the house of representatives was the bill to compel the county commissioners to give money out of the treasury to help carry the debts of the county fairs. This measure, after a spectacular fight, was defeated 54 to 33.

The measure concerning the circuit courts of the Sixty-sixth judicial circuit, introduced by Representative Smith, passed, 39 to 0.

The house passed the Abrams resolution to establish a two-platoon system in fire departments. The system would be optional, not mandatory.

Good Seed Corn This Year.

As a result of the widespread interest in getting good seed, 66,964 of the 175,000 men in the 73 counties selected their seed last September and October from standing stalks and stored it properly in a dry place, according to T. A. Coleman, state leader. This little piece of work will prevent a recurrence this spring of the 1918 disaster when the corn crop of the entire middle west was threatened by the seed shortage.

A total of 231,337 acres of wheat on 45,374 farms were grown according to methods suggested by the county agents. The results of this work was everywhere apparent in the state last harvest, men using better methods invariably showing larger yields.

Enough seed oats to sow 238,727 acres on 28,470 farms was treated with formaldehyde last spring to wipe out smut. This work, which was demonstrated in every county in the state, even where there was no agent, attracted unusual interest and aided in the oats yield considerably.

Various lines of crop improvement work was taken up, the agent inducing 2,727 farmers to treat their potato seed to prevent scab and other diseases which reduce the crop yield. These men planted 4,844 acres of "spuds."

Sunday Baseball Repeal Bill.

Senator Duncan of Putnam county introduced in the senate a bill to repeal the Sunday baseball law, and another providing for a state commission to censor moving pictures.

The bill providing for repeal of the Sunday baseball statute specifies also that Sunday motion picture exhibitions shall be unlawful.

The censorship bill provides for three members to be appointed by the governor, the chairman to receive $2,500 annually and the other two members $2,000 each. An annual appropriation of $30,000 for the work of the commission is included.

School Book Bill Probable.

A bill which will increase the cost of school books may be introduced in the house soon. Representative Herbert C. Willis of Waterloo says there is no profit but sometimes a loss under the present system. The law permits dealers to sell school books at an increase of 12 per cent over what they pay the publishers. The proposed bill would increase this to 16 per cent. The publishers also have been seeking more money in view of rapidly mounting costs and they may be heard from if a bill is introduced to increase profit to dealers.

Expects Locusts and Hoppers.

Indiana seems doomed to have two bug plagues this summer, according to Frank N. Wallace, state entomologist. Every indication is that the grasshoppers will be more numerous than they were last summer and in addition the seventeen-year locusts are due this year, he says.

If nature does not produce another bug to kill off the grasshoppers it will behoove the farmers and gardeners of the state to get busy with means of poisoning the hoppers or the enormous damage to crops that occurred in 1918 will be multiplied. Mr. Wallace estimates that 50 per cent of the clover crops in Indiana last year was destroyed by the grasshoppers. He said the farmers do not realize to what extent the grasshoppers have destroyed farm and garden products in the past.

Two forces have been active in destroying the grasshoppers, but during the last two or three years nature has not been diligent in applying these forces. The black blister beetle, or old-fashioned potato bug, is one of the deadly enemies of the grasshopper. The young beetles live on grasshopper eggs. The blister beetle has not appeared in large numbers for some time, however. Another force that keeps down the number of grasshoppers is a fungus growth that attacks the young grasshoppers and kills them. This disease has not made its appearance in recent years either.

Five Species of Birds Decrease.

Five species of birds that make Indiana their home are facing the fate of the wild pigeon, which 60 years ago was numbered by the millions, according to Walter Ratliff of Richmond, for 18 years a resident representative of the Indiana division of the biological survey of the United States. He has made a study of wild birds in the Whitewater district for the department. The five families of birds that are showing a loss, according to his observations, are: Purple martins, eave swallows, quails, bubo and hoot owls and yellow birds. Climatic conditions and carniverous birds are responsible for the disappearance of these species, Ratliff says. Mr. Ratliff's report for 1918 to the department will show an increase in number among the following birds: Bobolink, bluebird, song sparrow, indigo sparrow, Maryland yellow throat, cardinal, yellow-breasted chat, chicadee, Bewick's wren, warbler, brown thrashers, cowbirds and cedar waxwings.

The Constitutional Convention.

A bill providing for a referendum vote in November, 1920, on a call for a constitutional convention in Indiana has been drawn and will probably be introduced simultaneously in the senate and house of representatives. The 1917 session of the legislature passed a bill calling for a constitutional convention, but the supreme court ruled that a convention could be called only after a favorable referendum vote.

The Legislative Council of Indiana Women, the Civic league and the Indiana State Federation of Labor are said to be supporting the bill. Provisions of the bill relating to the manner of holding the election declare that if a majority of the people casting ballots favor the proposed constitutional convention the 1921 legislature shall provide for holding the convention and the manner of electing delegates.

Bill for Rural Fire Stations.

Farmers in Lake county will be provided with protection against fire almost as well as people in the cities, if a plan, which has been outlined by the newly organized Lake county farm bureau, is carried out. It is proposed to build and maintain a fire station in every farming neighborhood, equipped with motor-drawn ladder and chemical hose trucks, to be operated by volunteer fire companies.

The legislature will be asked to enact a law authorizing rural townships to establish such fire stations, and it is believed the adoption of the plan will decrease the number of fires and reduce the premium on farm fire insurance, which now is much higher than on property in the cities.

Suggests New Statehouse.

In connection with the proposal to create a new state plaza in the four city blocks between Meridian and Pennsylvania streets and New York and St. Clair streets, as a memorial to Indiana's solders in the war against Germany, Senator Franklin McCray of Indianapolis has expressed the idea that as a part of the plaza plan it might be advisable to consider the erection of a new state capitol building in the plaza.

Fuel Control Ends February 28.

Under instructions from Federal Administrator Garfield, Evans Woollen, state fuel administrator, announced that the authority of all county field administrators in Indiana will end February 28. The state office will be closed at the same time, but the administration will remain in power until further orders from Washington, D. C.

Bill to Penalize Bribery.

A bill intended to penalize bribery of purchasing agents has been drawn for presentation in the legislature by Senator Harry E. Negley. It is modeled on the so-called commercial bribery statutes in effect in a number of other states and would make it a punishable offense for an employee to receive any emolument of any kind to perform any act "within the limits of his ordinary employment." It has been suggested that the tipping practice probably would be covered by the measure.

Indiana News Tersely Told

Dr. Samuel S. Washburn, age eighty, one of the pioneer physicians of north central Indiana, died at his home in Lafayette.

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the Stillman department store at Muncie, entailing a loss estimated at $150,000. Three persons were injured.

Albert Daily of Knightsville was appointed assistant state mine inspector by the state industrial board. Daily succeeds William Moore of Terre Haute, who resigned.

Goshen ministers and undertakers are arrayed against a movement started several weeks ago to make Sunday funerals illegal. A proposed ordinance to that effect will likely be killed.

Window glass workers in Alexandria will leave for various points in Virginia to take employment with window glass companies. Word has been received here that the factories will operate on full time by the middle of this month.

Lafayette's city council has decided to fight the Fort Wayne & Northern Traction company's petition for a 6-cent street car fare in that city. This case comes up for hearing before the Indiana public service commission at Peru on February 20.

Two hours before he was to have been taken to the circuit court at Richmond for trial on a criminal charge, Bart Bell, age forty, was found dead in his cell at the Wayne county jail. Heart disease may have been the cause of his sudden death.

Twenty rabbit and cavie breeders have formed the Huntington Rabbit and Cavie Breeders' association and started arrangements for the holding of a show some time this spring. The breeders believe that the high price of other meats will make the rabbit industry profitable.

The Columbus post office is more than self-sustaining as shown by a comparison of receipts and expenditures. The total monthly pay roll at the office is $3,432, while the annual receipts are $54,000. Irwin A. Cox, postmaster, forwarded a surplus of about $2,000 a month to the treasury department.

Huntington county outside the city of Huntington had 14 cases of smallpox in January, according to the January report of Dr. C. W. Fry, county health commissioner. Dr. R. F. Frost, secretary of the city board of health, estimates that there are now 25 cases of smallpox in the city and county. The cases are light in character.

The Johnson County Shorthorn Breeders' association is planning the formation of a calf club in the county, the project to be financed by a bank, and boys between the ages of twelve and eighteen years to be eligible for membership. A herd tour is to be made by the association in May, when all Shorthorn herds in the county will be inspected.

New Albany is said to be the only city in the state that has enforced the state-wide prohibition law in regard to the elimination of words and signs that indicate the former presence of a place where liquors could be obtained. When the law became effective, in April, Col. C. L. Jewett of the city legal department, said that all signs must be painted out or removed.

Discovery was made of merchandise valued at several hundred dollars, hidden in a secret room under a straw stack on a farm northwest of Shelbyville, tenanted by Sam Price and his three sons, Richard, Alonzo and Otto, which is alleged to have been stolen by a gang. Sam, Richard and Alonzo Price are in jail on the evidence of Eldo Smiley, but Otto, a cripple, who Smiley alleges, was the ringleader, has escaped.

Finding of the tusk of a mastodon when workmen were excavating for a sewer in South Bend has led to the belief that other specimens may be found. A thorough search of the section will be made. The tusk was taken to Notre Dame university where it was pronounced a perfect specimen. It was given a treatment to preserve it from exposure to the air. University authorities declare the animal lived 6,000 years ago.

The city of Aurora reached its one hundredth anniversary January 30, but plans for a home-coming and centennial celebration were called off on account of the influenza epidemic, and the occasion will be celebrated later. The land on which the city is built was entered on September 18, 1804, by Charles W. Vattier, then living in Cincinnati, O. It was bought in 1819 by an association. The original plot of the city was laid out by Jesse L. Holman, trustee for the Aurora Association for Internal Improvements, and was recorded before James B. Dill, recorder of Dearborn county, on January 30, 1819. The name of Aurora was given the site.

The large stock of whisky and beer already in the basement of the county jail at Winchester was replenished bountifully when Sheriff Davisson went to Buena Vista and brought in 90 gallons of the beverage, which he found in a machine which had stuck in the mud at the road side.

Boys' and girls' club work in Indiana has had a healthy and continuous growth. Figures for St. Joseph county obtained by County Agent J. S. Berdner show that in 1916 51 members completed their projects. In 1916, 72 finished; 1917, 145, and in 1918 the number jumped to 200.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Paulding, Paulding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

A Terrible Ordeal!

Gravel and Kidney Stone Caused Intense Suffering—Doan's Brought a Quick Cure.

Edw. J. Turecek, 4332 Eichelburger Ave., St. Louis, Mo., says: "I was taken with a terrible pain across the back and every move I made, it felt like a knife being driven into my back and twisted around. It lasted about half an hour, but soon came back and with it another affliction. The kidney secretions began to pain me; the flow was scanty and burned like fire when passing. I had severe headaches and my bladder got badly inflamed, too, and I noticed little particles of gravel in the secretions. Doan's Kidney Pills had been recommended to me and I began their use. The first half box brought relief and I passed a stone the size of a pea. It was a terrible ordeal and afterwards a sandy sediment and particles of gravel settled in the urine. I got more of the pills and they cured me. The inflammation left and there was no more pain or gravel. I now sleep well, eat well and my kidneys act normally. Doan's Kidney Pills alone accomplished this wonderful cure."

Weekly Health Talks

Where Most Sickness Begins and Ends

BY FRANKLIN DUANE, M. D.

It can be said broadly that most human ills begin in the stomach and end in the stomach. Good digestion means good health, and poor digestion means bad health. The minute your stomach fails to properly dispose of the food you eat, troubles begin to crop out in various forms. Indigestion and dyspepsia are the commonest forms, but thin, impure blood, headaches, backaches, pimples, blotches, dizziness, belching, coated tongue, weakness, poor appetite, sleeplessness, coughs, colds and bronchitis are almost as common. There is but one way to have good health, and that is to put and keep your stomach in good order. This is easy to do if you take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is a wonderful tonic and blood purifier, and is so safe to take, for it is made of roots and herbs. Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., stands behind this standard medicine, and it is good to know that so distinguished a physician is proud to have his name identified with it. When you take Golden Medical Discovery, you are getting the benefit of the experience of a doctor whose reputation goes all around the earth. Still more, you get a temperance medicine that contains not a drop of alcohol or narcotic of any kind. Long ago Dr. Pierce combined certain valuable vegetable ingredients—without the use of alcohol—so that these remedies always have been strictly temperance medicines.

If piles are torturing you, get and use Pierce's Anodyne Pile Ointment. The quick relief it gives is hard to believe until you try it. If constipated Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be taken while using Anodyne Pile Ointment. Few indeed are the cases which these splendid remedies will not relieve and usually overcome. They are so good that nearly every drug store has them for sale.

GERMANY MUST PAY

Cruel Marauders Destroyed Fertile Farms and Fruit Trees.

MANY VILLAGES WIPED OUT

Stumps of Orchards and Graves of Thousands of Soldier Dead All That Remain of Once Flourishing Somme Fields.

By WRIGHT A. PATTERSON.

Can the American reader imagine transforming the fertile fields and prosperous villages and towns and cities in states like New York, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Texas, or any other of the rich agricultural states of the Union into an uninhabited desert?

That is what the Boche did to the Somme country of France. Before the war this section of France was looked upon as one of the most productive sections of the world. It was covered with fertile farms, splendid fruit orchards, thriving villages and towns and prosperous little cities.

An Idea of the Destruction and Devastation Left in the Wake of the Retreating Hun Hordes Is Shown in British Official Photograph.

Among its cities and towns were Amiens, Albert, Peronne, Hamel, St. Quentin, Roye, and many, many others that are today but heaps of debris, but which will figure prominently in the history of the great war.

This beautiful valley was interlaced with magnificent roadways, and each roadway lined with wonderful trees, many of them centuries old. Along these roadways stood hundreds of farm villages, each village housing from one hundred to five hundred happy, contented, thrifty people, who tilled the soil of their fertile acres and gathered the fruit of their orchards as their forefathers had done for many generations.

Upon the farms of this valley all of France depended for much of its foodstuffs, for its bread, its meat, its fruit, and year after year these fertile acres and these thrifty, industrious people had met the expectations of France in the matter of food production.

And then came the Boche with his dreams of conquest and of loot, and for four years this valley of the Somme was a battleground, with millions of men struggling backward and forward across it, those on the one side seeking the selfish purpose of world domination and destruction and those opposed seeking the preservation of freedom and liberty and world civilization.

No Evidence of Many Villages.

The American people, and especially those of the rich agricultural states of the North or South, of the East or West, can look about them at their own happy and prosperous communities and easily picture in their minds the Somme section of France before the war. But it is impossible to picture that same section as it is today. It is impossible to put into words the terrible devastation that has been wrought because of the ambitions and lust of a selfish people.

Every one of the two or three hundreds of thriving farm villages are gone, the great majority of them gone so completely as to leave no evidence that they ever existed; the material of which they were constructed carted away that it might be used in the construction of the fortifications of the famous Hindenburg line behind which the invaders sought refuge; its cities completely demolished, their magnificent churches and cathedrals, the work of the master builders of centuries ago, ground to powdered stone; the wonderful trees lining the roadways torn to splinters; the people of the valley homeless and scattered to the four winds.

Like many thousands of Americans, I had failed to believe possible all of the things we had been told were the work of the Boche. I had read with considerable reservation the description of the destroyed orchards where the fruit trees were said to have been deliberately cut down. But as I rode for miles and miles and miles over the Somme valley I could not fail to believe what my eyes saw, and there were the stumps of what had once been orchard after orchard from which France had reaped her harvest of fruit. Each stump was cut square with a saw, and each stump of almost exactly the same height, as though the depredator had measured each with a yardstick to ascertain the exact point of cutting.

Why Germany Should Pay.

Think of what it would mean should the Boche go through any one of our own agricultural states and commit the same terrible depredations. Would we not say that he should pay? And can we afford to say anything less for the farmer of France than we would say for the farmer of America? No, the American ideals of today, the ideals which the stricken peoples of Europe are striving to make their ideals, demand justice for all wherever and whoever they may be, and America can do no less than demand the same reparation for the French farmer that she would demand for the American farmer under such circumstances.

There is nothing living today on those Somme fields. There is nothing but stumps and the battered and torn remains of what were once prosperous towns and cities. These and the graves of almost countless thousands of soldier dead—some of them American soldier dead—are all that is left to indicate that man ever passed that way; all that is left to indicate that this great valley was ever more than the desert it now appears.

Boche Must Pay and Pay.

Along the edge of the Somme valley runs what is left of the Hindenburg line, designed with all the cunning of a master criminal as a barrier behind which he might hide and beat back his pursuers. But American boys and English boys and French boys broke down that barrier, and they have today arraigned that criminal at the world's bar of justice, where he is being tried for his crimes. The American people are a part of the jury that is trying him, and I have tried to present but a small fraction of the evidence against him.

It is safe to say that the verdict may be left with the American people, with the French people, with the English people, with the Belgian people, and that they will sentence the Boche to pay and pay and pay for several generations until there has been bred out of him and his children that idea that might is right and that he can overthrow the civilization and the freedom of the world to gratify his own selfish purposes.

The crime is greater than the Boche can ever pay for. It is really greater than the world will ever know, and the items in the long account of the criminal record of Germany will never all be recorded.

CAPITAL RENTALS ARE HIGH

Sum Paid by President Washington for Residence Would Not Be Considered Extravagant Today.

Rentals of $2,500 to $5,000 a year are not remarkable. There are hundreds of apartments in this city which rent for more, a great deal more, and it is likely that the new constructions in the best apartment-house sections contain no suites as cheap as $2,500.

When New York was the capital of the nation and Washington the chief executive there were few who paid as high as $1,000 a year for homes. Records show that George Washington paid $2,500 a year for the use of the McComb mansion on Broadway while president of the United States. As first citizen of the country it was allowable that he should pay so high rental, but only the president paid anything like that amount. He got a good deal more for his money than the man who pays $2,500 for an apartment today.

The McComb house was one of the finest homes in the capital. It was built by the best architect in the colonies and great care and no small amount of money were spent in the construction of the house, which was large and had many splendid rooms. It had beautifully laid out grounds and from a business standpoint was ideal because it was only a short distance from Federal hall at the northeast corner of Wall and Nassau streets, now the subtreasury. Washington extended himself when he paid this rental, although one of the richest men in the colonies.

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 16

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS.

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—Luke 10:27.
ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Ex. 19; Lev. 19:11-18, 33-37; Matt. 5:17-48.
PRIMARY TOPIC—God gives his commandments to Moses. Memory Verses—I John 4:3; Luke 10:27.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Giving commandments to the people. Memory Verses—Matt. 22:37-40.
INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—Jesus and the ten commandments.
SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—The commandments in modern life.

The ten commandments furnish us the world's greatest moral code.

I. The First Commandment (20:3).

"Thou shalt have no other gods before me." Means literally, "Thou shalt have no other gods before my face." This commandment enjoins the obligation of single-hearted worship and service. It may be broken by (1) living for one's self. If life's activities center in self then one is an idolater. (2) Making pleasure the goal of living. (3) Being covetous (Col. 3:5). Every one who is greedy for gold is an idolater. (4) Actually worshipping idols.

II. The Second Commandment (20:4-6).

While the first commandment is directed against false gods, the second is directed against the worship of the true God under false forms. It can be broken by (1) the use of images in worship; (2) putting sinful man in the place of Christ; (3) putting God's ordinances and institutions in the place which he alone should have.

III. The Third Commandment (20:7).

The Hebrew word "vain" translated means lying, deceptive, unreal. "Guiltless" is from the word meaning clean, unpunished. The meaning is that God will not hold to be clean and will not allow to go unpunished him who uses his name in a lying, hypocritical manner. This commandment may be broken by (1) profanity, (2) perjury, (3) levity and frivolity, (4) hypocrisy, which is professing to live for God yet living for self.

IV. The Fourth Commandment (20:8-11).

The command to work six days is as binding as to rest on the seventh. The resting one day in seven applies to servants and horses as well as to the man and his family. This commandment may be broken by (1) living in idleness, (2) working on the day set apart for the worship of God, (3) engaging in carnal pleasures on the Lord's day.

V. The Fifth Commandment (20:12).

This commandment rests upon the fact that parents stand to their children in the place of God. It may be violated by (1) disrespect to parents, (2) disobedience, (3) failure to give proper care in old age.

VI. The Sixth Commandment (20:13).

The sanctity of human life is due to the fact that man was created in the likeness and image of God. This commandment may be broken by (1) sinful anger (Matt. 5:22), (2) hatred (I John 3:15), (3) neglect of means to preserve life, (4) oppression of the weak, (5) suicide, (6) infanticide (7) unrighteous wars.

VII. The Seventh Commandment (20:14).

The sin which strikes at the home is most deadly, for it undermines the whole human fabric. It may be broken by (1) unclean imaginations, thoughts, and affections (Matt. 15:19; 5:27, 28), (2) unchaste conversation and wanton looks (Isa. 3:16; 2 Peter 2:14, (3) divorce, which is for the most part legalized adultery.

VIII. The Eighth Commandment (20:15).

This strikes at the sin of theft. Many things are legally right but morally wrong. This commandment may be broken by (1) taking what belongs to another, (2) false weights and measures, (3) extortion, (4) usury, (5) "graft," (6) making assignments to escape payment of debts.

IX. The Ninth Commandment (20:16).

The unfailing test of a man's religion is the use he makes of his tongue (James 1:26; 3:2-8). This commandment may be broken by (1) open lying, (2) perjury, (3) slander, (4) talebearing, (5) breach of promise, (6) withholding truth, (7) flattery.

X. The Tenth Commandment (20:17).

This commandment strikes at the desire for things which belong to another. It applies not merely to the open violation, but to the very purpose of the heart.

Religion Worth Having.

A religion that cannot be brought into every phase of life is not worth having; and the affairs of life that cannot be maintained side by side with Christ's teachings ought to be scrapped without delay. And until the brotherhood movement rises to its responsibilities and makes these facts plain, it will fail to be the power it may be its privilege to become.

A Real Cure.

Progress is the real cure for an overestimate of ourselves.—G. Macdonald.

13 Dollars—13 Cents

When Swift & Company paid, say,—13 dollars per hundredweight for live beef cattle last year, the profit was only 13 cents! In other words, if we had paid $13.13, we would have made no profit.

Or, if we had received a quarter of a cent per pound less for dressed beef we would have made no profit.

It is doubtful whether any other business is run on so close a margin of profit.

This is bringing the producer and the consumer pretty close together—which should be the object of any industry turning raw material into a useful form.

This remarkable showing is due to enormous volume, perfected facilities (packing plants strategically located, branch houses, refrigerator cars, etc.), and an army of men and women chosen and trained to do their special work.

This, and many other points of interest, are found in the Swift & Company Year Book for 1919, just published which is brought out for the public as well as for the 25,000 Swift & Company shareholders.

The Year Book also represents the packer's side of the Federal Trade Commission investigation, upon which Congress is asked to base action against the industry.

Many who have never heard the packer's side are sending for the Year Book.

Would you like one? Merely mail your name and address to the Chicago office and the book will come to you.

Some Various Valentines

By Frederick Moxon

I have had them in silks and in laces,
In velvet, and silver, and gold;
Some broidered with Cupids and Graces
All over the marginal space,
Wherever their wriglets would hold.

I have had them with hearts pierced by arrows,
Some singly, some skewered in pairs;
With cavaliers down on their marrows;
With love-birds, and home-building sparrows,
And suchlike pictorial snares.

I have had them with verses delicious
As ever were sugared with rhyme;
And others whose wit, suppositious,
Has left me for ever suspicious
Of "comics," at three for a dime.

But the best I find pasted on memory's page
Is this one you sent me at six years of age:

"The vilits red
The roses blew
The pinky sweet
An' sore yew."

FEW COMIC VALENTINES NOW

Little Regret That Foolish and Vulgar Custom Has Been Pretty Thoroughly Abandoned.

The comic valentine, which was painfully ugly and coarse, and which flourished very broadly at one time, has now almost entirely passed away, at least in its cruder forms. It used to be the greatest happiness of the schoolboy's life to purchase a very large assortment of these wretched comics and leave them on the front doorstep of his school teacher, male or female. Then when he had left a few comics on the steps of the village constable and paid his respects in similar fashion to the Sunday school superintendent he felt that St. Valentine's eve had been well spent. The joy of St. Valentine's day has diminished greatly since the practice of throwing valentines on the doorstep, ringing the bell and running, gave place to the less exciting method of mail delivery. But in spite of up-to-date interference with the valentine spirit St. Valentine's day always will hold its own. The most famous valentine verse ever written is still being attached to home-made valentines in painfully neat children's handwriting in various happy outlying districts where boys and girls have real fun without spending much money for valentines or anything else. Roses are as red as ever and violets are still true blue in the joyous land of boy and girl love affairs where reigns the good St. Valentine.

EFFECTIVE WORK

"Hey! You ain't got no address on that valentine."

"I know it. I don't want her to know who sent it an' she knows my handwritin'."

Custom Will Not Down.

Custom has decreed that on St. Valentine's day persons of the opposite sex should exchange affectionate missives, and custom is more potent than any other authority known to man.

THE KINSHIP OF THE NEW AMERICAN

Aims and Ideals of the United States and Canada Will Soon Be Signed.

The war is over, peace will soon be signed, the fighting nations have sheathed their swords, and the day of reconstruction has come.

What of it!

Hundreds of thousands of men, taken from the fields of husbandry, from the ranks of labor, from the four walls of the counting house, and the confines of the workshop, taken from them to do their part, their large part, in the prevention of the spoliation of the world, and in the meantime removed from the gear of common everyday life, will be returning, only to find in many cases old positions filled, the machinery with which they were formerly attached dislocated.

Are they to become aimless wanderers, with the ultimate possibility of augmenting an army of menacing loafers? If they do it it is because their ability to assist in laying new foundations, in building up much required structures, is underestimated. Men who have fought as they have fought, who have risked and faced dangers as they have, are not of the caliber likely to flinch when it comes to the restoration of what the enemy partially destroyed, when it comes to the reconstruction of the world the ideals of which they had in view when they took part in the great struggle whose Divine purpose was to bring about this reconstruction.

Inured to toil, thoughtless of fatigue, trained in initiative and hardened by their outdoor exercise they will return better and stronger men, boys will have matured and young men will have developed.

They will decide of themselves lines of action and thought, and what their future should and will be. On the field of battle they developed alertness and wisdom, and they will return with both shedding from every pore.

Action was their by-word and it will stand them in good stead now that the din of the battle no longer rings in their ears, or the zero hour signals them to the fray, and it will continue during their entire existence.

But if they return to find their old avocation gone, their places filled, the institutions with which they were connected no longer exist, new walks of life and employment must be opened to them. It may be that the counting house, the factory, the workshop will have lost their attraction. The returned soldier will look elsewhere for employment; within his reach there is always the "Forward-to-the-Land" necessity. In this lies the remedy that will not only take care of a multitude of those who may not be able to return to their former occupations, whose desires are not to do so, whose health prohibits them from indoor life or whose outdoor habits from the past one, two, three or four years have given them such a taste and desire for it that confinement would be unbearable. Farm life will thus appeal to them, and the indications are that it will be taken advantage of by thousands. It means much to them as well as to the Continent of America that provides the opportunity to the world at large, and to the stricken and famished nations of Europe, who, not only today, but for years to come, will require the sustenance that can only largely be supplied by the United States and Canada. By following the pursuit of agriculture the returned soldier will continue the cause he so greatly advanced when fighting on the field of battle. Both countries have undeveloped areas yet open to settlement.

There is little need here to direct attention to the wealth that has come to the farmers of Canada within the past few years. It is not only in grain growing that unqualified and almost unequaled success has followed honest effort, but the raising of horses, cattle, sheep and hogs has been large source of profit. These are facts that are well known to the many friends and acquaintances of the thousands of farmers from the United States who have acquired wealth on the prairies of Western Canada. Farms of from one hundred and sixty to six hundred and forty acres of the richest soil may be secured on reasonable terms, and with an excellent climate, with a school system equal to any in the world, and desirable social conditions, little else could be asked.

Canadian statesmen are today busily engaged planning for the future of the returned soldier with a view to making him independent of state help after the immediate necessary assistance has been granted, the main idea being to show in the fullest degree the country's appreciation of the services he has rendered.

But, now that the war is ended, and the fact apparent that of all avocations the most profitable and independent is that of the farmer, there will be a strong desire to secure farm lands for cultivation. Canada offers the opportunity to those seeking, not as speculation but as production. The deepest interest is taken by Federal and Provincial authorities to further the welfare of the farmer and secure a maximum return for his efforts. Large sums of money are spent in educational and experimental work. Engaged in Experimental and Demonstration farms, and in the agricultural colleges, are men of the highest technical knowledge and practical experience, some being professors of international reputation. The results of experiments and tests are free and available to all. Educational opportunities for farmers are the concern of the Government and appreciation is shown by the number of farmers who attend the free courses.

Agriculture in Canada has reached a high standard, notwithstanding which lands are low in price.

Thus upon the United States and Canada for many years will rest the great burden of feeding the world. With free interchange of travel, difficulties of crossing and recrossing removed, Canada may look for a speedy resumption of the large influx of settlers from the United States which prevailed previous to the war. During the war period there was a dread of something, no one seemed to know what: if the American went to Canada he might be conscripted, put in prison or in his attempt to cross the border he would meet with innumerable difficulties, most of which, of course, was untrue. These untruths were circulated for a purpose by an element, which it was discovered had an interest in fomenting and creating trouble and distrust between two peoples whose language and aims in life should be anything but of an unfriendly character. The draft law of the United States adopted for the carrying out of the high purposes had in view by the United States kept many from going to Canada during the period of the war. The citizen army of the United States was quickly mobilized, and contained a large percentage of the young men from the farms. In this way many were prevented from going to Canada.

That is all over now. There are no real or imaginary restrictions; there is no draft law to interfere. On the contrary there is an unfathomable depth of good feeling, and the long existing friendship is stronger than ever. This has been brought about by the knowledge of what has been done in the recent great struggle, each vying with the other in giving credit for what was accomplished. In thought and feeling, in language, in aims in life, in work, in desire to build up a new world, there has been bred a kinship which is as indissoluble as time itself.—Advertisement.

HAARLEM OIL CAPSULES IF YOUR BACK ACHES

Do you feel tired and "worn-out?" Are you nervous and irritable? Don't sleep well at night? Have a "dragged out," unrested feeling when you get up in the morning? Dizzy spells? Bilious? Bad taste in the mouth, backache, pain or soreness in the loins, and abdomen? Severe distress when urinating, bloody, cloudy urine or sediment? All these indicate gravel or stone in the bladder, or that the poisonous microbes, which are always in your system, have attacked your kidneys.

You should use GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules immediately. The oil soaks gently into the walls and lining of the kidneys, and the little poisonous animal germs, which are causing the inflammation, are immediately attacked and chased out of your system without inconvenience or pain.

Don't ignore the "little pains and aches," especially backaches. They may be little now but there is no telling how soon a dangerous or fatal disease of which they are the forerunners may show itself. Go after the cause of that backache at once, or you may find yourself in the grip of an incurable disease.

Do not delay a minute. Go to your druggist and insist on his supplying you with a box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. In 24 hours you will feel renewed health and vigor. After you have cured yourself, continue to take one or two Capsules each day so as to keep in first-class condition, and ward off the danger of future attacks. Money refunded if they do not help you. Ask for the original imported GOLD MEDAL brand, and thus be sure of getting the genuine.—Adv.

An Explanation.

THE AMERICAN RED CROSS
Lake Division Headquarters
2157 Euclid Ave.
Cleveland, O.

February 8th, 1919
Dictated February 7th.

F. R. Bowman,
St. Joe,
Indiana.
My dear Sir:

I have before me your letter of the 6th of February directed to the Manager of the Lake Division and making inquiry about the use that is being made of certain funds that were raised in the name of the Red Cross in St. Joe. This money you say was raised by an auction sale and it was given to buy materials of all sorts or to be appropriated upon call for the alleviation of human suffering. It now appears from what you say that the money is being used for something else.

I can say to you that the disposition of the money that is being made, as set out in your letter, is absolutely wrong. This money, though it was raised by a special effort of your chapter or branch, is essentially Red Cross money and it can not or should not at any rate be used, no matter what authority may be given you or your Chairman by the DeKalb County Chapter, for anything except regular Red Cross expenses. The giving of extravagant entertainment to returning soldiers is not a Red Cross function and the spending of money in that way is to be entirely discountenanced. I trust that you will do everything you can to have this stopped and that you will make it known wherever you think it useful to have it known that the Red Cross regards this action as entirely improper and a perversion of Red Cross funds.

I trust that I am speaking clearly. There can be no doubt that the whole thing is wrong.

Very truly yours
B. P. Buorland,
Director Department of Developement.

Editor's Note:—Reports have been current pro and con concerning the Red Cross. The NEWS has not taken any stand in this whatever. Some weeks ago the Red Cross had reproduced a letter from the Lake Division Headquarters from H. H. Wyman, Director of Accounting, concerning their difficulties. We are reproducing herewith another communication sent to F. R. Bowman, in reply to his inquiry of February 6. Read them and be your own judge as to the controversy. No further publicity on this matter will be allowed in The NEWS colums

January 15, 1919

Mr. Fred W. Knott,
DeKalb County Chapter,
The American Red Cross,
Auburn, Indiana,

Replying to your favor of the 11th. inst., we think, after due consideration that it would be perfectly proper for the Branch to which you refer to charge the bill of $12.30 for entertainment to soldiers to the general fund which it has created through a Red Cross sale. We are returning herewith the draft which you sent us.

Very truly Yours,
H. H. Wyman,
Director of Department of Accounts.

BIG PROFIT FROM BIG WASTE

By-Products of Factory and Farm Put to Good Use

Many people can still remember the great piles of bone and carrion that once greeted the eye on the prairies around the packing center of Chicago—a gigantic waste and a nuisance. Buzzards and dogs were there by the thousand. The stench was awful. Then the nuisance itself prompted ways and means for profitable disposal of the bones. Fertilizer was made from them—at a good profit. Then followed means for making profit from the other wastes—hoofs, horns, hair, etc. Now hundreds of commodities are made from what was formerly waste, and the directors of the great packing firms will tell you that meat is often sold at a loss, the profit from the by-products making up for it.

For another example, take the steel industry. From the blast furnaces there used to escape gases that were a menace to the health of the community. They lighted up the heavens for miles around as they burned. Pure waste of fuel that was, for nowadays those same gases, refined of course, furnish enormous horse power in the way of gas for the engines that run the machinery of the mills.

The Big Waste on the Farm

There is a waste right at home that might be turned to good profit. The next time you drive to or from town, notice the piles of manure—either in the barnyard or on the field—waiting to be spread. True enough those piles will be spread, and they'll do a lot of good, but they mean a big waste if they're not spread soon. All the experiment stations tell us that exposure of the manure to the weather for six months means a waste of a half of the plant food in the manure.

This means a bigger loss than most of us realize. The average farm produces 100 tons of manure in a year. It is worth at least $5.50 a ton in crop-increasing, according to the latest reports. So 100 tons is $550 worth. Six months' leaching loses one-half, or $250 worth.

What's the remedy? Frequent spreading. Manure spread on the field either dries out and stops fermenting and losing ammonia, or else the plant food is leached into the soil where it belongs.

But the job is a nuisance. Sure it is—by hand. What about a spreader? That's the idea. Make the job easier and it will be done oftener. The spreader will do the work twice as well, too, making the manure go much farther and breaking up the lumps. Some of those new wide spread machines beat the manure twice and spread it 'way beyond the wheels.

Spreader Saves $366 on 16 Acres

The present high prices for farm products make a spreader pay for itself faster than ever before. One Nebraska farmer experimented and found a total gain of $122 for spreader over hand work on six acres of corn and ten of meadow. That was at a time when corn was 50c and hay $10. The gain would be about three times $122 or $366 now—with prices as high as they are.

Without a doubt the liberal use of spreaders would do more to boost crops in this county than any other one thing. They'd turn a big waste into a big profit—and mighty quick, too.

Safety First Was Fine

Those who saw it last Friday night, at the opera house, and in fact a full house was present, pronounced it as good as ever.

As was advertised, the local organization put on the play for the benefit of the St. Joe Volunteer Fire Co., to assist them in the purchase of a motor truck for the fire engine. The public as usual showed their appreciation of the efforts of the boys, by giving a hearty response to the play. Because of the inclemency of the weather, many were kept away. The committee has decided to give the play over on Thursday night of this week.

The personnel of the company will be found in the ad on another page of this paper, and each one was especially adapted to his character. The receipts of the show was $103.35.

Thieves Visit St. Joe

Wednesday morning, broken windows revealed the fact that some burglars had been at work during the night.

Three stores were broken into as follows:—Wm. Curie's implement store was entered through the west window. Every drawer was searched and papers laid on the floor, robes and blankets disturbed. What was taken is not known. They left the store at the rear.

The glass in Dr. Sheffer's front door was broken but no entrance gained.

John Betz restaurant, was the third. Entrance was gained at a window on the east side. John is the looser of some eggs, canned goods, cheese, sandwiches, perhaps some cigars and many other things. Papers were scattered over the floor His loss will be considerable.

Henry Krabill reports that he heard the noise, but thought it caused by a train passing at that time and did not investigate.

The Wm. Sailor Blood-hound of Hicksville was secured and landed in St. Joe at 11:41. The scent was taken from the Curie store, down main Street, into the Kees creek bottom and then north across the tracks where it is supposed that the thieves drove away. The second trail was taken from the Betz restraurant and ended about the same place.

Farmers Take Notice

Did you ever stop to think you are doing yourself an injustice, as well as the Flour Mill in your locality, by buying flour that is made in Kansas or Minnesota or some other far off place? When you buy a foreign flour, you help to break down a very valuabe industry in your community. Your flour costs you more than if you would take your wheat to the mill, and get flour it. And then you want to get bran and middlings for feed, you do not want the western bran and feed because you do not like it and your stock does not like it. You like the feed you get at the home mill the best.

If you were as patriotic to your home community as you should be you would patronize your home mill, you would use your home flour as well as you would like to use the home mill feed. You should realize that the community mill needs your wheat and flour trade as well as the chop grinding trade. Your home mill cannot continue in business very long unless it gets your full patronage. Our mill has been endeavoring to serve the farmers well, we have not spared expense in equipment to make this one of the best mills in the country. We have made an effort to favor the farmers in this community by keeping all our mill feed for our local trade, but unless the farmers favor us by bringing their wheat here for flour we will be forced to hold our feed and sell to feed dealers who will buy our flour if we will furnish them with feed.

This is the terms on which foreign mills sell feed. The buyer of feed must take one-half of the car with flour. We have with held our feed from dealers because we wanted to favor our home trade, but if the farmers of this community do not feel like patronizing their home mill, the mill will be forced to seek the market for flour that will take the flour to get the feed. There is no better flour made than Daily Bread Flour and you can live as long on a barrel of this flour as on a barrel of any other advertised flour.

If you go into a store in St Joe and ask for a sack of flour and the merchant asks you whether you would prefer a foreign flour to your home flour, put it down that that merchant is sticking a knife into a home town and community.

Crack these nuts and see what they contain. We are always pleased to see you.

Takes His Life.

Friday afternoon about 3:30 o'clock Charles Hadsell ended his own life at his home on Tight street near the corporate limits.

Mr. Hadsell has for years been more or less of an eccentric character. For some time he has had in mind disposing of his interests here and moving to Delaware or New Jersey. Tuesday he sold his property to Mrs. Susie Scott of West High street. After the sale was made he began brooding over the situation and wished the deal had not been made. It is reported that he offered a bonus to cancel the deal but failed in this.

He continued to brood over the situation and no doubt felt that there was no way out of the dilemma. This in turn unbalanced his mind. He is reported to have suggested suicide during the morning but it was not taken seriously.

The weapon used was a short 32 calibre rifle. The shot entered the forehead and death must have been instantaneous. He was upstairs in his own room when the deed was committed.

For several years he has resided with his aged mother. She heard nothing of him and went up to his room where she found him dead.

Mr. Hadsell came from pioneer stock of this section. His father was the first white child born in DeKalb county, Ind.—Hicksville News.

Charles Zealous Hadsell was born at Coburn's Corners, Indiana, March 15, 1874.

He lived with his family on the farm there until he was thirty years of age when he came with his father and mother to the home at Hicksville, Ohio, where he resided until his death, February 14, 1919.

In his young manhood he united with the church at Coburn's Corners. The interpretation of his character was best revealed in his care, kindness and consideration for his aged mother with whom he lived. Besides his mother, three brothers survive Irvin S., of Hicksville, Ohio, Saxe P., of near St. Joe and Marshall J. Indianapolis, Indiana.

He was very fond of music and derived much pleasure from his association with the choir in the work of the church.

The funeral was held from the Christian church at Hicksville on Monday afternoon at 1:30. Conducted by Rev. Morr. Burial at Alton cemetery.

GOING BACK TO NATURE

BY DR. W. LUCAS.

People get sick because they go away from Nature, and the only way to get well is to go back. Something grows out of the ground in the form of vegetation to cure almost every ill. Some of these vegetable growths are understood by man, and some are not. Animals, it would seem, know what to do when they are sick better than men and women. Observers have noted that a sick horse, dog or cat will stop eating food and seek out some vegetable growth in the field or yard, which, when found and eaten, often restores appetite and health. Haven't you seen these animals do this very thing yourself?

Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., long since found the herbs and roots provided by Nature to overcome constipation, and he had these vegetables collected and made up of Mayapple, leaves of Aloe, root of Jalap, into little white sugar-coated pills, that he called Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. You must understand that when your intestines are stopped up, poisons and decayed matter are imprisoned in your system, and these are carried by the blood throughout your body. Thus does your head ache, you get dizzy, you can't sleep, your skin may break out, your appetite declines, you get tired and despondent. As a matter of fact, you may get sick all over. Don't you see how useless all this suffering is? All that is often needed is a few of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, which he has placed in all drug stores for your convenience and health. Try them by all means. They are probably the very thing you need right now.

A Slip Somewhere.

Last winter, while walking down the street, a man fell, and picking himself up he carefully covered the slippery spot with the snow, as he saw an old enemy coming that way. When he got home his wife met him at the door with a potato masher in her hand, and exclaimed:

"I saw you cover that spot. I didn't know what it was, but fell and broke all the eggs I had just bought at the grocery omnibus."

He tried to explain, but the weapon, descended upon his head, and now he puts his hat on with a shoehorn.

Washington

WHEN dreaming kings, at odds with swift-paced time,
Would settle that banner down,
A nobler knight than ever writ or rhyme
With fame's bright wreath did crown.
Through armed hosts bore it till it floated high
Beyond the clouds, a light that can not die!
Ah, hero of our younger race!
Great builder of a temple new!
Ruler, who sought no lordly place!
Warrior, who sheathed the sword he drew!
Lover of men, who saw afar
A world unmarred by wars or war,
Who knew the path, and yet forbore
To tread it, till all should implore;
Who saw the light and led the way
Where the gray world might greet the day:
Father and leader, prophet sure,
Whose will in vast works shall endure,
How shall we praise him on this day of days,
Great son of fame who has no need of praise?

How shall we praise him? Open wide the doors
Of the fair temple whose broad base he laid.
Through its white halls a shadowy cavalcade
Of heroes moves o'er unresounding floors—
Men whose brawned arms upraised the columns high
And reared the towers that vanish in the sky—
The strong who, having wrought, can never die.

—Harriet Monroe.

"ONLY HIS RIGHT"

Washington Upheld Action of Man Who Would Not Make Way.

DESPITE President Washington's dignity, he was ever democratic. He was also just. Both qualities are illustrated by a story of him told by Rev. Dr. Alfred Ely, a Massachusetts clergyman, who died in 1866. Doctor Ely told the story in a Fourth of July address delivered some years before his death, and it was taken down and published in practically his exact words. The tale exemplifies Washington's magnanimity, as well as the almost idolatrous reverence felt for him in his own day.

"When a boy," said Doctor Ely, "I resided in West Springfield, Mass., and worked on a farm. In the autumn of the year 1789 I was engaged with my employer in gathering a load of cornstalks from a field not far distant from the Connecticut river. My employer had driven the loaded team from the lot and left me, as usual, to put up the bars. While thus occupied I noticed the approach of four fine horses and a large vehicle. There was no driver upon the carriage, but astride the nigh horse of each span was a young mulatto postilion. There were also two outriders and a footman. The vehicle, in which was seated a gentleman whose striking personal appearance impressed me, was called in those days a chariot. I saw the outriders gallop up in advance of the chariot and hold a parley with my employer, who occupied the entire road with his loaded cart. I perceived that my employer yielded none of his right to the road, and that the chariot was detained by the cart until they reached a turnout, where the cortege passed by. I soon overtook my employer and inquired who the distinguished personage was who had just passed us, and was informed that it was George Washington. I obtained permission to run on and see if I could not catch another glimpse of the great chieftain, whose deeds during the war had so filled my wondering fancy. In this I was not disappointed. I found General Washington waiting for the ferry, on the bank of the river, dressed in a snuff-colored surtout, with a long-lapeled vest of the same color and material, and in small clothes and boots, the most majestic and dignified looking man that I ever saw.

"While I was gazing upon him one of his postilions drove up, and, dismounting and uncovering his head, said in the most deferential manner, and with an expression of injured dignity:

"And So He Had!"

"'Your excellency, as we were driving along, a little way back, we overtook a man with a loaded cart, who occupied the entire road. I asked him to stop his team that we might pass by. He declined. I then told him that President Washington was in the chariot. He again refused, and said that he would not stop—that he had as good a right to the road as George Washington had.'

"The simple reply of Washington was: 'And so he had!' The postilion, after a moment's look of wonder and astonishment at the condescension of the president of the United States, quietly put on his hat and mounted his horse."

TEST SEED CORN BEFORE SOWING

War Emergency Taught Farmers of Country Lesson That Will Be Useful in Peace.

WORK IN MISSOURI COUNTY

Four Thousand Bushels Rejected From 10,000 in One Section—Egg Crates With Strawboard Cells Used for Testing.

No, not a munition factory. Those cylindrical objects lying in orderly rows on shelves are not shrapnel, but ears of corn. The slender filaments that are being sorted so carefully are not fuses, but sprouts. The girls so busily at work before bench or box are not handling picrates, but seed corn.

The whole shows graphically how one agent of the United States department of agriculture and the Missouri Agricultural college went about making sure that the 1918 corn crop would not fail the cause of world freedom for lack of viable seed. It is representative of what many county agents, the country over, are doing now, wherever occasion arises, to make sure that the 1919 crop will not fail for a like reason.

What One County Saved.

These pictures show the central testing station established in February, 1918, by the county agent of Livingston county, Missouri. In this, and in eight local testing stations scattered about the county, 10,951 bushels of corn were "ear tested" before corn-planting time came last spring. Of this corn more than 4,000 bushels were thrown out as being unfit for planting—which means that 4,000 bushels of corn were saved for feed. Otherwise, it would have rotted in the ground, making an equivalent replanting necessary. More than 6,000 bushels were certified as being sure to give a satisfactory percentage of germination.

In this instance egg crates, with their little straw-board cells, were used for testing—a somewhat novel method that has found favor in some localities. The kernels to be tested are planted in the pasteboard cells, six grains from an ear, and a cell to each ear. After sufficient time for germination, the crates are opened and the ears are saved for seed or discarded, according to the percentage of germination shown by the corresponding kernels. Each ear has a number corresponding to that of the cell in which the sample kernels taken from it are put for germination, so it is easy to make the final sorting.

Results Shown in Field.

Over a thousand farmers brought their seed corn to one or another of the nine testing stations established in Livingston county last year, and practically every field planted with corn thus tested showed a strong stand.

The corn saved to the country and the world last summer through such testing stations as these will total millions of bushels. More important, perhaps, than this great immediate saving is the future saving that is assured through the demonstration of the practical value of testing afforded by the seed-corn campaign in the spring of 1918.

RETURNS FROM TESTING

Testing seed corn for germination is the least expensive method of increasing the yield of corn per acre.

Without seed testing, all other means of increasing the yield will fall short of what they should accomplish.

The testing of seed corn by any of the approved methods is not difficult.

The time spent in testing seed corn is likely to be paid for at the time of planting and is certain to be paid for manyfold at harvest.

Corn that appears to be sound does not always germinate. If no test is made, considerable quantities of sound-appearing corn are likely to be planted only to rot in the ground. If tested, this corn would not be planted and would serve all the purposes of good feed.

A field planted to tested seed corn requires little or no replanting. All plants have an even start and develop evenly to a fuller yield than where stunted replants are present.

Back to Meadowlands!

I must go forth to the fields again
Where the meadow grass is rife,
And all I ask is some calmness
And a little ease from strife,
And a colt's neigh, and the wind's song,
And the grass blades shaking,
And a low note from a bird's throat,
And a pink dawn breaking.

Wherein the versemaker, in other years and out of the desire of his heart, pretty accurately outlined the program for American farmers in the good, peaceful year of 1919. The strife is passed. The calmness is come. And now the call is for a return to grass meadows and pasture lots and live stock.

In the years of strife and stress many farmers plowed up permanent pastures and meadows and devoted them to grain crops to meet the world's need for bread. Now that farming is to be restored to a peace-time basis, the United States department of agriculture says it seems wise that many of these lands be reseeded to grass.

The signing of the armistice found the United States well supplied with foods, but comparatively short on feeds, but with an urgent demand for meat animals, in the production of which feeds and pasturage are essential.

The department of agriculture, of course, does not urge abandonment of profitable grain farming, but it points out, in its survey of the 1919 situation, that the sacrifice of grass lands and the abandonment of rotation systems in response to the world demand for more cereals has resulted in a depletion of fertility which must be restored by the re-establishment of rotations, pastures, meadows, leguminous crops, and live stock.

Geese exceed all forms of poultry as fat producers. They also produce eggs and supply a meat for table use.

LAND OF WEALTH

Western Canada Has Unbounded Possibilities.

Glorious Opportunities for the Stock Raiser, the Wheat Grower, and the Mixed Farmer—Its Fields to Feed the World.

Before there were any cattle in Alberta, or it was known that it was possible to feed them outside all the year round, the Indian hunters could always find the buffalo during the winter months pasturing in the foothills. In the summer the herds wandered on the plains and fed on the prairie grasses. The plains have since become grain fields, but the foothill district extending north from the International boundary for a thousand miles will always be a natural feeding ground for live stock. In the southern part of Alberta the altitude is greater than in the more northerly districts, but while the herds in the south have wider tracts of treeless pasturage, in the north from Red Deer on into the Peace river country there are more trees, a richer vegetation and more natural shelter.

Those who have been advocating stock raising and mixed farming for the past few years point to the number of hogs marketed as an evidence of the increased production of the Western Provinces. They may also take credit for the increase in cattle and sheep, which is very great, but perhaps not so marked as what has been accomplished in hog raising. For the first six months alone last year about half a million hogs were shipped from Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. A very conservative estimate value of these animals to the farmer would be $25.00 a head.

The Canadian West is fast forging to the front of the wheat-producing countries of the world, and "No. 1 hard" is without doubt the best wheat in the market today. When it is considered that the three hundred and forty-three million four hundred and seventy-three thousand bushel crop of 1915 was from only eleven million acres of her hundreds of millions of acres, it gives an idea of what her future will be.

It is felt, however, that on account of the great money there will undoubtedly be in growing wheat during the next few years there is a possibility that farmers may be tempted to drop the growing of coarser grains, which might result in less stock being raised. Every effort is being made by the Agricultural Departments of the various Provinces to impress on the farmers that forage crops and coarse feed in abundance mean production of flesh and milk, and that in the long run the great future of the Western Provinces lies in mixed farming which will found her prosperity on a more enduring basis.

Mixed farming has always been the rule in the Eastern Provinces where the formation of the land invites variety of crop, but it has not been as common in the Western Provinces, though the practice has grown in recent years. Hitherto the man mining wheat from the rich soil has purchased most of his household food and necessities, his energies being devoted to getting every possible bushel of grain out of every foot of his land, and he has paid prices for his supplies that have made a big dent in his profits. It has now dawned on him that he can raise vegetables and poultry, and supply his own table; that with very little effort he can raise a lot of garden produce and in a very simple manner solve his own problem of the cost of living. Further, that there is an increasing market for domestic necessities such as poultry, eggs, butter, milk and cheese, which command very high prices, and that there are other roads to prosperity besides that through the wheat field.

In 1916 Canada imported 7,989,269 pounds of butter, most of it from as far away as New Zealand, and for the first time in 60 years failed to ship butter to England, a condition due to the home consumption, which is estimated to be increasing at the rate of $3,000,000 worth a year, being greatly in excess of the increased supply. This condition has brought about a change in farming methods that is far-reaching, and will result in greatly increased production all round of the necessities demanded by the home market.

Natural Resources.

One of the most important considerations to the farmer is fuel. In northern Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, where portions of the country are well wooded, the settler has little difficulty in getting all the wood he requires, and thousands of men find employment in the winter cutting wood, which is shipped all over the prairie portions of the provinces. There is an abundance of coal throughout the country. It is estimated that the coal deposits in Alberta cover over 81,000 square miles and represent an available tonnage of over ten hundred thousand million tons, while those in Saskatchewan cover an area of 13,000 miles, containing over 50,000,000 tons. In Manitoba the coal reserve is not as large, but even there 100,000,000 tons is considered a conservative estimate. At the present time these deposits are only worked to a small extent, but there is no doubt that they will be a great feature in upbuilding the country and will exercise a powerful influence on its commerce.

It is a common thing in the coal districts for farmers to get their coal supply off their own farm. Near Edmonton, for example, the farmers not only supply themselves, but they carry coal to the city market and find it a considerable source of revenue in the winter time. The Edmonton coal fields under and around the city have an estimated content of sixty thousand million tons. Farmers sell the coal at $4 a ton for domestic use.

The pioneer of Western Canada knew little of the enjoyments of life, compared with the farmer in that country today. The continual extension of railway lines affords facilities undreamed of a few years ago, closing up the gaps of communication, creating immense business for the East in the West and the West in the East, and drawing the farmer all the time nearer to the zones of commerce. In creating wider markets the railways are doing more than any other agency can do for Western Canada, and the country as a whole. The products of the farms, which are now readily marketed, and the vast train of employment that follows the enlargement of the farming industry, is creating new agricultural centers and causing towns and cities of importance to grow all along its lines.

An admirable system of agricultural instruction has been developed through the efforts of the Dominion government and the various provincial Departments of Agriculture. This forms part of the educational system of Western Canada and is doing much for all branches of agriculture. Experimental farms have been established at various points in the provinces, which have done wonders in developing improved methods of farming.

The result has been a great awakening to the necessity of better methods of tillage, scientific stock raising and dairying. Farmers are beginning to realize that to get what they are entitled to out of the land, they must adopt scientific methods, and as a result, careful seed selection, proper rotation and summer fallow is the order of the day. Under the favorable conditions generally anticipated, prospects point to an all round increase in production that will leave a great deal of money in the hands of the western farmer this year, and prosperity for Western Canada as a whole. It will be years before Europe will make up arrears in agricultural production, caused by the enforced idleness and wholesale destruction, and western Canada will play a big part in filling the void.

The result of the continued shortage in cattle, the future price of beef and the solution of the perplexing problem of feeding the world are vital questions uppermost in the minds of many thinking people today.

There is no doubt that the wide acres of Western Canada can, and will, be made to play an important part in bringing about a proper balance in supply and demand. In the northern parts of Manitoba and Saskatchewan and in Alberta are many thousands of acres of the richest pasture in the world, well watered, and treated by the sunniest of climates. These rolling hills for the greater part are still unpeopled and untrodden by the hoofs of domestic animals.

One of the causes assigned for the decline in stock-raising is the reduction in the areas available for grazing on account of so many big ranches being converted into farms. Experiments conducted at Vermilion, Alberta, would rather go to show that the old grazing grounds were too large, and that the feeding is really better when the animal is confined to a comparatively limited area, providing the pasturage is of the right kind and there is plenty of water.—Advertisement.

Reasonable.

A self-important individual stopped beside a trench where a little man and a big man were employed. Noticing that the first was hard at it, while the other was doing a lot of soldiering, he said: "You ought to be ashamed of yourself to let the little man do all the work."

"Why shouldn't he?" retorted the big fellow; "he's the nearest to it."

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half p'nt of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum a small box of Barbo Compound, and ½ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

The next day he called again, gave the same name and address, and said he wanted the patient taken to the hospital.

"But," he was told, "we took that woman to the hospital last evening."

"I know," he said, "but she forgot to take her bread ticket and had to walk back home and get it."

Get New Kidneys!

The kidneys are the most overworked organs of the human body, and when they fail in their work of filtering out and throwing off the poisons developed in the system, things begin to happen.

One of the first warnings is pain or stiffness in the lower part of the back; highly colored urine; loss of appetite; indigestion; irritation, or even stone in the bladder. These symptoms indicate a condition that may lead to that dreaded and fatal malady, Bright's disease, for which there is said to be no cure.

Do not delay a minute. At the first indication of trouble in the kidney, liver, bladder or urinary organs start taking Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules, and save yourself before it is too late. Instant treatment is necessary in kidney and bladder troubles. A delay is often fatal.

You can almost certainly find immediate relief in Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules. For more than 200 years this famous preparation has been an unfailing remedy for all kidney, bladder and urinary troubles.

It is the pure, original Haarlem Oil your great-grandmother used. About two capsules each day will keep you toned up and feeling fine. Get it at any drug store, and if it does not give you almost immediate relief, your money will be refunded. Be sure you get the GOLD MEDAL brand. None other genuine. In boxes, three sizes.—Adv.

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 23

THE BREACH OF THE COVENANT AND MOSES' PRAYER FOR ISRAEL.

(May Be Used With Missionary Application.)

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 32:1-34:9.

GOLDEN TEXT—The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.—James 5:16.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Deut. 9:6-29; Eph. 2:14-21; James 5:13-18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Ask God's help for others. Memory Verse—James 5:16.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Praying for other people.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—Interceding for others.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—The value of intercessory prayer.

Less than six weeks have elapsed since Israel took the oath of allegiance to Jehovah. In less than forty days they flagrantly break the first and second commandments.

I. The Golden Calf (32:1-6).

1. Moses' delay (v. 1) This they interpreted to mean that their leader had either lost his way in the darkness or had perished in the fire that hovered over the mount.

2. The people's demand (v. 1). They demanded of Aaron that he make them a god to go before them. Their profession of allegiance to God collapsed as soon as the strong personality of their leader was no longer felt.

3. Aaron's cowardly compliance (vv. 2-4). He was an eloquent man, but lacked moral courage. Many today can talk fluently, but vacillate before the real issues of life. In order to gain time with the rebels he demanded that they cast off their jewelry and bring it to him. Perhaps he thought that their love for it would cause them to forego their demands, but they cheerfully gave up their jewelry for a false god. Aaron, like many compromising men of this age, opened a door which he could not shut.

4. Wanton revelry (vv. 5, 6). Seeing their disposition, Aaron erected an altar and proclaimed a fast unto Jehovah. He no doubt wished them to worship the Lord through the image, but he had made a god for them and it was a very short step to the heathen orgies connected with idolatrous worship.

II. God's Burning Wrath (32:7-10).

God's nature is such that he cannot tolerate a rival. No gods shall be before his face. The rival must be removed or the people must be consumed with divine wrath. God does not own them as his people, for they had cast him off.

III. The Mediation of Moses (32:11-14).

The declaration of a divine purpose to destroy the Israelites did not deter Moses from making intercession for them. What was his threefold plea? (vv. 11, 12, 13).

Moses knew full well that the people deserved to die, therefore he could not plead any merit on their part. His plea was based wholly on God's purpose for Israel. Through his intercession God relents.

IV. Judgment Falls (32:15-35).

1. Moses broke the tables of testimony (vv. 15-19) emblematic of the breach of their covenant with God.

2. Moses destroyed the image (v. 20) and made the people drink of the water which contained its dust, thus making them to experience in a physical sense the bitterness which results from sin.

3. Moses showed Aaron that he was inexcusable for his part in the disgraceful affair (vv. 21-24).

4. Moses called for those who would take a stand for the Lord to gird their swords and slay all who stood out in rebellion. The tribe of Levi ranged themselves on his side and became the instrument by which God chastened his people (vv. 25-29).

5. Moses confessed the great sin of the people and begged that God would forgive them. He was willing to suffer the punishment himself, if possible, and let the people go free. The Lord declared to him in answer that every man should bear his own sin (vv. 30-35).

V. The Covenant Renewed (33:1-34:9).

1. Moses' commission renewed (Ch. 33).

2. The second tables of the law given (34:1-9). In the giving of these tables he reiterated God's justice, but gave particular emphasis to his mercy. "The Lord God, merciful and gracious, long-suffering and abundant in goodness and truth, keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin, and that will by no means clear the guilty; visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children, unto the third and fourth generation."

What to Pray For.

Oh, do not pray for easy lives. Pray to be stronger men. Do not pray for tasks equal to your powers. Pray for powers equal to your tasks. Then the doing of your work shall be no miracle. But you shall be a miracle. Every day you shall wonder at yourself, at the richness of life which has come to you by the grace of God.—Phillips Brooks.

HUN LINGO BILL O. K.'D BY HOUSE

Under Suspended Rules Assembly Provides for Teaching of English Only.

MORE ARGUMENT IS LIKELY

Contention Is Made That No Provision Stipulates What Shall Be Taught in Private and Parochial Schools.

Indianapolis. — Under suspended rules, the Indiana house of representatives passed the bills striking out the objectionable amendment of 1869, providing for the compulsory teaching of German on petition; also the measure providing "that all instruction in the subjects provided by law or prescribed by the state board of education in the elementary schools of the state, which are subject to the provisions of the state school attendance, shall be conducted in the English language."

Various interpretations of this latter bill already are heard and it is deemed probable now that when the bill comes to the senate charges will be made by senate members that the bill does not strike German teaching from parochial and private schools. Persons close to the state board of education said that neither the state board of education nor the law prescribe what shall be taught in private or parochial schools.

William L. Harding, governor of Iowa, made a patriotic address before the house of representatives. Governor Harding, who was one of the principal speakers at the Eleventh district conference of the Rotary clubs recently was introduced by Governor Goodrich and was extended a vote of thanks when he concluded his address. The Iowa governor urged that the United States "is a nation, not an asylum."

The all-time council and city health commission bill was reported to the house and the majority report, recommending indefinite postponement, was adopted.

A bill which will allow referendums on any subject to be voted on a general election was introduced in the senate by Senator Alldredge. The bill binds members of the legislature to consider the vote; and permits referendums on petition of 10 per cent of the voters of the state.

Senator Negly introduced a resolution, demanding that congress investigate the discharge and payment of conscientious objectors on orders of Secretary of War Baker. The resolution was referred to the committee on federal relations after Senator Van Auken took the floor against the resolution, declaring it was on insult to the federal government. Senator Alldredge introduced a resolution asking congress to pass a daylight-saving law, effective this summer.

Senator Duffey reintroduced the Goodrich highway commission bill with the revenue sections eliminated. Senator Bowers introduced a bill, fixing the salaries of officials of second-class cities, as follows: Mayor $6,000 and city controller $4,000.

Senator Van Auken presented a bill defining anarchism and providing punishment for such practices. A bill proposing an increase of from $6 to $10 a day as legislators' salaries was introduced by Senator Nejdl.

Adopts Income Tax Measure.

The Smith joint resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution to empower the legislature to fix the manner of levying for taxes against incomes was passed with only one dissenting vote. Senator Erskine cast the negative vote. Senator Smith informed the senate that he had drawn the resolution himself because he felt that the amendment previously approved empowering the legislature to provide for the classification of property for taxation might not include a tax on incomes. He advanced as his belief that there could be no fairer method of taxation than that on incomes and said the method was in effect in other states.

Several Hotels May Be Closed.

Inspection of hotels in Indianapolis, following the fire at the Palace hotel probably will result in orders soon for the closing of several hotels until fire laws are complied with, it was disclosed in a personal report to the board of public safety by J. H. Hilkene, director of fire prevention.

New Albany Plant Closes.

Due to a dispute between the workmen and the company relating to working conditions, the Ohio Falls Iron works at New Albany, employing 400 men, shut down for an indefinite period.

Department Is Undisturbed.

The house voted by 51 "ayes" to leave the building and loan department of the state under the proposed provisions of a bill to separate the state banking department from the office of the auditor of state and create a new department. When the bill came up for second reading, Representative Mendenhall introduced an amendment to reduce the salary of the proposed banking commissioner to not to exceed $3,500, the original bill providing for a salary of not to exceed $4,500. Amendment was adopted.

Farmers Plan State Union.

At a meeting in this city representatives from twenty counties of the state of Indiana formed tentative plans for a state-wide organization of farmers for the purpose of mutual benefit and to establish a better state of co-operation between the farmer and the consumer.

In speaking of the proposed organizations in the counties throughout the state, W. F. Franklin of Danville, president of the Hendricks County Federation of Farmers, said: "It is our purpose in getting the farmers of the state into some sort of a compact body to eliminate the feeling of uneasiness that seems to pervade among the farmers today and to better allow them to put their produce on the market in the best manner possible, and at the same time eliminate any possibility of the market becoming over-crowded. It is not our purpose, however, to formulate any organization along the lines of a nonpartisan league."

Mr. Franklin said that already twenty of the counties of the state had been organized, each with a membership of from 200 to 1,000, and that he hopes to have at least half the counties in a state of organization at an early date. Mr. Franklin was named state organizer at the meeting and will give the better part of his time in the near future looking after the consolidation of the farmers in the unorganized counties of the state.

The organizations among the farmers and those to be formed are along the same lines as those which prevail in Illinois, Iowa and other states. Plans are already under way to federate these different state bodies into a nation-wide organization of farmers. It was decided to hold the state meeting of farmers in this city, beginning March 25, to extend over a period of probably two days.

Cost to Operate Capitol's County.

It cost $1,654,046 for Marion county to administer its affairs during the year 1918, according to the annual report of the county auditor, made to the board of county commissioners. The officers of the county treasurer handled $9,948,069 during the year, the greater part of this amount being taxes collected and paid over to the city and state treasuries.

Miscellaneous expenses account for $930,073, the sinking fund with bonds and interest totaled $337,004, gravel road repairs cost $323,855, while the operation of the county tuberculosis hospital at Sunnyside cost $52,869.

Court operating expenses for the year were as follows: Juvenile, $27,395; criminal, $21,087; probate, $10,764; circuit, $7,500, and the five superior courts, $20, 324.

To maintain the county institutions the following expenditures were made: Poor asylum, $39,089; workhouse (part of the year), $16,131; Julietta asylum, $54,079; children's guardians' home, $22,676; detention home, $7,043; courthouse, $24,370; heat, light and water, $21,148.

House Amends "Bone Dry" Bill.

The Wright "bone dry" clincher bill, amended to modify or eliminate several provisions to which strong objection has been raised, was passed to engrossment in the house after an attempt to kill it was beaten by a vote of 61 to 33.

Amendments were added permitting the manufacture of wines and cordials for home consumption, striking out the section prohibiting bail pending appeals on liquor decisions and providing that the law shall not affect the possession of one quart of whisky or any part thereof held on April 2, 1918.

The real test of strength came on the motion of Representative Rowbottom, seconded by Representative Decker, that further consideration of the bill be indefinitely postponed. Representative Wright moved to lay the motion on the table and called for the "ayes" and "noes."

Railroads Great Problem—Watson.

Turn the railroads back to their lawful owners without any additional legislation and they will all be in the hands of receivers within ninety days, United States Senator James Watson of Indiana declared during his address at the Lincoln banquet of the Lincoln Protective club, Louisville, Ky., Senator Watson, a member of the senate interstate commerce commission, quoted figures to show that in January alone government operation of railroads showed a deficit of $79,000,000, and that during the first year of federal control there was a deficit of $880,000,000. "The problem of government ownership is today the greatest problem facing America," said Senator Watson.

Six New Lobbyists.

Six newly registered lobbyists have begun operations in legislative circles. They are Martin Hugg and Thomas D. McGee, both of Indianapolis, for the Indiana Moving-Picture association; Harry Reid of Indianapolis, for the Interstate Public Service company; Karl D. Norris of East Chicago, in the interest of motor vehicle legislation, and Charles Brooks of Indianapolis, for the Indianapolis local of the Indiana Firemen's association.

Few Changes Under Hines.

Few changes in the personnel of the various divisions of the state department of public instruction will be made by the shift in administrations March 15, when Horace Ellis, the present state superintendent, will be succeeded by L. N. Hines of Crawfordsville, elected last November. The changes in the department will be in the minor offices, it is understood. While Mr. Hines has not made public any of his appointments, it is said that the matter has been given close scrutiny for several weeks.

Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have brought relief and comfort to thousands of weak, suffering women.

An Indiana Case

Mrs. H. H. Walmer, 521 W. Wiley Ave., Bluffton, Ind., says: "I suffered from my kidneys and my back was weak and lame. In the morning when I got up, my back was stiff and I could hardly walk around. Black spots floated before my eyes and made me dizzy. I also had headaches and my kidneys didn't act right. There were puffy sacs under my eyes and my feet were swollen, too. I used about eight boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me."

Acid-Stomach Now Quickly Relieved

Those painful attacks of indigestion, heart-burn, belching, disgusting food-repeating; that puffy bloated, lumpy feeling after eating, dyspepsia and stomach miseries — all point to just one awful American disease—commonly known as ACID-STOMACH.

Fortunately there has been discovered a wonderful modern remedy—called EATONIC—that brings instant relief from all these stomach miseries because it absorbs the hurtful excess acid in the stomach and drives out the bloat and gas. You won't know you have a stomach, so free of pain you'll feel. Besides, it saves you from more serious ailments because it is a scientific fact that ACID-STOMACH frequently creates conditions which baffle the best medical skill. Many cases of chronic stomach trouble, biliousness, severe headache, general weakness, rheumatism, gout, lumbago, intestinal ulcer, cancer of the stomach, heart pains and even heart failure can be traced directly to Acid-Stomach.

Avoid these dangers—don't let acid-stomach wreck your health. Don't drag out your days feeling all in, down and out, weak and ailing. Keep the vital spark flashing. Eat the things you like and digest your food in comfort. Then you'll feel fine—be fit—mentally alert—have pep and punch—the power and will to do things.

Take EATONIC and give your stomach the help to put it in a fine, healthy condition so that it will digest your food perfectly and make every mouthful you eat register 100% in enriching your blood and building up your bodily strength.

Get a big box of EATONIC TABLETS from your druggist today. They taste good—just like a bit of candy. The cost is trifling. It is absolutely guaranteed. If it fails to relieve your stomach misery, your druggist will refund your money.

Obituary

Mary Ellen Trostel, daughter of George W. and Sarah Trostel, was born in Defiance County, Ohio, June 11, 1877. When four years of age she came with her parents to DeKalb County, Indiana, and since 1894 they have resided on the farm where she died February 9, 1919, aged 41 years, 7 months and 28 days.

When only three years of age she was stricken with the dread disease which ever afterward left its mark upon her, and in such a condition that she required constant and especial care which the parents and friends always cheerfully administered.

For one in her condition, who could enjoy so few of the real pleasures of life, she was of a most gentle and kind disposition. She leaves the parents, by whom she will be greatly missed, owing to the daily care and attention which they have given her for more than thirty-seven years.

She also leaves one brother, Abner W. of Garrett, and one sister America Ann Tustison, of St. Joe, and numerous other relatives, together with hosts of friends and neighbors who so often tried by cheering words to make her burdens lighter.

The funeral was held from the residence on last Wednesday at 11 a. m. Rev. C. O. Johnson, of St. Joe officiating. Interment at Alton cemetery.

$100 Reward, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Card of Thanks

For the many kind words of sympathy and the assistance rendered us by our friends and neighbors, we express our deep appreciation.

Geo. Trostel and Family.

Bessie Ione Gustin was born in Scipio Township, Allen County, Indiana, on November 1, 1902, and departed this life near St. Joe, DeKalb County, Indiana, at the hour of eight in the evening of February 9, 1919, aged 16 years, 3 months and 8 days.

The most of her life was spent in Scipio township, Allen county, until about a year ago when she with her mother and brothers moved near St. Joe where she died.

Bessie's life is an open book to all who knew her quiet, peaceful ambitions to do the right and having the courage to do the right at all times. She loved her school and was a diligent worker in all things pertaining to it. Reading was a great factor in her life and was always happy with a good book to read. She was an obedient and helpful little daughter and was loved by all whom she came in contact with.

About a year ago she had an attack of the measles which weakened her and mnemic conditions developed which later led to tubercular trouble which aided by influenza caused her untimely death. She never complained but was always known to say, "I'm all right," when asked as to her health. And we really feel that it is "all right" with Bessie for a more beautiful life for her short time with us is hard to be imagined. She was not afraid to die and passed into that Haven of Righteousness with no murmur against His will.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. A. K. Mumma, in the Scipio, M. E. church, and she was laid to rest in the family lot in the Scipio cemetery.

Card of Thanks

We express our thanks and appreciation for the assistance of our neighbors and friends in our trial, by the death of our daughter and sister. Also for the floral offerings.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Paulding, Paulding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

WORLD PEACE IN SAFE HANDS

Text of League Plan as Drawn Up by the Conference at Paris.

AGREE ON CONCERTED ACTION

Will Be Reduced to the Lowest Point Consistent With National Safety —United States Executive to Call First Session.

Paris, Feb. 14.—President Wilson, as chairman of the commission, read the full draft of the league of nations covenant at a meeting of the plenary commission at the Quai d'Orsay. The text follows:

COVENANT.

Preamble—In order to promote international co-operation and to secure international peace and security by the acceptance of obligations not to resort to war, by the prescription of open, just and honorable relations between nations, by the firm establishment of the understandings of international law as the actual rule of conduct among governments, and by the maintenance of justice and a scrupulous respect for all treaty obligations in the dealings of organized people with one another, the powers signatory to this covenant adopt this constitution of the league of nations:

ARTICLE I.

The action of the high contracting parties under the terms of this covenant shall be effected through the instrumentality of a meeting of a body of delegates representing the high contracting parties, of meetings at more frequent intervals of an executive council, and of a permanent international secretariat to be established at the seat of the league.

ARTICLE II.

Meetings of the body of delegates shall be held at stated intervals and from time to time as occasion may require for the purpose of dealing with matters within the sphere of action of the league. Meetings of the body of delegates shall be held at the seat of the league or at such other places as may be found convenient, and shall consist of representatives of the high contracting parties. Each of the high contracting parties shall have one vote, but may have not more than three representatives.

ARTICLE III.

The executive council shall consist of representatives of the United States of America, the British empire, France, Italy and Japan, together with representatives of four other states, members of the league. The selection of these four states shall be made by the body of delegates on such principles and in such manner as they think fit. Pending the appointment of these representatives of the other states, representatives of (blank left for names) shall be members of the executive council.

ARTICLE IV.

The first meeting of the body of delegates and the executive council shall be summoned by the President of the United States of America.

ARTICLE V.

The permanent secretariat of the league shall be established at (blank) which shall constitute the seat of the league. The secretariat shall comprise such secretaries and staff as may be required, under the general direction and control of a secretary general of the league, who shall be chosen by the executive council; the secretariat shall be appointed by the secretary general subject to confirmation by the executive council.

ARTICLE VI.

Representatives of the high contracting parties and officials of the league when engaged in the business of the league shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities and the buildings occupied by the league or its officials or by representatives attending its meetings shall enjoy the benefits of extra territoriality.

ARTICLE VII.

Admission to the league of states not signatories to the covenant and not named in the protocol as states to be invited to adhere to the covenant, requires the assent of not less than two-thirds of the states represented in the body of delegates, and shall be limited to fully self-governing countries, including dominions and colonies.

No state shall be admitted to the league unless it is able to give effective guarantees of its sincere intention to observe its international obligations, and unless it shall conform to such principles as may be prescribed by the league in regard to its naval and military forces and armaments.

ARTICLE VIII.

The high contracting parties recognize the principle that the maintenance of peace will require the reduction of national armament to the lowest point consistent with national safety and the enforcement by common consent of international obligations, having special regard to the geographical situation and circumstances of each state.

The high contracting parties agree that the manufacture by private enterprise of munitions and implements of war lends itself to grave objections, and direct the executive council to advise how the evil effects attendant upon such manufacture can be prevented, due regard being had to the necessities of those countries which are not able to manufacture for themselves the munitions and implements of war necessary for their safety.

ARTICLE IX.

A permanent commission shall be constituted to advise the league on the execution of the provisions of Article Eight and on military and naval questions generally.

ARTICLE X.

The high contracting parties shall undertake to respect and preserve, as against external aggression, the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all states, members of the league. In case of any such aggression, or in case of any threat or danger of such aggression, the executive council shall advise upon the means by which the obligation shall be fulfilled.

ARTICLE XI.

Any war or threat of war, whether immediately affecting any of the high contracting parties or not, is hereby declared a matter of concern to the league, and the high contracting parties reserve the right to take any action that may be deemed wise and effectual to safeguard the peace of nations.

ARTICLE XII.

The high contracting parties agree that should disputes arise between them which cannot be adjusted by the ordinary processes of diplomacy, they will in no case resort to war without previously submitting the questions and matters involved either to arbitration or to inquiry by the executive council, and until three months after the award by the arbitrators or a recommendation by the executive council; and that they will not even then resort to war as against a member of the league which complies with the award of arbitration or the recommendation of the executive council.

ARTICLE XIII.

The high contracting parties, whenever any dispute or difficulty shall arise between them which they recognize to be suitable to arbitration, and which cannot be satisfactorily settled by diplomacy, will submit the whole matter to arbitration. For this purpose the court of arbitration to which the case is referred shall be the court agreed on by the parties or stipulated in any convention existing between them. The high contracting parties agree that they will carry out in full good faith any award that may be rendered. In the event of any failure to carry out the award, the executive council shall propose what steps can best be taken to give effect thereto.

ARTICLE XIV.

The executive council shall formulate plans for the establishment of a permanent court of international justice and this court shall, when established, be competent to hear and determine any matter which the parties recognize as suitable for the submission to it for arbitration under the foregoing article.

ARTICLE XV.

If there should arise between states members of the league any dispute likely to lead to rupture, which is not submitted to arbitration as above, the high contracting parties agree that they will refer the matter to the executive council; either party to the dispute may give notice of the existence of the dispute to the secretary general, who will make all necessary arrangements for a full investigation and consideration thereof.

Where the efforts of the council lead to the settlement of the dispute, a statement shall be published indicating the nature of the dispute and the terms of settlement, together with such explanations as may be appropriate. If the dispute has not been settled, a report by the council shall be published, setting forth with all necessary facts and explanations the recommendations which the council thinks just and proper for the settlement of the dispute. If the report is unanimously agreed to by the members of the council other than the parties to the dispute, the high contracting parties agree that they will not go to war with any party which complies with the recommendations, and that if any party shall refuse so to comply, the council shall propose measures necessary to give effect to the reason. If no such unanimous report can be made, it shall be the duty of the majority and the privilege of the minority to issue statements indicating what they believe to be the facts and containing the reasons which they consider to be just and proper.

The executive council may in any case under this article refer the dispute to the body of delegates. The dispute shall be referred at the request of either party to the dispute, provided that such request must be made within fourteen days after the submission of the dispute. In any case referred to the body of delegates all the provisions of this article and of Article Twelve relating to the action and powers of the executive council shall apply to the action and powers of the body of delegates.

ARTICLE XVI.

Should any of the high contracting parties break or disregard its covenants under Article XII it shall thereby ipso facto be deemed to have committed an act of war against all the other members of the league, which hereby undertakes immediately to subject it to the severance of all trade or financial relations, the prohibition of all intercourse between their nationals and the nationals of the covenant-breaking state, and the prevention of all financial, commercial or personal intercourse between the nationals of the covenant-breaking state and the nationals of any other state, whether a member of the league or not.

It shall be the duty of the executive council in such case to recommend what effective military or naval force the members of the league shall severally contribute to the armed forces to be used to protect the covenants of the league.

ARTICLE XVII.

In the event of disputes between one state member of the league and another state which is not a member of the league the high contracting parties agree that the state of states not members of the league shall be invited to accept the obligations of membership in the league for the purposes of such dispute, upon such conditions as the executive council may deem just, and upon acceptance of any such invitation the above provisions shall be applied with such modifications as may be deemed necessary by the league.

In the event of a power so invited refusing to accept the obligations of membership in the league for the purposes of the league which in the case of a state member of the league would constitute a breach of Article XII, the provisions of Article XVI shall be applicable as against the state taking such action.

ARTICLE XVIII.

The high contracting parties agree that the league shall be entrusted with general supervision of the trade in arms and ammunition with the countries in which the control of this traffic is necessary in the common interest.

ARTICLE XIX.

To those colonies and territories which as a consequence of the late war have ceased to be under the sovereignty of the states which formerly governed them and which are inhabited by peoples not yet able to stand by themselves under the strenuous conditions of the modern world, there should be applied the principle that the wellbeing and development of such peoples form a sacred trust of civilization and that securities for the performance of this trust should be embodied in the constitution of the league.

The best method of giving practical effect to this principle is that the tutelage of such peoples should be entrusted to advanced nations who by reason of their resources, their experience or their geographical position, can best undertake this responsibility, and that this tutelage should be exercised by them as mandatory on behalf of the league.

Certain communities formerly belonging to the Turkish empire have reached a stage of development which their existence as independent nations can be provisionally recognized subject to the rendering of administrative advice and assistance by mandatory power until such time as they are able to stand alone. The wishes of these communities must be a principal consideration in the selection of the mandatory power.

There are territories, such as southwest Africa and certain of the south Pacific isles, which, owing to the sparseness of their population, or their small size, or their remoteness from the centers of civilization, or their geographical continuity to the mandatory state, and other circumstances, can be best administered under the laws of the mandatory state as integral portions thereof, subject to the safeguards above mentioned, in the interests of the indigenous population.

In every case of mandate, the mandatory state shall render to the league an annual report in reference to the territory committed to its charge.

ARTICLE XX.

The high contracting parties will endeavor to secure and maintain fair and humane conditions of labor for men, women and children, both in their own countries and in all countries to which their commercial and industrial relations extend, and to that end agree to establish as part of the organization of the league a permanent bureau of labor.

ARTICLE XXI

The high contracting parties agree that provision shall be made through the instrumentality of the league to secure and maintain freedom of transit and equitable treatment for the commerce of all states members of the league, having in mind among other things, special arrangements with regard to the necessities of the regions devastated during the war of 1914-1918.

ARTICLE XXII.

The high contracting parties agree to place under the control of the league of international bureaus general treaties if the parties to such treaties consent. Furthermore, they agree that all such international bureaus to be constituted in future shall be placed under control of the league.

ARTICLE XXIII.

The high contracting parties agree that every treaty or international engagement entered into hereafter by any state member of the league shall be forthwith registered with the secretary general, and as soon as possible published by him, and that no such treaty or international engagement shall be binding until so registered.

ARTICLE XXIV.

It shall be the right of the body of delegates from time to time to advise the reconsideration by states members of the league of treaties which have become inapplicable, and of international conditions of which the continuance may endanger the peace of the world.

ARTICLE XXV.

The high contracting parties severally agree that the present covenant is accepted as abrogating all obligations inter se which are inconsistent with the terms thereof, and solemnly engage that they will not hereafter enter into any engagements inconsistent with the terms thereof. In case any of the powers signatory hereto or subsequently admitted to the league shall, before coming a party to this covenant, have undertaken any obligations which are inconsistent with the terms of this covenant, it shall be the duty of such power to take immediate steps to procure its release from such obligations.

ARTICLE XXVI.

Amendments to this covenant will take effect when ratified by the states whose representatives compose the executive council and by three-fourths of the states whose representatives compose the body of delegates.

BERNSTORFF WILL NOT ATTEND PEACE SESSION.

President Ebert, in Interview, Puts End to Rumor as to Appointment of Diplomat to Peace Conference.

Weimar, Germany, Feb. 15.—Count von Bernstorff will not go to the peace conference as a German delegate; Germany plans, for the time being at least, a people's army on the basis of general conscription; Germany will announce within a few days her intention to carry out complete disarmament and demobilization, and a commission made up of the center, democratic and socialist parties is now discussing details of the new program.

These points were made by Friedrich Ebert, the new president of Germany, in an informal talk with foreign newspaper men. He answered questions of American and English correspondents, asked after he had read a formal statement following the lines of his recent address, in which he emphasized Germany's intention to rehabilitate herself.

The question of disarmament was first raised, since reports from the peace conference indicate that it is occupying a large place in discussions there. President Ebert frankly astonished his hearers by his declaration that a commission was already working on the problem. He said Germany in future was going to have only an army of defense. It was at the very end of his talk that he admitted that this guard will be raised by conscription.

GERMANY MUST PAY

Hun Ships Should Replace Vessels Sunk by U-Boats.

MUST PAY AND PAY AND PAY

Stolen Machinery Being Used by the German Factories, Together With Destroyed Property, Must Be Replaced.

By WRIGHT A. PATTERSON.

More than two million American soldiers crossed the Atlantic that they might help fight the battle of civilization and defeat the selfish ambitions of the people of the German nation. I crossed the ocean in a convoy which carried some thirty thousand of these men, and for nearly fourteen days it was my privilege to share with them the dangers of the sea and the dangers of the German submarines. I saw these men crowded into the hold of small ships that they might the more quickly go to the rescue of that civilization for which we were fighting; I saw them as they were tossed about by the terrific seas driven by gales that reached a maximum of 100 miles an hour; I saw them die of exposure as the seas beat in upon them; I saw their bodies consigned to the waters of the broad Atlantic; in the convoy with which I crossed one of the ships went down in the storm, carrying with it nearly five hundred of these American soldiers.

And these things happened because the German people had run amuck, driven to it by a selfish ambition for world domination and loot.

Are these people to escape a just retribution? Are they to escape payment?

I saw in Europe the mourning relatives of women and children who had perished in the Irish sea because of the depredations of a German U-boat. These women and children were traveling in a merchant ship on peaceful erranda, but they were sent to their deaths without warning, and without any opportunity of being saved.

Must Pay for Many Crimes.

Should the people who were responsible for these deaths of women and children escape without punishment for their crimes?

That civilization which defeated the Huns will demand that Germany pay for the crimes committed on sea and land. She must pay for the lives and the ships lost at sea, and she must pay for the terrible destruction of lives and property she caused on land.

But how shall Germany pay? She has not the money now with which to replace the ships or rebuild the French and Belgian cities and towns or replace the machinery and other valuable property she has stolen.

But Germany has ships and property and labor, and with these she can pay a part. Germany's ships should be given to the neutral nations to replace those the German U-boats destroyed. Germany should be forced to recompense these nations ton for ton so far as her merchant marine will accomplish that. Germany's ship yards and German labor should be forced to build more ships with which to replace the merchant vessels of both neutral and allied nations sunk by German submarines.

German labor should be put to work under guard of allied troops in the fields of France and of Belgium that these fields may again be put under cultivation. Germany has for generations called her youth to the colors for training as soldiers, and with these soldiers she has attempted to destroy the freedom of the world. Let her continue to call her youth to the colors, but instead of having guns put in their hands let them be put behind the plow in Belgium and France that they may remove the unexploded shells with which these once fertile fields are sown. Germany is responsible for the condition of these fields, and the German people should be forced to accept the hazards of their reclamation.

Let the German youth, paid by German money, be assigned the task of rebuilding the destroyed cities and towns and villages so far as that can be done. Germany was able to do without the constructive labor of millions of her men while they were engaged in destroying these cities, towns and villages, and now let her continue to do without this constructive labor while her men rebuild that which they have so wantonly destroyed. Germany's men have been satisfied to work at the destructive trade of the soldier for the meager pay of a German soldier, and now let them be employed at constructive work in the sections they have destroyed, for the same meager pay, and this to be paid by Germany.

The German people have stolen from Belgium and France much of the machinery and other valuable and portable property they found in the invaded districts. Much of the stolen machinery is running today in German factories, and with it the German people are earning a livelihood while the people of Belgium and northern France are idle because of a lack of opportunity. German employers are prepared to reap a trade harvest as soon as they are again allowed to enter the field of world trade because they have this machinery. With it they can capture the markets that have been held by the French and Belgian employers, who have been put out of business by the depredations of Germany.

The immediate return of this stolen machinery and other property should be forced, and where its return is not possible it should be replaced with equivalent machinery from German factories, and the machinery and property destroyed should be replaced in the same way just so far as that is possible.

Force Payment for All Damage.

These methods will pay but a small part of the debt of the Geramn people to the world, but they will aid in some degree in undoing what the Huns have so ruthlessly done. Along with these should be a money compensation for the nations that have suffered so cruelly at the hands of the German nation and the German people. A money compensation the payment of which should be extended over a period of many, many years, that not only the present, but future generations of the German people may learn, from the effort that is needed to pay, that selfish, wanton war is unprofitable.

Judging from the German prisoners with whom I talked in France, I do not believe that the Germans are today a repentant people. They feel that they are temporarily a defeated people, but many of them expressed the thought that there would come a time of reckoning for the world when Germany would come into her own and German "kultur" would be forced up on the people of the world.

It will take many, many years to breed out of the German people their present ideas of world conquest, and this can only be accomplished by making the generations yet to come pay and pay until they, too, have learned that war for selfish purposes, war to gratify selfish ambitions, can never be profitable.

STEEL DRUM REMOVES BARK

Labor-Saving Device That Does the Work of Many Men, and Does It Rapidly and Well.

A new labor-saving device employed by a pulp manufacturer is a big revolving drum in which a number of logs are placed and tumbled about until all the bark has been removed, preparatory to grinding them up for pulp. This method of handling, says Electrical Experimenter, does away with the task of removing the bark with knives. The drum is 80 feet long and about 10 feet in diameter, and is composed of angle-iron strips fastened inside metal hoops, one edge of each strip projecting inward, and throwing the logs about. Not only does the drum dispense with the labor of several men, but it saves a considerable amount of wood which is wasted by removing the bark in the old way. The labor involved in handling the logs is further reduced by using a conveyor which brings them to the drum and carries them away.

LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE IF SICK, CROSS, FEVERISH

HURRY, MOTHER! REMOVE POISONS FROM LITTLE STOMACH, LIVER, BOWELS.

GIVE CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS AT ONCE IF BILIOUS OR CONSTIPATED.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels needs a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative;" they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—Adv.

GROWTH ON TREE PUZZLES

To Produce Remarkable Formation, Alaska Spruce Must Have Rotated, According to Experts.

A cross section of a great old spruce tree from Alaska tells the story of a tree which executed a spin, like a ballet-dancer. This cross-section shows a most peculiar structure, which has caused a great deal of speculation among the various foresters throughout the country, and a very interesting explanation is advanced in American Forestry.

It is known that a tree growing at a slant forms on the lower side of the trunk a dense reddish wood known as "rotholz." This spiral in this case is of such sort, and as it is a continuous formation, winding from the center to within half an inch from the circumference, it is surmised that it was growing in an inclined position on the edge of a glacier, where by some shifting it was caused to rotate, so that all sides of the tree were successively on the downward side. Thus, as the tree grew, and its rotation continued slowly, the "rotholz" developed into a spiral.

ONE TYPE OF POULTRY FOR EACH COMMUNITY

The Community Breeding Club Promotes and Develops One Breed and by Centralization Improves the Marketing Conditions.

COMMUNITY CLUB GAINING FAVOR

Each Member Can Work Out Problems in Direct Co-operation With His Neighbors.

HAPHAZARD WAYS REPLACED

Fowls of General Purpose Type Are Most Popular—Advisable for Farmers to Get Backing of Local Business Men.

When one speaks of Petaluma, Cal., his imagination immediately pictures flocks of single-comb White Leghorn hens. The mention of the Little Compton district of Rhode Island is synonymous with Rhode Island Reds, while Vineland, N. J., spells single-comb White Leghorns to poultrymen. Community centralization for the promotion and improvement of one breed of poultry in each of these cases has resulted in the development of extensive and profitable poultry industries. The United States department of agriculture commends the idea to other communities.

One Standard for Community Hens.

Boys' and girls' poultry clubs in various sections of the country have been an education to both young and old and have acted as pioneers for the subsequent formation of community poultry breeding associations. Each member is interested in the betterment of one breed and can work out his local problems in direct co-operation with his neighbors, the common interest of the locality being centered in the improvement of this breed. With the growth of the business the district soon becomes known as a source of large supplies of fowls and eggs for market, eggs for hatching, breeding stock and day-old chicks. Increased interest in the farm hens and the practice of approved poultry management always replace the previous haphazard, shiftless methods of handling fowls after the co-operative community club has been organized.

The Farmville (Va.) Barred Plymouth Rock association is an interesting example of what can be accomplished in community hen raising. During the first five months of its history this organization sold $7,500 worth of poultry products. The club has now been incorporated with capital stock of $1,500, and hires a manager to handle its business affairs. The last report from this association shows that the members had on hand 6,000 Barred Plymouth Rock hens, while they had marketed 1,000 capons during the spring.

Seventeen counties in Kentucky have organized community poultry clubs recently and have distributed 83,000 eggs among their members for the foundations of one-breed flocks. Christian county, Kentucky, has already established itself as a White Leghorn district.

Hens for Community Clubs.

The fowls of the general-purpose type, such as Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes or Rhode Island Reds, are most popular for the use of community poultry clubs. Most of the members of the associations are farmers who wish to raise dual-purpose fowl which are adapted for both egg and meat production. However, some special-purpose egg clubs have been formed, such as the Franklin county (Virginia) White Leghorn association, composed of 75 members, which markets its eggs in New York. There are six similar White Leghorn county clubs in Tennessee, which also ship their eggs to New York.

How to Start a Club.

In organizing a community poultry club it is always advisable for the farmers to get the backing of the local business men. Generally when the tradesmen are shown that the "get-together hen club" will be an agricultural asset to the community they are not remiss about aiding the enterprise. Funds secured from the business men may be devoted to the purchase of purebred stock for distribution among the farmer members of the organization.

The local banks in Overton county, Tennessee, have been of great assistance to the home poultry club in that they advanced $1,000 for the purchase of breeding pens, consisting of ten hens and one cock each. These pens of breeders were distributed among the association members, each person who took a pen agreeing to return to the bank after the first year 20 pullets in payment for the 10 hens or pullets and the male bird. These 20 purebred pullets, with two male birds, were then divided into two pens and given under the same conditions to two new members the following year. This endless chain system is to be continued for a period of five years. In order to repay the original loan with reasonable interest the club members are obliged to dispose of their mongrel hens when they have ceased to be productive, while additional funds which accumulate over and above the original allotment of $1,000 are deposited at the bank to further other club activities.

Shows Are Helpful.

Annual poultry shows have been attractive round-up features of the operations of several of the community clubs. Fowls raised by the members of the association are exhibited in competition for prizes presented by local merchants and business men in the sections where the shows are held. These exhibitions, in addition to being of special educational value, are also effective in promoting friendly competition among the members of the club. Instructive lectures on poultry management usually are delivered at these gatherings by representatives of the state agricultural college or other qualified parties.

WINTER CONDITIONS

In the spring the production of eggs on the farm is an easy matter. Fowls which are at liberty to roam find an abundance of green and animal feed on their range, which with grain furnishes a perfect ration for laying hens. In addition to this they get plenty of exercise and fresh air. There is a valuable lesson here that every poultry keeper can learn from nature. So far as lies within his power the poultryman should aim to make winter conditions spring-like.

Cheap Containers Best.

The cost and treatment of containers have much to do with success in marketing by parcel post. A container should be cheap, neat, and light. The amounts involved in most parcel-post shipments of farm produce do not warrant the use of an expensive, heavy package because of the first cost and the charges for postage. The container should be adapted to the particular produce shipped and should be whole and clean.

The trouble of returning empty containers often influences people to discontinue parcel-post marketing. The city dweller often has little room to keep containers, and it is not practicable to return them singly, for the cost of postage is high on small shipments. Then, too, it is often inconvenient to take a bulky package to the post office station. If the customer can not conveniently store them and return three or four at one time the producer should, if possible, use containers that are cheap enough for a single service. Containers should never be bought with price as the only consideration, however, as they should be strong enough to carry the contents safely. For many shipments cheap splint baskets are satisfactory and the cost is so small as to make the return of them unnecessary. Any plan concerning the return of containers should be clearly understood by both producer and consumer before shipments are made.

Raising Ducks.

If ducklings are raised under hens it is advisable to confine the hens and allow the ducklings free range, as the hens are apt to wander too far away with their broods.

The DAIRY

REGULATING NECESSARY

During the rush of spring work milkings in the morning will be done on time but at night the danger is in leaving this work for the women folks to do or until after dark. No graver mistake can be made. A cow permitted to lose her milk flow cannot again be brought up without every pound of grain costing two prices. Don't save on one hand to lose on the other.

PROBLEMS IN WINTER FEEDS

For Economical Production Wage-Earning Cow Should be Fed Its Full Capacity.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The problems involved in winter feeding are usually distinctly different from those of summer feeding. Pasture (or green feed), usually the basis of summer feeding, is not available. Broadly speaking, there are two factors involved in this problem, first, to satisfy the needs of the cow and, second, to suit the pocketbook. The cow must have an ample supply of feed of a palatable nature, and this feed must be supplied at a price which will permit a profit on the feeding operation.

In general farm practice it is advisable, so far as it is economical, to use the feeds produced on the farm. Often the freight rates and the middle-man's charges, if saved, will constitute a good profit for the feeder. This is especially true of roughages. Such feeds are bulky and in most cases must be baled at a considerable cost; the freight rates also are much greater in proportion to the nutrients contained than on the grains.

When land is high in price and the markets for dairy products are good, it is often impracticable to grow all the feeds on the farm. In such cases arrangements first should be made to grow the roughage, on account of the high cost of transporting these feeds. In most cases the prime object of the farm under such conditions will be to supply the greatest possible quantity of roughage.

It is a difficult problem to provide a system of winter feeding of roughage which will make the best use of home-grown roughage and at the same time insure full production.

In addition to containing the proper nutrients in the right proportion, part of the ration should be of a succulent nature. It is extremely difficult, if not impossible, to keep cows in full production throughout the winter without some succulent feed. There are two chief sources of succulent feed for winter feeding—silage and roots. Of these, silage is in almost universal use by commercial dairymen. While almost any green crop may be used for silage, the heavy yields of corn, as compared with other crops, and its comparative ease of handling, together with its keeping qualities, make it the leading silage crop. Where the cost of land and the prices of dairy products are high, and the system of farming of necessity is intensive, it is questionable whether the dairyman should consider any other silage crop.

ROOTS FOR FEEDING CATTLE

Chief Function Is to Supply Succulence—Have Special Application for Cows Only.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The chief function of roots in cattle feeding is to supply a succulent feed. Under general farm conditions the quantity of nutrients grown per acre in root crops is small in comparison to the cost of production. These root crops, however, can be preserved during the winter equally well whether large or small quantities are fed each day, and therefore have special application when only a few cows are to be fed. Of the different root crops mangel wurzels furnish the greatest yield per acre. Other kinds of beets and turnips and carrots may be used. Turnips, however, should be fed after milking rather than before, as they cause a bad flavor in the products if fed immediately before milking.

FAMILY WITH NO COW IS MISSING SOMETHING

CARE FOR HOME MILK-PRODUCER

Good Cow Will Furnish All the Milk and Butter Needed by Average Farm Family.

GRASS SUCCULENT IN SPRING

House for Animal Should Be Dry, Well Lighted and Protected From Disagreeable Weather—Provide Fresh, Clean Water.

Nearly every farm, suburban or small-town home can keep a family cow economically, and if the cow is a good one, she will produce all the milk and butter needed by the average family, say dairy specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

When pasturing or tethering ground is available to furnish feed for a cow from four to six months during the year, a family cow can be kept at small cost. During the winter it will be necessary to buy feed, but even with the present cost of commercial feeds, milk can be produced economically. Spring is a good time to begin with the family cow, for there is an abundance of nourishing and succulent grass—the natural cow feed—at this time.

Cow's Home.

Cows are not very particular about where they live. They do not insist on an elaborate or expensive home. Usually there is a building on the place which can be converted into a stable for the cow at small cost. Even if it is necessary to build a stable, it need not cost a great deal. But in order to remain healthy and be able to produce the maximum amount of milk, the cow insists on a few essentials about her home: It must be dry, well lighted, and furnish protection from cold and disagreeable weather.

There should be four square feet of window space for each cow, say department specialists. Windows should be on the south side if possible, and so placed as to admit abundant sunlight in all parts of the stable, particularly the floor. Sunlight is a germ killer.

The cow should have a good-sized feed manger. The wise cow owner keeps the manger well filled with good feed, for if he has the right kind of a cow the more feed she eats the more milk she will produce. The manger should be provided with a halter or simple, homemade stanchion. The cow's stall should be from 3½ to 4 feet wide. To keep the animal dry and clean, build a raised platform, preferably of concrete, or if this is not practicable, tightly fitted boards may be used. For cows of the smaller breeds, such as Jerseys and Guernseys, the platform should be 4 feet 8 inches long, and for larger animals, such as Holsteins, 5 feet long. The stalls should be kept clean and well bedded.

Health First Consideration.

In selecting the family cow, health should be the first consideration. A diseased cow does not produce milk economically, and frequently it is unfit for human food. The family cow should be tuberculin tested.

Her ability to produce large quantities of milk economically is the next qualification. If rich milk is desired—that is, milk containing a high percentage of butter fat, an animal of the Jersey or Guernsey breed should be selected. Holsteins and Ayrshires produce a larger quantity of milk than the animals of the two breeds mentioned, but their milk is not so rich in butterfat.

During the spring, summer and fall the cow should get most of her feed from pasture. If a lot properly fenced is not available, it is easy to stake or tether the cow. This is the practice in the Isle of Jersey and in other highly developed dairy sections of European countries, where some of the best cows in the world are raised. If the cow is to be tethered, she should have a halter, a 15-foot to 20-foot light iron chain with a swivel in it, and a stake.

The cow should have plenty of fresh, clean water at least twice a day. All good milk producers need lots of water, and cow owners should remember that milk itself is 87 per cent water. Cows which produce 25 pounds of milk a day require 75 pounds or more of water daily, and instances are on record of heavy milkers consuming more than 300 pounds of water a day.

Producing Clean Milk.

The cow should be groomed, bedded and fed after milking rather than before, as these operations fill the stable air with dust and bacteria which are almost sure to get into the milk. To have healthy animals is one of the first essentials of the production of clean milk. If the cow is diseased, her milk is apt to contain disease-producing bacteria, or be otherwise abnormal, and such milk is not clean or safe as food, even though there is no visible dirt in it. To aid in the production of clean milk and to help keep cows healthy, the stable should be cleaned at least twice a day and fresh bedding supplied.

All dairy utensils should be kept thoroughly clean. This is essential to prevent the rapid growth of harmful bacteria which hasten the souring of milk. All utensils should be washed clean, then rinsed and sterilized. A simple, home-made sterilizer, described in Farmers' Bulletin 748 of the United States department of agriculture, can be made for $8 or $9, and should be used by all dairymen, and even owners of one cow.

CONVENIENCES FOR COWS

Improvements or conveniences for cows will greatly lessen the labor required in their care, make it more pleasant, and at the same time cause the cows to produce more milk. The cow must be kept in clean, comfortable quarters in order to produce the largest quantity of milk and butter. The essentials of such quarters are: Plenty of light; plenty of fresh air, with no drafts; convenience and a floor that can easily be kept clean.

Texas Claims Champion.

Williamson county, Texas, claims the national pig club champion, according to the local county agent. The name of the claimant is Elton Sartor, who started with a 68-pound registered big-type Poland China sow pig, selected from a famous herd in Kansas. It cost $25. The first litter from this sow was 11 pigs, which were sold when they were six months and four days old and weighed 2,233 pounds, for $527.85. From the second litter of 12 pigs the boy sold nine, for which he received $225. Adding $500, the amount refused for the sow, and deducting the feed bill of $172, the gain was $1,052.85, which was the profit made in fifteen months on an initial investment of $25. Four of Elton's fellow club members made a profit of over $500, eight over $250, and eleven over $100 out of one sow pig each in the past year.

Keep a Family Cow.

If you have a garden to supply the table with fresh vegetables, a backyard flock of chickens to furnish meat and eggs, why not go a step further as a food producer and keep a family cow? As vegetables, eggs and poultry meat can, as a rule, be produced more economically at home where conditions are favorable than they can be bought, so can milk and butter with all the by-products made from them. Vegetables fresh from the home garden taste better than purchased produce, fried chickens are better when the fowls come from the backyard flock, and milk produced by the family cow is in the same class.

Cheap Feeds for Beef.

Beef cattle, especially steers and dry cows that are being wintered, may be given cheaper feeds than grain, such as well-cured corn stover, straw, and hay, with 1 or 2 pounds of cottonseed meal.

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXXIII ST. JOE DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 27 1919 NO. 9

Letter From San Diego.

Interesting Description of Her Winter Trip in California, Is that of Mrs. J. D. Leighty, Enjoying the Trip, But After All "There's No Place Like Home."

Wm. Curie is in receipt of a letter from Mrs. J. D. Leighty of San Diego, Cal., in which she says: "I am inclined to talk a little about California and San Diego in particular. I will enclose a program that was carried out at Balboa Park which is but one square from where we live. It is a tract of 1,400 acres where the Panama American Exposition was held four years ago, and is today one of the most beautiful parks in the world. The buildings are all intact and are used as Naval Training Camp. When we first came there were about 10,000 Jackies here, today there are 3,000, all in line for the "Roosevelt Memorial" with about as many soldiers from Camp Kearney. All of San Diego was also in attendance but the beauty of the park is what I set out to tell you about. The natural beauty is first. "The finest I ever saw in all my many travels. The buildings are only stucco. Since they were built vines of all description cover them with the brightest flowers and tropical trees from every land are growing in and around this beautiful spot with the Bay on one side. In all my busy years, more than are alloted to man I have seen nothing to compare with it. I visited St. Peters at Rome, the Palace at Versailles and Buckingham Palace in England, the Alps in Switzerland, but nothing compares with this.

This February 9, 1919 has been the greatest day of my life. I shall never regret my trip to California. I tell you William our country is the greatest on earth, so diversified with summer and winter, flowers and snow, mountains and valleys and every comfort that God could make for the comfort and pleasure of his children.

We are pleasantly situated and at present I am in fair health, expect to be home by the 28th. of March, no place like home. After all the music and speeches were fine." All out doors: The soldiers and Jackies made a fine appearance and every thing went off in good style, everybody smiling. About 15,000 tourists from every corner of the globe. The citizens here are a mixed crowd. Indians and Mexicans and Japs meet you every where Most of the Japanese are in native dress which adds to the oriental appearance of the city.

With kindest regards to all the friends, I am

Very truly,
Mrs. Kate A. Leighty

Local Apples in Market.

A communication was received this week by THE NEWS, from John R. Leighty, of St. Louis, Mo., in regards to his success of selling some of his Ben Davis apples on the Chicago market in competition with the Oregon apples. As is well know, the Leighty orchard produced about 1,000 bushels more Bens this year than what the local trade wanted at the picking season. They were placed in the cellar and lately shipped to Chicago. The top price was $6.50 for A—1 Bens and Mr. Leighty sold for $6 40 with competition from the large western growers. The seconds brought $5.50 and in all an average of $6 25 per barrel was realized. This is convincing that the fruit raised at St. Joe is equal to that of the western states.

Roosevelt Memorial

A very pleasing service was held at the M. P. church Sunday evening, being announced as a Roosevelt Memerial. Appropriate music was rendered and the address was delivered by Attorney J. M. Life of Auburn. The speaker went back into the ages of history and showed how God had brought forth men out of the nation for particular tasks that was upon them. Linking the spiritual problems of ancient days along with the great world reforms. The speaker said: "You can count on the fingers of one hand all the men of our nation who were of high pareptage and birth, who lived for those about them and not for selfish interests entirely. First, George Washington, the father of our country; second and third, the two Adams and fourth, Theodore Roosevelt.

A high tribute was paid these men of our nation. Furthier he said, The last named man was a man of his own mind and was not moved by others, staying by his principals to the finish, for which we must give him credit, but not always right however.

Called to New York

Sunday morning, F. M. Monroe received a telegram from New York to the effect that Vernie was seriously ill, having just landed at Ellis Island, on Saturday from overseas. Mr. Monroe, wife and daughter-in-law left on No. 10, due here at 12:15 p. m. for New York. The report came as a great shock to St. Joe, as his previous letters stated that he was well and expected to arrive home about April 1st.

Carpenter-Seltenright Nuptial

Darrell Widney Carpenter, aged 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Carpenter, one of Concord township's most prosperous young farmers, living just north of St. Joe, and Miss Hazel Seltenright, aged 23, of near Butler, were united in marriage at Auburn last Thursday afternoon, by the Rev. Bourns of the Presbyterian church. The newlyweds will live on a farm, probably the C. J. Hadsell farm at Coburn's Corners, recently purchased by D. L. Carpenter. Darrell is a fine young man, energetic and active in the farming business. He is a graduate of the St. Joe high school and for a few terms he taught country schools before settling down to farming. We extend congratulations.

The Boys On The Rhine.

Getting Tired of the Watch on the Rhine, Many are Really Homesick and Want to See the Good Old U. S. A. Accomodations are Good but they Fail to Satisfy.

The following is a part of a clipping taken from an American news paper in France, received from Paul Perry, that gives one an idea of the way the boys are living in Hunland.

"The American soldiers composing the Army of Occupation are certainly a homesick lot of boys. They have fought hard and have accomplished their part as victors in the war, and now they want to go home instead of "sitting on the lid in Germany," as they express it.

The troops covering the front of the army sector on the perimeter of thirty kilometres are unfortunately billeted in very small villages, and in many of these villages there is no form of recreation of any kind for the men. When the long march from the line held on November 11 to the Rhine was comple ed, they were all glad to have been chosen for the trip, and they were perfectly willing and satisfied at the end to pass a week or so in getting cleaned up and rested after the strenuous work they had been doing. But now that they are refreshed and realize that the war is behind them and have no excitement to look forward to, their thoughts turn to nothing but home. All this gives them a certain restlessness that can only be satisfied by entertainment.

It is not because they are not comfortably billeted that they are homesick. They all have good quarters, and for the first time in months (and in some cases for more than a year) practically every soldier in the Army of Occupation has a bed to sleep in. Many of them live in handsome villas along the Rhine, with private baths and electric lamps at their beds to read by. And they confess that they love that "Schlossing," as they call it, for a short time, but a castle on the Rhine is far from being a cottage with a little girl in it in the U. S. A., and that is the one idea of the happiness for the doughboy today. They are entirely dependent upon themselves for any form of amusement in Hunland, for they do not like the Huns, and the orders are so strict about fraternizing with them that they do not so much as speak to them."

The boys are not anxious that they be sent to Russia and one expresses himself as follows:—

"There will be one big bunch of deserters if we are ordered to Russia," he said. "All of us wanted to come to France, but there is not a soldier in the whole army that I can find who wants to go to Russia. The monotony of being here in Germany is bad enough, but the thought of going to Russia is more than I can stand," and he seemed to be voicing the sentiments of all.

Have Waited Long Enough.

In an effort to collect some of our accounts due on subscription collected, we found it necessary to leave an account with Justice J. C. Bailey for collection by suing. Rather than to pay the account at first, some additional charges were made by delaying the matter. We still have a number of accounts due us and we shall proceed to collect them unless some effort is made by the parties to square things.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

TO INVESTIGATE COURTS-MARTIAL

William E. Borah, United States senator from Idaho, is a prominent figure just now in connection with a probable congressional investigation of the general subject of courts-martial in the United States army. Says Senator Borah:

"So many complaints have been laid before me that I have asked that the war department furnish the senate complete data on all court-martial cases. After this has been obtained, hearings may be necessary to bring out additional facts. It is my intention to ask President Wilson to issue a general amnesty to all prisoners convicted and sentenced to prison by courts-martial. This is that we may take the taste of the war out of our mouths. It is another step toward our old-time ideals of democracy and justice."

The question has also been brought to public attention by a speech in the senate by Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, chairman of the committee on military affairs, and by an address by President George T. Page of the American Bar association.

It is charged that a startling inequality exists in the severity of sentences imposed on different men for the same offenses; that undue sevrity is exercised for minor infractions of military discipline; that courts-martial have been composed in some instances of men not qualified either by training or temperament to sit as judges.

A GERMAN WHO SPEAKS HIS MIND

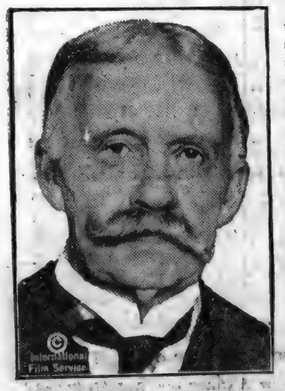
Maximilian Harden, editor of Die Zukunft in Berlin, seems to be the only responsible man in Germany who dares speak his mind. He writes in an issue of his newspaper now at hand, among other things:

"And I must add the fact that one of them, the all highest, at once betook himself to a foreign land. Even the supreme war lord, before the conclusion of peace, chose the deserter's path. This fact must at last have opened the eyes of even those who still believed in that shimmering idol.

"Now all the secret plottings and writings must be brought to the light. . . . Hesitate no longer, ye who now rule, to publish the unambiguous proof in the archives, to unmask the liars!

"Germans, you shall not, as yesterday you did for princes, excellencies, bank presidents, ministerial directors, today fawn upon the favor of workers and soldiers' councils. You shall be decent fellows, letting your action be determined by your honest convictions, and devil a care whether you please anyone or not."

TO SUPPLANT TURKISH MISRULE



President Harry Pratt Judson of the University of Chicago, back from a carefully planned trip through Persia and European Turkey, says that the establishment of a totally new civilization and a government structure for the near East to supplant Turkish rule should not be overlooked among the many problems to be considered by the proposed league of nations. He says: "There were a thousand pictures one could see of conditions in Turkey, or what, God willing, will never be Turkey again. We found all society broken down; all its foundations worn away; people wandered in the mountains, sleeping under wintry skies and dying by the thousand. This is the result of centuries of tyranny. We must reconstruct society from the foundations. The problem is not simply shifting a society or government where there is one already established; it is a case of establishing order where none exists. Turkish armies are broken up and the former Turkish soldiers have become robbers and bandits. There is no peace, no safety, no assurance of life from day to day.

"All the old injustices must be wiped out for all time. We must establish justice and order, and then, of course, we must give them life. None of the conditions in the shaken parts of the world draws so upon our heartstrings as does the near East. In this work America must not be left out."

AN AMERICAN RED CROSS LEADER

No one is better qualified to speak of the American woman's service in the war and of the Red Cross as America's initial instrument in carrying the message of her sympathy and co-operation to the people of France than Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, who has returned home on a furlough of two months after having been in the war zone for nearly four years.

She was in France at the time of Germany's invasion. It was she who was responsible for the founding of the American Ambulance hospital, at Neuilly, now United States Military Hospital No. 1. What she accomplished during those first three horrible years of the war is past telling. It is sufficient to know that Mrs. Vanderbilt's name has become, throughout France and Italy, the symbol of America's highest type of womanhood.

Mrs. Vanderbilt has run the gamut of women's war service, having known what it was, innumerable times, to be under fire, to sleep out of doors, to be cold and hungry.

"Every American woman over there who was there for service and not for a good time, did whatever came to her to do," she says. "We all did anything there was to do in the early days, not thinking about it as doing disagreeable work, but taking it as a high privilege to be a small factor in this great fight for right."

Her principal work the last year and a half has been as directress in charge of the American Red Cross canteen in France.

HIGHWAY BILL IS SENT TO SENATE

Lower House by Vote of 82 to 7 Passes One of the Most Important Measures.

APPROVES TAX REFORM BILL

Provides That All Kinds of Property Be Assessed at 50 Per Cent of Its True Market Value Instead of 100 Per Cent.

Indianapolis.—The measure creating a state highway commission and the reform tax bill now are in a fair way to become laws, possibly at a very early date. These two vastly important bits of legislation have been passed by the lower house of the legislature and sent to the senate. Important amendments were made in the tax reform measure and the highway commission bill went through under suspension of the rules.

Although the highway commission bill was passed 82 to 7, Representative Butler, wanting to make certain that the bill contains specific provisions that all contracts awarded and expenditures made by the proposed highway director shall have the approval of the commission, moved that the vote be reconsidered. Butler will either ask the privilege of amending the bill or moving to table his motion, allowing the bill to go to the senate.

The tax reform bill, as it was passed by the lower house, provides that property of all kinds shall be assessed at 50 per cent of its true cash market value, instead of 100 per cent as under the present tax laws. Other amendments strike out the provision that revenue to be raised in any taxing unit shall not be greater than was produced in the preceding year; cut the salaries of county assessors and give the board the right to remove county or township assessors, but give such official the right of appeal.

Speaker Jesse E. Eschbach of the house said that practically every administration bill now has been handled by the house and that little legislation that the majority members are deeply interested in remains for action, after the appropriation bills are out of the way.

The situation is not so good in the senate, however, where dozens of house bills still remain on the desk of Lieutenant Governor Bush without being handed down. The political situation, which has kept Bush at odds with Governor Goodrich throughout the session and made the senate and house stand at daggers points politically much of the time has resulted in the senate "slowing" much of the legislation that has been enacted by the house. This is true of the house legislation on the bills touching on the eradication of German from the schools. The house has passed three bills on this subject—one of them a senate bill, and although the house has modified the senate bill it passed somewhat it still has a far better record in attempting to wipe out the German in the schools than has the senate, which, thus far has made a single "grand-stand" play in the passage of a very stringent bill, introduced by Senator McCray, with the co-operation of Lieutenant Governor Bush. The house bills, meanwhile, lie on the desk of the lieutenant governor and nothing is being done toward getting them into the final way of enactment.

It is expected that popular sentiment throughout the state, which heretofore has fallen heavily on the house on account of the German bill situation, eventually will alight on the heads of the senators and compel some definite action to be taken there.

Discusses Health Officer Bill.

Failure of the house of representatives to consider the full-time health officer bill is referred to by Maj. William F. King, assistant secretary of the state board of health in a detailed report to the influenza-pneumonia epidemic in Indiana, which cost more than 9,000 Hoosier lives and vast expenditures of money, by both the public and individuals. The report was ordered by the state board at its last meeting and is to be made a permanent record in the minutes of that body. In one section of the report the part time health office system is criticized because of its failure to function in times of epidemic.

Kills Half-Holiday Measure.

House bill 90, declaring that Saturday afternoon shall be a legal holiday in all county, township and city offices in counties of 35,000 or more population, which previously had failed to pass for want of a constitutional majority, was called up for reconsideration and then killed by a vote, 65 to 28.

Gas Order is to Stand.

The United States fuel administration has no intention of revoking the order of December 12 limiting the natural gas supply of Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia to domestic consumers and a few most essential users. This announcement was made at Pittsburgh, Pa., by T. G. Gregory, director of the natural gas section, oil division, of the administration, who is holding hearings on a petition of Muncie industries with a view to equalizing distribution under the fuel administration's order.

Fire Causes 112 Deaths During Year.

Four thousand nine hundred and sixty-seven fires in Indiana last year caused the death of 112 persons, injured 181 others and caused property loss of $7,055,090, the second largest in the history of the state, according to statistics compiled by George H. Peet, Jr., secretary to H. H. Friedley, state fire marshal.

The number of fires in 1918 was 797 less than in 1917, but the property loss was $875,654 greater, due to a number of large fires, such as the Industrial building fire in Indianapolis in January, when $1,394,324 went up in smoke. Last year's property loss was exceeded only in 1914, when the total property loss was $7,926,980. Fires were more frequent in March than in any other month last year. Gasoline and kerosene are responsible for most of the deaths and personal injuries.

The number of dwellings and contents losses in 1918 was 3,202, or nine a day. The loss on dwellings and contents amounted to $1,464,466, or an average of $4,288 every 24 hours. Sixty-one per cent of the fires of this kind were due to sparks from chimneys and defective flues. Shingle roofs come in for a great share of the blame for these fires.

Rail Crossings Peril to Life.

The increasing number of automobile accidents at railroad crossings has led to a thorough investigation of conditions by the public service commission. The investigation was initiated last July and the first report on conditions and the work of elimination of dangerous crossings was made to E. I. Lewis, chairman of the commission, by D. E. Matthews, the commission's chief inspector of railroads. From July 1 to November 1 inspectors of the commission, together with representatives of the railroads being investigated, traveled over 2,000 miles of railroad and inspected 2,667 crossings. Of the total number of crossings inspected the commission has found that 472, or about one-sixth, are dangerous. It also says that the railroads have entered into a hearty co-operation with the commission to make the crossings as safe as possible. Incident to the investigation of the grades the commission also has compiled a list of the number of persons injured or killed at grade crossing accidents for the year ending April 30, 1918. It follows: Steam railroad deaths, 175; injured, 261; electric railroads, deaths, 51; injured, 32.

Anarchism Given Telling Blow.

By a vote of 90 to 0 the house passed the Deem bill to prevent the carrying of red or black flags or any other banners or emblems of organized movements against government. Another similar measure, directed at other manifestations of anarchistic character is pending in both branches of the legislature. It was introduced in the senate by Senator Glenn Van Auken of Auburn and in the house by Representative Winfield Miller of Indianapolis. It defines anarchism and classifies it as a felony, providing imprisonment of ten years for the first offense and 25 years for the second offense.

Telephone Rates Knocked Out.

Indiana telephone companies are restrained from continuing in effect the Burleson long-distance and toll rates by a temporary injunction handed down by Judge Louis B. Ewbank of the Marion county circuit court. The injunction suit was filed by the state of Indiana and the Indiana public service commission and was directed against the receivers of the Central Union Telephone company and the Indianapolis Telephone company. The decision holds that the rates set by the state public service commission must continue in effect.

House Amends Dog Tax.

That the Hoosier representatives favor a heavy tax on dogs there can be no doubt. The lawmakers tabled a motion by Representative Laughlin to eliminate the enacting feature of the Ratts senate bill changing the dog tax bill to increase annual license fees and then injected an emergency clause into the measure as it was sent to engrossment following the second reading. Further amendment provides that the kennel owner shall pay an annual license fee if his dogs are kept in kennels.

Old Veterans File Protest.

Veterans of the Civil war, who belong to the Lafayette post of the Grand Army of the Republic, sent a protest to Washington against the transferring of old soldiers from soldiers' homes throughout the country and filling their places with soldiers of the world war. The Civil war veterans say that the older veterans should not be slighted in favor of the newer ones. Resolutions were sent to the Indiana congressmen and to Secretary of War Baker.

No Grand Jury—"Flu" to Blame.

After trying for two days, Lawrence county court officials gave up an attempt to impanel a grand jury on account of the prevalence of influenza. There will be no grand jury until the next term of court.

Reports 2,721 Accidents in January.

Edward J. Boleman, secretary of the state industrial board, has completed the January report of the board and it shows that the board received reports of 2,721 accidents in the month. The month previous the number was 2,890. One hundred and three cases were those of women and 75 were those of children between fourteen and sixteen years old. Twenty-seven persons lost their lives and 58 suffered dismemberment. The death toll in December was 34.

SLEPT FOR LONG PERIODS

Case on Record of Englishman Who Slumbered for Close on to Three Months.

All are familiar with the story of Rip Van Winkle, who, after a sleep of 20 years, awoke to a world in which he found himself a complete stranger. That, of course, is a legend, but the London Tit-Bits records cases from real life that furnish wonderful instances.

There is, for instance, the well-authenticated case of Samuel Chilton of Tunsbury, near Bath.

His first slumber of any consequence took place on May 13, 1694, he being then twenty-five years of age. It lasted a month. Two years later he had another sleeping fit, from which nothing availed to wake him. He was bled and blistered, and for ten weeks artificially fed, until his jaws became set and had to be forced open with instruments—all, however, to no effect. At last, after 17 weeks, he woke up. He was under the impression that he had only slept one night! Chilton's next sleeping fit lasted from August 17 to November 19, 1697.

FEBRUARY

Suits For Wear On Stormy Days

New York.—Women should take the rainy day seriously. They should not save up for it; they should prepare for it, advises a prominent fashion writer. The "saving up" process may sound wise to philosophers, and it may appeal to financiers when translated in terms of coin; but when it applies to apparel, the philosophy and the practice are all wrong.

Can any woman answer the question as to why she should look her worst on a day when she needs to look her best? Why does she feel that every occasion in life requires a certain kind of costume, except a day of bad weather? Thinking along the right track would make one confident that a special costume for a rainy day is as necessary as one for a dinner party. The average woman, in fact, the vast majority of women, will tell you that they wear out their old clothes when the skies are gray, the snow flies, and the rain soaks the atmosphere and floods the streets.

There are individuals who achieve in life the distinction of wearing old clothes as well as they do new ones; of investing any costume with a certain chic. But these are individuals, rare types among women who are envied by all the others and who are enabled, through this personal achievement, to be economical if they so desire. They are a class apart, they are not models for other women. No one can imitate them. An extraordinary distinction in dress is a gift, as Harry Lauder says, and not a habit.

Now, cutting out these women who may do anything they please in the realm of dress, there is a world of women to be guided, counseled and chided in the kind of clothes they save up for bad weather. If clothes cannot be worn in the sunshine, it is obvious that they are unbecoming, ungraceful, out of style. They must have serious defects, or they would continue in harness. Hung in the dark corners of the closet, and taken out only for the dark hours of the day, they cannot be expected to glorify or enhance a woman's appearance. Yet, one finds almost invariably that these are the clothes which dot the streets on rainy days; that appear in the shops, and that do duty at luncheon.

And what is the result? A woman dresses herself in all the things that she dislikes and has discarded, goes abroad under a gray sky, and finds herself accepting an invitation to lunch or dropping in for an afternoon tea when the sun is shining, the streets are dry, and she looks like the symbol of an old clothes shop.

War Brought in Leather.

Although the military touches in women's costumery have not been startling or aggressive, outside of the regulation uniforms worn by war workers, there has been an introduction of other fabrics than those worn in peace. Leather, for instance. Women had nothing whatever to do with this fabric, except for shoes and hand bags, until the constant usage of it by soldiers on the streets of cities gave rise to its introduction for women's clothes.

The British "warm," the well-known coat invented by the nation that has given to the world the best uniform produced by the war, is a garment that was taken up by women. Its usage suggested coats that were modified editions of it.

Then leather skirts were taken up for sports last year, and they have been retained for rough weather in large cities. Leather has been worn in tan and in black and there are coats of it made of that shiny kind which one once saw on policemen.

Rubberized cloth was brought in by the war. Khaki-colored covert cloth and gabardine were returned to fashion through the war. Sheepskin collars and cuffs came about through its use as a lining for British coats. Extra high leather boots have been emphasized since America went into the war, and now leather caps and hats with brims like the New England fishermen wear have come into fashion.

France brought out a host of new umbrellas since the war, because the French women were compelled to walk. The majority of Parisiennes put the bad weather down to the war, and there were Americans who thought along the some channel; but the probable truth is that the French woman, even of the poorest class, is not used to walking the streets in fair or foul weather, and when the war compelled her to do this, through the lack of taxis and money, she found leather, oilskin and umbrella necessary.

Entire Leather Suit.

One woman turns herself out on the street whenever her best clothes are inadvisable, in a beige-colored leather suit made by a sporting goods house. The skirt is narrow and short, slit in the back, then lapped over to allow room for walking. The trench coat is cut double-breasted, with large, bundle pockets and straight, stiff cuffs in which a woman now places her purse and handkerchief. The cap, the umbrella and the knitted muffler, which goes twice about the neck, are in dark red. The double row of buttons are made of leather, and tan shoes, with rubber soles and heels, are laced up as high as the new regulations will permit.

Leather is costly, you know, and every woman does not feel that she can indulge in it, but heavy brown tweed, which stands the rain in an admirable manner, is used as a substitute by another well-dressed woman. This has a short skirt heavily stitched at the hem, and the odd blouse, which looks like a jacket, goes over the shoulders, is fastened at each side of the chest, and has a muffler as an attached collar. The buttons on this suit are of leather, and the loops that go over them are of stitched tweed. There is a flat cap of brown leather, and the high shoes have no heels, but thick, extension soles and leather laces.

When Old Clothes Are Used.

There are women who cling to their old suits and frocks for certain occasions. Nothing can divorce them from these garments as long as they hold together. Habit of mind compels these women to use these clothes for umbrella days, but the necessity for warmth may compel them to get a storm coat that covers all the shabbiness beneath and presents to the outside world that spick-and-span appearance which suggests that something new is at hand.

The best of these storm coats is of rubberized cloth, with cap to match. It is made like a chemise frock, with immense pockets at the hips, a turned-up cuff at the hem, and a wide, fichu collar that hugs the back of the neck and fastens across the chest with two leather buttons. The high-waisted belt fastens in front with a leather button.

Whatever else you eliminate in your rain apparel, don't omit pockets. They have taken a new lease of life. The soldiers have taught us their smartness, and necessity has taught us their convenience. They must be big enough to hold packages, and warm enough to protect the hands.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

THE REWARD.

"Neigh, neigh, neigh," said the beautiful big horse whose name was Bennie.

"Neigh, neigh, neigh," answered another beautiful big horse whose name was Kitty, and still another horse said, "Neigh, neigh, neigh," and this horse's name was Fred.

"When did you come?" asked Bennie. "It was only the other day that I saw you in the big city."

"That was only a short time ago, it is true, that I saw you in the city," answered Kitty.

And then both the horses looked at Fred, and said, "When did you come?"

"I saw both of you in the city, not long ago," said Fred.

And the other horses nodded their heads and neighed as they agreed with Fred.

"We must have all come about the same time," said Bennie.

"I think you're right," said Kitty.

"I'm sure you're right," said Fred.

"Do you know why we came here?" asked Bennie.

"I know I've always been a lucky horse," said Kitty.

"I know why we all came here," said Fred. "I heard my master talking about it to your masters and I heard him say things which I am sure you will both be glad to hear.

"They made me very, very happy, for I have tried to do my best and it is nice to hear the good things, isn't it?"

"Yes," said Bennie, "I think it is, for I don't think it makes one conceited to hear nice things. I think it makes one want to live up to them, and it makes everyone happy."

"I agree," said Kitty. "I think there are so many nice people, men and women, boys and girls, and animals, too, that they should be made happy by hearing that they are liked."

"Well, you'd both like to hear my story?" asked Fred.

"We would," said Bennie, "for we are glad to hear you have good news for us. There were a few days when "I Saw Both of You in the City," Said Fred.

we were quite certain we were going to be sold, and we didn't know what sort of masters we would have."

"I almost died of joy when I came here," said Kitty.

"My master and your master," said Fred, pointing to the other two horses, "couldn't bear to have us sold. Of course we have spent our lives on the police force of a great city. We have helped the policemen who rode us.

"We have stopped runaways, we have saved lives of children and we have done everything we could, always. Of course, it would seem to me quite dreadful not to do everything possible to save the life of a wonderful child, for I came to the conclusion—which means that I finally decided—that children were about the most wonderful things in the world.

"How I loved helping them when they came from school. How gay and bright were the hours in the day when their high, gloriously happy voices would reach my ears.

"My master would whisper to me, 'The children are coming, Fred. We must be on guard that they don't get run over.'

"And oh, the parades we have seen! The lives we have had of adventures!

"Our masters begged that we shouldn't be sold. They said we deserved to have our old age spent in peace and pleasure because we had always worked so hard, and had saved so many, many lives.

"When the news came that we would not be sold but that we would be brought to this wonderful farm and looked after all our days—well, our masters, simply cried for joy.

"'They're to be rewarded,' they shouted. 'They're to be rewarded.'

"So, we are to live on this beautiful farm. We will always be looked after. Our busy city lives are over, but oh, how thankful I am, that in my old age I can think of the days on the police force when I could do so much good."

And Kitty and Bennie neighed in happiness that this reward had been given to them.

Two Ports at Once.

Many ships have sailed from many ports, but no ship sails for more than one port at a time. The people who try to do two things at once are like a ship trying to sail at the same time to two ports. Aim at one target. When you have something to do, forget for the time that there is anything else in the world worth doing.

USES FOR HORNS IN CHINA

Pills and Marvelous Tonics Are Among the Many Things Manufactured From Them.

Water buffalo and ox horns in China are worked into lanterns, some of strikingly large size and quite transparent, says a writer in the Boston Evening Transcript. They also find many other uses in China, including the manufacture of combs, shoe horns and backs of hair, tooth and other brushes. Prior to the antiopium campaign the principal use made of these horns was in the manufacture of opium cups or boxes for packing and storing opium for home consumption. Horn lanterns in China are made from the hoofs as well as the horns of animals. Deer, reindeer and mountain goat horns are valuable in China for manufacture into medicine. Stag horns are particularly valuable, but useful only during a certain time of the year. From the stag horns pills are made that are reputed to have marvelous tonic and rejuvenating qualities. About a million pounds of water buffalo and ox horns and a thousand pairs of deer horns were exported during 1917, the latter probably for the medicinal use of Chinese populations abroad. Ivory ware is peculiar to Canton. Tusks are imported from Siam and carved with great skill and dexterity by the ivory carvers of Canton, experts being few in number. Canton is famous for its elaborately carved ivory balls, one within another, sometimes to the number of 17, all carved from without. There are about forty ivory shops in Canton. There are, however, only six expert carvers. These work in their own homes and make about $30 Canton currency a month (at present exchange about $25 gold), but usually much less.

Enthusiasm in Everything Is One of the Most Prominent of His Characteristics.

If you ask the Czech himself, he will tell you that the secret of his life is enthusiasm. He calls it love—love of country, which lays down life without question or stint; love of beauty, without which he considers life stupid, neither to be lived through with joy nor departed from with dignity. In this esthetic apprehension which we call by the thin and unsatisfactory word "taste" the Czech is like the French—surely he must be likened sooner or later to the French!—bearing the mark of a race old in living, rich in tradition, discerning in its appreciations. He is, too, a lover of love, worshiping women; a lover of life, more joyous than the Russian, less light minded than the Gaul. A lover not of the form, but of the substance. Life is short; youth is short. It is to laugh, to work, to weep, to think, to love, to be aware of that complex and everchanging stream of consciousness. When a Czech dies, somehow one feels that one may say of him what may not be said of every man, "He is dead, but he has lived."

If you ask the American he will tell you that the Czech's secret is "Allied ideals with Teuton training." It is his efficiency that endears him to the American, especially if he is recuperating from the Russian army.—Olive Gilbreath in Harper's Magazine.

End of Fighting Galleys.

In the sixteenth century European civilization was menaced by the Turks. Moslem pirates were the peril of the seas, of which they were fast gaining control. This danger was averted and destroyed by Don Juan, commander of the Spanish fleet, and his allies, the Italian squadrons and the Venetian and Neapolitan fleets, at a naval battle with the Turks in the bay of Lepanto. The capture of the enemy's flagship, after the battle had raged an hour and a half, gave Don Juan assurance of victory, so he hoisted the consecrated banner of the Holy league at the mast of the conquered galley, where it could be seen both by friend and enemy. The result was as Don Juan expected—exultation on the part of the Christians and depression and discouragement on the part of the Turks.

After a heavy loss on both sides the Turkish armada was destroyed and Don Juan and his galley, the Reale, were the masters of the Mediterranean. Civilization was saved and the Reale became a ship of destiny. But at Lepanto was sung the swan song of the galley; henceforth the sailing vessels with their wind-tossed canvases were to rule the seas.

Cultivation in Burma.

We who think of Burma as in India must modify our ideas considerably. As a matter of fact it lies outside the Indian region, and owes its connection mainly to its recent history, for as will be recalled Burma was conquered at the expense of India, and in a great measure by the Indians who assisted in garrisoning, policing and constructing its public works. Without this aid Burma's annexation and government would have been exceedingly difficult, for back in the hills of the Irrawaddy valley basin there are still wild tribes scarcely emerged from conditions of savagery, whose chief aim in life until recently was the practice of intertribal conflicts and head-hunting. It is to these people the Burmese are connected by racial affinities, though the former have developed amazingly under the influences of civilization, a standard which is high according to the Asiatic code. As a result, the hill tribes are sparse today, and Burmese civilization is on the increase throughout the country.

COMB SAGE TEA IN FADED OR GRAY HAIR

If Mixed with Sulphur it Darkens so Naturally Nobody can Tell.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.—Adv.

A Sense of Humor.

Mrs. Fetherhed could hardly contain herself until her husband came home, to tell him the excruciating joke on the janitor.

"He's just found out why we had no heat in the flat last winter," she chirruped as she met her husband at the door.

"Why?" asked Fetherhed.

"He wanted to burn some papers this morning and discovered there's no furnace in the building."

PHYSICIAN WAS IN SERIOUS CONDITION

Dr. Farnsworth Gives Doan's Credit for His Wonderful Recovery.

Dr. T. G. Farnsworth, 70 S. Kanawha St., Buckhannon, W. Va., retired physician of over forty years' experience, ex-State Congressman, ex-City Mayor and ex-County Health Officer, praises Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is Dr. Farnsworth's experience as he tells it: "It was just a few years after my retiring from practicing medicine that I found I was afflicted with severe disorder of the kidneys and bladder. I grew steadily worse, and sometimes I was unable to get around at all. The kidney secretions were retarded and so painful in passing I would cry out in misery. I was in a frightful condition. After I had lost hope in other remedies, Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention and I tried them. I soon noticed a change for the better. I used several boxes and they cured me completely. Never in my practice did I know a remedy that would accomplish what Doan's Kidney Pills did, and I give them my heartiest endorsement."

This Is Orange Blossom Time in Florida

And it's a good time to leave the Frozen North for a short Winter vacation.

Come on down to Lake Alfred and see one of the most beautiful sights imaginable—thousands of acres of Orange and Grapefruit Trees in full bloom, scenting the air for miles around.

We have a few planted small groves, but few, not yet taken, but you cannot buy an acre until you have first seen the property. You had better hurry, for these are choice and will be sold soon.

After carefully investigating what others have done in our vicinity, under exactly similar conditions, and you have satisfied yourself that our claim that a Six or Seven-Year-Old Grove, on a conservative estimate, will produce from $900 to $950 per acre Net, you can buy with perfect safety.

If you buy, your trip costs you nothing, as we refund traveling expense to purchasers.

Our groves at Lake Alfred are right on the Main Line of the Atlantic Coast Railroad, in the heart of the Highland-Lake Section, the highest, safest citrus section of Florida, with Ninety Lakes within a Five-Mile radius. Good asphalt and brick roads, schools, etc.

Prices fair, values big, reasonable terms.

Send for our illustrated booklet, read it carefully, and then visit Lake Alfred personally.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

There seems to be some mistaken ideas current regarding the cost of the County Agent to the county. An investigation of the bills filed for the past nine and one-half months show that the salary of the county agent is paid by the Federal and State government, that the county pays only for office help, office supplies, and mileage traveled by the agent on official duty. The county has paid out for the purpose named $837.15 for the nine and one-half months from April 15 1918 to February 1, 1919. The fact that the portion of the county agent's wages coming from the state is handled through the county treasurer's office, is not generally understood and leads to a wrong impression as to the amount of expense borne by the county.

Tight Skirts and Voters

Tight skirts of ankle length may prevent Indiana women from casting a vote for presidential electors unless the state's general election laws are modified, according to L. W. Henley, republican state committee chairman. Under the existing laws governing elections it is provided that eight inches of the voters legs must be visible from the outside of the balloting booth.

This and other difficulties must be overcome before the Johnson law, granting women the right to vote for candidates for presidential electors can apply to all women of the state. No provision has thus far been made for women voting when voting machines are used instead of the Australian ballot system.

Baker in Hospital

DeKalb county has a wounded soldier in the United States army hospital at West Baden, Ind., in the person of Eugene Baker of Spencerville, wounded in France several months ago. His mother is Mrs. Anna Baker of Spencerville. The wounded DeKalb county man is one of half a hundred new patients that have arrived at West Baden since the first of February. Twenty-nine of the new arrivals are Hoosier boys and all are wounded in the feet or thighs, but are able to get about on crutches.

Old Rates Restored

Telephone exchanges in DeKalb county were notified Friday evening to suspend the new telephone toll and installation rates as fixed by Postmaster General Burleson. The notification followed the decision of Judge Ewbank in the circuit court at Indianapolis, holding the Burleson rates and tolls illegal and granting an injunction.

The suspension of rates applies to all intrastate traffic but not on interstate messages. The Burleson rates were put in effect by DeKalb county exchanges on January 21, upon order of the postmaster general. The notification to local exchanges directs that charges until further notification be under the rates in effect previous to January 21.

The public service commission Saturday issued the following statement for the information of telephone patrons:

"The practical effect of Judge Ewbank's decision is that the public service commission of Indiana has authority to continue to regulate telephone rates in Indiana, and that Postmaster General Burleson does not have authority to fix or regulate rates within the state. Burleson's toll rates which have been collected since the recent hearing before Judge Anderson are, under Judge Ewbank's decision, illegal. The installation and moving charges which were initiated by Mr. Burleson in December are likewise illegal, for the reason that they have not been approved by the commission."

Telephone patrons who were forced to pay the increased toll rates and installation and removal charges ordered by Postmaster General Burleson, may be entitled to a refund, in the opinion of state officials today, under the injunction handed down by Judge Ewbank in Marion circuit court.

The Best Incubator Is-- ALWAYS the CHEAPEST

Suppose you bought a flimsy, "cold cornered" incubator this year! And five eggs in each corner—twenty eggs out of every 100 failed to hatch!

Or the chicks die in the shell! Or the deadly 10-day mortality period snuffed out their frail lives. Would an incubator like this cost you less? No! It would be most expensive—would be the costliest incubator you could buy!

The Simplicity—the wonderful no-cold-corner incubator—will save your high-priced hatching eggs—save your chicks!

On the above basis of loss, last year, $185,000,000.00 worth of marketable poultry was lost by American poultry raisers. Besides this think of the loss of eggs, time, fuel, etc.

A Thrilling Pirate Yarn

Long before the slinking submarine took its toll of human lives and sought to strike terror into the hearts of those who sailed the ocean on peaceful missions, there existed another form of sea frightfulness in the Spanish buccaneers and pirates who roamed the broad expanse of blue in quest of treasure.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Paulding, Paulding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, headache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

Weekly Health Talks

URIC ACID IN THE SYSTEM

BY LEE H. SMITH, M. D.

Uric acid is now generally recognized as the cause of more diseases than was heretofore believed. When the kidneys are out of order uric acid accumulates within the body in superabundance. The disordered kidneys do not filter the poisons out of the blood, as they ought to do, and so the poisons remain in the blood and float around until they find a place to lodge, in form of urate salts. The thing to remember is that you may have rheumatism in any part of the body—you may have pains anywhere—your back may ache and your head may be dizzy—but the trouble is not where the pain appears.

The trouble is in the kidneys, and what is the first thing to do? You must get that excess uric acid out of your system, which can be done by taking Anuric Tablets, the splendid remedy which Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., has put on sale in the drug stores at a low price. Anuric Tablets (made double strength), when taken into the system as medicine, have the peculiar power of dissolving the uric acid deposited there. Drop a bit of sugar or salt into hot water, and it will disappear. In precisely the same way do these Anuric Tablets dissolve uric acid. Of course, after ridding the system of uric acid, it may return again unless you eat the right foods and live the right kind of life, but Dr. Pierce will advise you fully on proper food and correct living if you write and ask him. He makes no charge for such advice. Take Anuric Tablets today, by all means, and get that uric acid out of your system. Don't, don't, don't, put the matter off.

LAND IN DEMAND

Opportunities of Western Canada Becoming Known.

Fertile Soil on Which Can Be Produced Record Crops Offered to Settlers at Prices Attractive to Farm Seekers.

In the early months of 1919 there was a demand for farm lands in Western Canada, the greatest that has ever been in the history of the country. This despite the fact that farm lands have increased in price, as the value of the farm product has increased and the virility and productive value of Western Canada farm lands have come more and more into evidence. Farming there is no longer an experiment. Good crops can be grown in all localities, some probably a little more favorable than others, but on the whole a good—more than good—general average. Land elsewhere on the continent is used for the developing of one hundred and twenty dollar steers, thirty-five dollar hogs, two dollar and twenty cent wheat and eighty-five cent oats, and its price is anywhere from one hundred and fifty to three hundred dollars an acre. Western Canada land sells at from twenty to forty dollars an acre, and the farmer cultivating it gets one hundred and twenty-five dollars for his steer, thirty-five dollars for his hog, two dollars and twenty cents for his wheat, and eighty-five cents for his oats. And he can grown corn, too, but Western Canada is saying no more about it than North Dakota did fifteen years ago, when it was an experiment there, and see what North Dakota is doing today. The prediction is that in less than a decade corn will be grown successfully in all parts of Western Canada. It is, therefore, easy to account for the increased demand for Western Canada lands. The war is ended, and the food that the American and Canadian farmer sent across to the soldier, holding up his strength and maintaining his vitality, won the war. No! It was just a factor in winning it, as was the soldier of Italy, of France, of Belgium, of Great Britain, of Canada and of the United States. An important factor, nevertheless. People generally have begun to realize what food means, means to everybody—and it is grown on the farm. So people today want farm lands, and they want those that are good. The great, wide, open stretches of wonderfully productive soil of Western Canada are the chief attraction of the land seekers of today, and it shall be so tomorrow, and of all days, until these vacant inviting acres are brought into fruition by the hand of man and the multiplied effort of steam and gasoline power, to the influence and operation of which these lands present such a splendid opportunity.

The pulse of today's desire to secure farm lands may be seen to beat in the columns of the local newspaper, recording sales of many tracts of lands, ranging from 160 to 1,200 acres. A Regina (Sask.) paper says, "In farm lands there is so brisk a business being done that it might be considered a boom." Another paper reports the sale of a section of raw prairie seven miles east of Regina for $35 an acre, and 200 acres at $50 an acre. One real-estate firm handled in three weeks' time over 3,500 acres of farm lands, the turnover being upward of $100,000. An improved farm near Regina changed hands at $47 an acre. "For the first time in the history of the Moosejaw district farm land has been sold for $100 an acre, when J. S. Cameron of Victoria, B. C., sold half a section, known as the Lett farm, to John Logun. The farm was bought a year ago for $85 an acre and is located three miles from the city. It is highly improved and has fine buildings."

An extract from a local paper says: "The movement of farm lands is opening up well this season and there is every indication that a large area of prairie property will be turned over during the months intervening before seedtime.

"The price received for farm lands in each instance is considered as good, particularly for unimproved raw prairie, and shows a considerable improvement on prices for similar properties sold during the years of the war."—Advertisement.

LESSON FOR MARCH 2

THE REPORT OF THE SPIES.

LESSON TEXT—Numbers 13:17-14:38.

GOLDEN TEXT—This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith.—I John 5:4.

DEVOTIONAL READING—Psalm 45.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The story of a wonderful journey. Memory Verse—Num. 14:8.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Two men against ten. Memory Verse—Num. 13:30.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—The folly of cowardice.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—Causes of failure in life.

I. The Spies Sent Out (13:17-20).

Less than two years have passed since the Israelites were delivered from Egyptian bondage. They are now at Kadesh-Barnea, within sight of the promised land. Moses urges them to go in and take immediate possession (Deut. 1:21) but they fail because of their unbelief (Heb. 3:19).

There was a threefold purpose in sending out the spies: (1) to see whether the land was as God had told them (v. 18); (2) to see whether the people who dwelt there were strong or weak, few or many (v. 18); (3) to see whether the cities were made up of strongholds or tents (v. 19). What folly! If God has spoken, to question his word is simply unbelief.

II. The Commission Executed (13:21-25).

They entered the land from the south and traversed it to its northern limits. They spent forty days in this investigating exploration. It is a sad comment upon human nature when men must spend forty days in finding out the truthfulness of God's word. On their return from the north they gathered some specimens of the fruit of the land. Two of them, perhaps Caleb and Joshua, bore a cluster of grapes upon a staff between them as a witness that God had spoken the truth about the land.

III. The Spies Rendered a Report (13:26-33).

On their return this committee of explorers rendered a report to the whole congregation. It was not unanimous:

1. The majority report (vv. 26-29). (1) "The land floweth with milk and honey (v. 27). As a proof of it they exhibited the fruit. They all bore witness that this was in accordance with what God had said. (2) "The people who live there are strong" (v. 28). They seemed to stress this fact. Unbelief dwells mainly upon difficulties. (3) "The people live in walled cities" (v. 28). They argued that it was impossible to capture them in such sure defenses. (4) "The land was inhabited by giants" (v. 28 cf v. 33). They saw themselves as grasshoppers. Furthermore, they saw the people so distributed—the Amalekites in the south country, the Hittites, Jebusites and Amorites in the mountains and the Canaanites along the sea—that it was impossible to take them. This, no doubt, seemed reasonable from the human side, but they displayed their folly in that they left God out of the question. The same God who said to them, "Go, possess the land," would go along to fight the battles.

2. The minority report (vv. 30-33). In part, this report agrees with the first; it does not ignore the difficulties, nor dispute the facts. It denies the conclusion of the majority. They did not minimize the task before them, but asserted that with God's help they were well able to get possession of the land, and urged immediate action. The ten had their eyes on the difficulties, but Caleb and Joshua fixed their eyes upon God. Caleb lived to see his suggestion made real. The decisions of the majority are not always right. Just two men against the many thousands, but the thousands were wrong and the two were right. It is not always true that the "voice of the people is the voice of God."

IV. The Rebellion of the People 14:1-38).

This rebellion began by crying. Having left God out of the question they now weep and howl. This weeping and howling was followed by murmuring against Moses and Aaron. They even wished that they had died in the wilderness or in Egypt. God took them at their word; he sent them back to wander in the wilderness for thirty-eight years, during which time they all died except Caleb and Joshua. This was followed by a proposition to organize for the return to Egypt. They proposed to select a captain as their leader. The protest of Joshua and Caleb against this resulted in the proposition to stone them. At this point God interposed in their behalf. He manifested his glory before all the children of Israel in vindication of the loyalty of Joshua and Caleb.

LIQUOR TRAFFIC A MENACE TO YOUTH.

Judge W. C. Mentzer of the First judicial district of the state of Wyoming gives the following as his reasons for believing in prohibition:

"During over 21 years' experience since I began the practice of law, I have constantly been in a position to observe, and have observed, the cruel and cursed consequences of drunkenness. I have seen boys and young men of good families ruined by liquor, charged with and convicted of serious criminal offenses, and lodged in a felon's cell, their families disgraced and pauperized; I have seen them rotten with loathsome disease and insane as the result of drunkenness.

"During my six years on the bench as judge of the district court of the First district of Wyoming, in the discharge of my duty I have been compelled to send approximately 300 men to the penitentiary, jail or reformatory, for criminal offenses committed by them against the laws of the state of Wyoming, and I know that 90 per cent of these crimes were caused by drunkenness.

"During the same period of time there has scarcely a week passed that I have not been called upon to grant one or more divorces, and I know that fully 85 per cent of these cases were traceable to drunkenness. I have also been compelled to take many children from the homes of drunkards and give them over to the state or charitable institutions, their homes having been destroyed by drunkenness."

THE UNPARDONABLE SIN.

Science tells us that alcohol is the specific for degeneracy; that is, it stops the building process. Life is not founded on a level plane; everything that lives has an inclined plane; the individual type of species develops along a certain line of evolution. They have made a discovery, that whatever the line of the creature's evolution, whether plants, animals or man are dealt with, alcohol will begin by tearing down at the top, thus exactly reversing the building process. This is called degeneracy, and it is the unpardonable sin. When degeneracy sets in, when the creature ceases to rise, the curse of nature descends upon him; nature shortens his life and blights it. It is true whether in the vegetable kingdom, the kingdom of the animal, the kingdom of man, whether you deal with the family, nation, empire, or civilization. Alcohol strikes at the reproduction of life; it blights the offspring unborn. In a few generations it practically exterminates the family, and would exterminate the nation.—Richmond Pearson Hobson.

SOME OF THE THINGS RATIFICATION WILL DO.

It will harmonize the state and federal policy of government in dealing with the liquor problem.

The $2,000,000,000 spent for liquor, which comes from the earnings of the mechanics, laborers, farmers and tradespeople will be spent for something less harmful—something which will give a larger return per capita.

All the existing liquor capital of the nation will be at work along honest wealth-producing lines.

Labor will be benefited, because the capital now invested in liquor industries will, when employed in constructive manufactories, employ four times as many men and distribute a proportionately greater amount in wages.

There will be no confiscation of property because no property will be taken from anyone. The law will simply require that a man use his property in a fashion to do more good to the community and to himself.—Ratification Handbook.

THRIFT STAMPS INSTEAD OF DRINKS.

A new thirst quencher has been discovered, but it is not enriching owners of wet drinks. It is, however, benefiting Uncle Sam. Recently a man slipped a quarter on the counter and said: "Gimme a whisky." It happened to be a place where War Savings stamps were being sold. The man behind the counter ripped off one Thrift stamp from the sheet and handed it to the customer, who slipped him a quarter. "Gimme another," he said. And down came another 25-cent piece. "You see, it's this way," explained the man as he licked the stamps and pasted them on a well-filled Thrift card: "Every time I feel like having a drink—and that's mighty often—I hustle in here and buy a stamp instead and then I always buy a second one for having had the will power to buy the first one instead of a drink, see? So long—I'll be in again soon."—New York Letter.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE PARTY INDORSES RATIFICATION.

New York State Woman Suffrage party in assembly in New York indorsed the ratification of the federal prohibition amendment by the state legislature this winter, and also indorsed the necessary enforcement legislation to make prohibition effective.

Winnipeg, Canada, during three months of 1918 reduced its police force by 53, due to prohibition. This will effect the saving of nearly $30,000 yearly.

For centuries GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil has been a standard household remedy for kidney, liver, bladder and stomach trouble, and all diseases connected with the urinary organs. The kidneys and bladder are the most important organs of the body. They are the filters, the purifiers of your blood. If the poisons which enter your system through the blood and stomach are not entirely thrown out by the kidneys and bladder, you are doomed.

Weariness, sleeplessness, nervousness, despondency, backache, stomach trouble, headache, pain in loins and lower abdomen, gall stones, gravel, difficulty when urinating, cloudy and bloody urine, rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago, all warn you to look after your kidneys and bladder. All these indicate some weakness of the kidneys or other organs or that the enemy microbes which are always present in your system have attacked your weak spots. GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules are what you need.

They are not a "patent medicine," nor a "new discovery." For 200 years they have been a standard household remedy. DAIRY FACTS

PROPER SELECTION OF BULL

One of the Most Important Considerations for Improvement of Herd—Look to Records.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Since the use of meritorious pure-bred bulls is the means by which members of a bull association expect to improve their live stock, one of the many important considerations is the selection of the bulls. Such bulls improve the herds, and the association interest increases in proportion to the improvement obtained. On the other hand, poor bulls cause the interest to decrease accordingly. If a poor dairy bull is used the milk production of the members' herds is greatly reduced, the interest is lessened, and these conditions may lead to the breaking up of the association. Unfortunately, an excellent dairy bull can be selected with certainty only when his daughters' records are known.

Such a tried or tested bull can be depended upon with great certainty to cause improvement in the herds in the bull association. The owner of a tried bull, however, usually knows the record of the animal's daughters and rightfully asks a high price for him. The high cost often makes the members hesitate to purchase such bulls for the association, and instead they buy younger and untried bulls whose ancestors have made good production records. No bulls should be purchased for an association except from one of these two classes. Considering the records of ancestors, the most important are those of the sire and dam. In the case of the sire, production record is taken as the average of all his daughters' records. Very often the records of some of the ancestors are lacking, but every effort should be made to obtain bulls whose ancestors in the first two generations have an average yearly record of at least 400 pounds of butterfat at maturity.

The state agricultural college may be in a position to assist in looking up pedigrees and records and always should be consulted. As soon as the money can be provided for the purpose, it is advisable for the association to obtain a set of "Advanced Register" or "Register of Merit" books and, if possible, a set of breed-registry books of the breed used, both of which are valuable for reference to all the members of the association. Information in regard to the cost of "Advanced Register" and breed-registry books may be obtained from the breed associations as follows:

American Jersey Cattle club, 324 West Twenty-third street, New York, N. Y.

American Guernsey Cattle club, Petersboro, N. H.

Holstein-Friesian Association of America, Brattleboro, Vt.

Ayrshire Breeders' association, Brandon, Vt.

Brown-Swiss Cattle Breeders' association, Beloit, Wis.

In choosing the bulls careful attention should be given to the line of breeding represented in their pedigrees. Efforts should be made to select bulls that have the same family lines in order that line breeding may be practiced when the bulls are exchanged. Before the bulls are finally purchased plenty of time should be given to selecting the line of breeding desired.

Although records of production are of great importance, it is very necessary also that the bulls selected have plenty of strength, great vigor and good body conformation. If the members are not experienced in buying cattle, it is well to ask the state agricultural college for advice and assistance in making the selection.

In buying bulls special care should be taken to see that the animals chosen are healthy and especially that they are free from the infection of either tuberculosis or contagious abortion. If possible the bulls should be purchased from herds accredited by the bureau of animal industry as being free from tuberculosis. A list of such herds may be obtained from the bureau. If it is impossible to buy from an accredited herd purchase from a breeder who will furnish satisfactory evidence that the animals have passed the tuberculin test and have never reacted to that test.

ROAD BUILDING

ROAD BUILDERS ARE NEEDED

Opportunities for Returned Soldiers—Both Skilled and Unskilled Labor Required.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In response to requests for information, the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture has collected from the highway departments of the various states figures indicating the profitable number of returned soldiers and sailors that can be used during 1919 in road construction and repair work. Of the 38 states replying only 29 gave definite figures. They report they can use 11,637 soldiers and sailors as skilled laborers, and 91,904 as unskilled. Under the head of skilled labor the state highway departments were asked to report on the requirements for masons, carpenters, quarry bosses, concrete finishers, road foremen, roller men and superintendents. Unskilled laborers were not separated into classes.

The states that have thus far given definite figures, with the estimated number of men that may be used, are: Alabama, skilled 60, unskilled 1,000; Arizona, skilled 48, unskilled 100; Colorado, unskilled 1,250; Connecticut, skilled and unskilled, 4,000; Delaware, skilled 100; unskilled 1,000; Florida, skilled 685; unskilled 4,315; Georgia, skilled and unskilled, 4,000; Idaho, unskilled, 260; Illinois, skilled 2,500, unskilled 15,000; Kansas, skilled 1,000; unskilled 4,800; Kentucky, skilled 826; unskilled 3,500; Louisiana, skilled 110, unskilled 1,000; Maine, skilled 100; unskilled 1,000; Massachusetts, skilled, 150; unskilled, 2,000; Michigan, skilled 200, unskilled 2,500; Minnesota, skilled 1,200, unskilled 4,800; Mississippi, skilled and unskilled, 2,000; Montana, skilled 104, unskilled 644; Nebraska, skilled 267, unskilled 2,250; Nevada, skilled 35, unskilled 265; New Hampshire, skilled 332, unskilled 1,000; New

EXPENSE OF CONCRETE ROAD

Average Cost for Surface Only Estimated at About $12,300 Per Mile—Filling Cracks.

(By A. W. DEAN, Chief Engineer Mass. Highway Commission.)

The average cost of a concrete surface, 15 feet wide, not including grading, drainage, culvert work, etc., but including the concrete surface only, is about $12,300 per mile, according to contract prices under which concrete roads have been constructed by this commission. Of course, the cost of grading, drainage, culverts, etc., will vary greatly.

So far as the concrete surface becoming more or less cracked and full of holes after three or four years is concerned, I would state it is true that it cracks to a certain extent, but if properly built, with expansion joints, no holes will appear, and very few cracks, and the cost of filling the cracks with bitumen is very slight.

Acid-Stomach Ruins Health of Millions

Besides those painful attacks of indigestion; that awful bloated, lumpy feeling after eating and downright stomach misery that you who have experienced it know so well; besides disgusting belching, food-repeating, sour stomach and distressing heartburn—besides all this, ACID-STOMACH undermines the health and saps the strength of millions.

If you don't get rid of those stomach miseries there is no telling where your stomach troubles will end, for it is a well known scientific fact that many serious ailments have their start in an acid-stomach.

Start now—this very day—to get rid of your stomach miseries. Take EATONIC—the wonderful remedy that absorbs the excess acid from the stomach and brings INSTANT relief. You simply have no idea how much better, stronger and brighter you feel at once. It drives out all the gas and bloat, puts an immediate stop to belching and heartburn, ends stomach suffering and makes it cool, sweet, comfortable and strong.

There can be no further excuse for you to allow acid-stomach to wreck your health—pile up misery upon misery until you get to the point where you feel down and out and that life has lost all its joys. Remember, just as acid-mouth ruins teeth, so acid-stomach ruins health.

Take EATONIC. It's good, just like a bit of candy and makes the stomach feel fine. You can then eat the things you like and, what is more, every mouthful you eat will count in creating power and energy. You'll feel so much better—have punch and pep—the power and will to do things and get results, and your stomach misery will be gone.

Take our advice. Get a big box of EATONIC from your druggist today. It costs so little. If it fails to remove your stomach distress, he will refund your money. That is guaranteed; you are to be satisfied or money refunded.

Death Abounds.

Sorrow abounds in practically every community, but especially do we feel sad these days in this our local community. We have lost by death, two of our most exemplary young people, Roscoe Place and Miss Letha Kain, both of east of St. Joe. The obituary of one appears below, while the other shall follow next week.

Miss Kain was teacher in the Coburntown school up until the holidays, when she resigned and went to Washington to work for the federal goverment. Here she labored earnestly and succeeded at her work, when suddenly she was attacked with the "flu". The parents were notified and Mrs. Kain left for Washington on Saturday, Feb. 15, and when she arrived there, her son Forrest from overseas had arrived, and was at the bedside of the sister. Death resulted a few days later and the corpse arrived at Hicksville, Friday night, and burial was held from the U. B. Church at Newville on Monday afternoon of this week.

Roscoe Clare Place, the youngest son of Reed and Della Place was born in Defiance county, Ohio, May 27, 1900, and departed this life February 21, 1919, aged 18 years, 8 months and 24 days.

When Roscoe was two years of age his parents moved with their family to this neighborhood, where he grew to young manhood.

In April 1914 during a meeting held by Evangelist A. L Martin, he confessed his faith in Christ and was baptized and united with the Church of Christ at Coburn's Corners. His short life in this world has been one of victory and duty well done. He never shirked a duty and was always ready to do the things that would advance the cause of Christ on earth. He was president of his Sunday School class for two years. At the beginning of this year he was chosen Sunday School superintendent. He was privileged to serve in that capacity but two Sundays when misfortune overtook him.

Among the last words of Roscoe to his mother were, "Tell my friends and classmates to be faithful to Christ and I will meet them over there." In his suffering a few days before he said to his father, "Christ suffered and died, so can I."

While we cannot understand why he should be taken from his loved ones just when we need him most; yet we must bow to the will of Him who doeth all things well. He leaves to mourn, father, mother, three brothers, two sisters and many friends.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire through the columns of The News, to express to the community at large, our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for their kind words and interest shown us during the continued illness of our son and assistance rendered us in his death and burial.

MARCH

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. XXXIII | ST. JOE DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, MARCH 6 1919 | NO. 10

Tri-Township Institute.

Convened at the St. Joe M. P. Church last Wednesday and Thursday—Fine Attendance and Speakers.

The Tri-township Farmers Institute is over and is now a record in the pages of history of the farmers of Newville, Concord and Spencer townships. The first session began Wednesday morning at 9:30 with the invocation being given by Rev. C. O. Johnson. "Farming to fit conditions" was ably handled by Prof R. A. Ogg, state worker. He said that too many farmers failed to fit into the business and consequently he must be divorced as a married couple who fail to fit, their home cannot fit and accomplish the purposes of a home. Five important factors must be taken into consideration by every farmer as follows:

1. Himself:—If a man has no ability for farming, he had better nottry it, and if he should attempt the job he should prepare to do it right.

2. Farm:—Don't get too large a farm as no man can do as well as on a small farm and make the farm do all it can. Many a man makes big money on three acres where properly located.

3. Capital:—This depends on a man's success largely, and the kind of equipment is figured in as working capital. Debt will not hurt a farmer if he expects to make things go, because he will work and save more earnest to pay out

4 Community:—In locating in a new community each one should adopt the same methods, there is a sympathetic interest that is not there, and this is essential to all in the community.

5. Help:—This is an essential one and depends upon the above four points.

The speaker continued to show how farmers, to some extent were not doing their best because of lack of judgement. He used the audience in making a program for a farmer living on 40 acres of land about eight to ten miles out from market, and one that would make him the most money with the least labor. The suggestion of sugar beets as a part of his program, which developed that they could be used, for feed if not sold, to advantage. Dairy, silo, to make feed go as far as possible; raise alfalfa, get more feed to the acre and its richer for milk; raise chickens to help consume the by products of the milk; raise corn, oats, soy beans in oats and corn for silo; raise hogs and pasture on alfalfa, clover and rape; sow rye for fertility.

The poultry question was discussed by Mrs. Elizabeth Stanley from a patriotic standpoint as the government is to supply the starving nations with twenty million pounds of food and we can use the poultry here and send the cured meats abroad. When it comes to chickens one must hatch early, cull flock frequently, feed a balanced ration, keep one breed, do not mix them and breed for high grade stock and layers.

In the marketing of eggs Mrs. Stanley said never wash an egg that happened to be soiled, as it would soon spoil after being taken and placed on the retail market, because the cement coating on the egg has been broken, thus allowing the air to penetrate the shell and decay sets in immediately. Worth remembering.

Afternoon Session

The school children under the direction of C. A. Woodcox, gave some extra good songs to begin the afternoon session. Mr. Ogg gave an interesting talk on "System with cattle and hogs," and showed that in order to make any thing at all of either of these, one must use system in care and feeding, which is conclusive and needs no further emphasis.

Mrs. Stanley followed with, "Canning meats and vegetables," which was of value to the ladies, in order to conserve the food suply, and then to be able to change menus frequently without any further trouble on her part. The evening session was called off as the speaker, Mr. Mahoney, was called home after arriving in St. Joe on account of the illness of his wife.

Thursday Forenoon

"Potato growing," Prof. F. C. Gaylord, Purdue Extension. Northern Indiana is credited with having raised 40% of the states potato crop. Four essentials were given as to a greater success in the potato business.

1. Varieties. For early crop use the Irish Cobler or early Ohio, they are adapted for this climate perfectly. For later crop use sir Walter Raleigh, Carmen No. 3 and Petoskey. A number of things should be taken into consideration for the late crop. The Rural New Yorker seems best because they set after the dry weather and are heavy leayed and are more able to stand the drought.

2. Amount of seed used. The more good seed planted the larger the returns. From 12 to 18 bushels is the proper amount of seed to the acre, plant one large piece in a place about the size of an egg with two eyes.

3. Sprouting, green sprouting from 4 to 6 weeks before planting is an aid to better crop.

4. Selecting seed, the most profitable way of selecting is at the time of digging. Get a uniform potato, don't plant the scrubs, a large potato will produce large ones more readily than small ones, as like animals, they produce more of their own kind. The best is none too good. The speaker gave the figures on a test of three years, in which selected seed returned 138 bushels and the unselected 110 a gain of 28 bushels and all marketable while the other was unfit for market. Always select for improvement of crop.

"Potato disease and prevention" Prof. Gregory, Purdue. The weather is accountable for certain diseases on potatoes while many are found in the skin of the spud and sometimes not noticeable. Seed should always be treated before planting, giving formaldehyde, one pint to 30 gallons of water and treat for two hours, as the best solution.

Spraying for leaf diseases should be with Bordeaux mixture, at least five times a year at intervals of 2 weeks, with 100 gallons to the acre thus increasing the crop onehalf invariably. In using fertilizer the speaker recommended 100 pounds to the acre if put in the row and 400 pounds if used broadcast.

"Co-operative marketing," by Mr. Cavanaugh, dwelt wholly on the manner of grading the potatoes giving many instances where fraud means had been used and how the shippers had suffered. His thought was to grade exact, give good weight, pack securely and gain a reputation that will help in selling your crop.

As an extra speaker, Prof. Peoples of Purdue, the oat smut man gave a few convincing figures. In DeKalb county on a test of 100 fields the per cent of loss was 11%, two years ago and last year it was reduced to 5%, showing that if followed up each year by all the farmers, they would gain in yield wonderfully.

Thursday Afternoon

Special music by the freshmen of our local high school was given place on the program. The young folks did fine under the leadership of C. A. Woodcox.

H. M. Widney took up the matter concerning the petition that was being circulated in the county against the County Agent movement, giving first the text of the petition as follows:

January 1919

To the County Council of DeKalb County, Auburn, Indiana.

Gentlemen:

We the undersigned citizens, tax payers and farmers of Concord Township, DeKalb County, Indiana, feeling the enormous expense and burden that has been put upon the citizens of this Country on account of the recent war, and feeling that every un-necessary expense to the County should be dispensed with and believing that the farmers of DeKalb County are efficient and successful, we feel that there is no necessity for the employment of a County Agent and therefore respectully ask and request that your honorable body dispense with and omit the making of an appropriation out of the funds of DeKalb County for the employment of a County Agent for said county and we further ask that no employment of a County Agent be made.

In order to show that the petition is misleading to the public eye the following facts were presented:

Salary

$150 per month.

$90 of this comes from U. S. D. A. direct.

$60 of this comes from State of Indiana. No part of salary from DeKalb county.

Yearly Appropriation

$1,500 divided as follows:

Stenographer, 12 months @ $50, $600.

Auto allowance @ 7 cents per mile, not more that $30 in any one month 12 months @ $30, $360.

Remainder may be used for office supplies, as stationery, charts or chemicals, etc.

If not used it is simply returned to the county treasury.

The last 9½ months the total expense to DeKalb county was a bit over $800, or about $90 a month or something over $1,000 for a full year.

1918 Seed Corn

Sold 1,360 bushels or 2 cars. Bought from U. S. D. A. Price fixed by government at $6 and $6.50 a bushel. Sold at same as purchase price. Bought in New Jersey 70lb to bushel. Sold in Indiana 68lb (legal wt.) allowed legitimate over-run 2lb to bushel $506 in City National Bank Auburn subject to order of County Board of Education.

I. Whereas certain elements of our people are seeking to destroy our American Republic and Ideals by radical changes in the social and political structure of our nation and believing these elements to be destructive of the best interests of the farmers and citizens of our country, therefore be it resolved by the members of the Tri-township Institute Association that

1. We endorse the present bill before the United States Senate to suppress the red flag or any other emblem or banner that in any way would detract from our own Stars and Stripes.

2. That we place our disapproval of all movements that are not in harmony with our American Constitution.

II. Whereas we believe the moving picture bill now before the state Legislature known as S: B 160, a bill to liscense the Sunday moving picture show, will be detrimental to the best interests of our community, therefore be it resolved

That we wire our representative in the state legislature to use his influence to defeat the passage of said bill.

"The use of the Tractor on the Average Farm" by H. M. Widney. 41,000 are in use in the state of Indiana and only three are used on farms under 80 acres. While Mr. Widney is new in tractor experience he said it led to greater possibilities, due to the fact that they could work with this machine when almost impossible with team. The type desired is what the farmer likes best. Carl Carpenter followed in the discussion and gave a fine follow up talk.

"Use of the Self-feeder for Hogs" by Wm. Bleeks, Cecil Shilling and F. E. Rhodes. The consensus of opinion was that the self-feeder was as important to the hog raiser as the silo to the dairyman. Wm. PISO'S

SECURE FARM NOW

Western Canada Offers Opportunity to the Ambitious.

Fertile Land at Moderate Cost, With Social and Other Advantages That Mean So Much, Will Soon Be Taken Up.

The desire to have a piece of land of one's own is a natural instinct in the heart of every properly developed man and woman. In earlier years, on account of the great areas of land available in the United States, no great difficulty was experienced by any ambitious settler who wished to become his own landholder, but the rapid increase in population, combined with the corresponding rise in the price of land, has completely changed this condition. Land which a generation ago might be had for homesteading, now commands prices ranging to $100 an acre and over. At such prices it is quite hopeless for the city man with limited capital, to attempt to buy a farm of his own. To pay for it becomes a lifelong task, and the probability is that he will never do more than meet the interest charges. If he is serious in his desires to secure a farm home he must look to countries where there is still abundant fertile land available at moderate cost, and where these lands are to be purchased on terms which make it possible for the settler with small capital to become a farm owner as the result of a few years' labor. He will also want land in a country where the practices of the people are similar to those to which he has been accustomed; a country with the same language, same religion, same general habits of living, with laws, currency, weights and measures, etc., based on the same principles as those with which he is familiar. He wants a country where he can buy land from $20 to $40 an acre which will produce as big or bigger crops as those he has been accustomed to from lands at $100 an acre. He wants this land where social conditions will be attractive to himself and family, and where he can look forward with confidence to being in a few years independent, and well started on the road to financial success.

All these conditions he will find in western Canada. The provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba provide the one and only answer to the land-hungry. The land is there; it is the kind of land he wants; the conditions are as nearly ideal as is possible, and the prices and terms are such that the man of moderate capital has an opportunity not available to him elsewhere. Land values are going to increase, but it will largely depend on how well the soil can be used, and the modern farmer is using it each year to better advantage.

But those who are on the ground and come closest to the heart of the farming sections are convinced that no material decrease in value is in sight. Indeed, they are almost unanimous in believing that we shall see a strong real estate market for fertile land, with prices maintained; and as development and further equipments are added the prices on the open market may be expected to show a further increase as the years go on—up to the limit of income plus what men are willing to pay to possess an attractive home.

Someone once said: "Never sell short on the United States. You will lose every time." And this applies to those who are inclined to believe that the future of farm values is in doubt. The American farmer is going forward, not backward, and the same may be said of the Canadian farmer. —Advertisement.

DAIRY

BETTER BREEDING HELPS

In dairying large production and profit go hand in hand. Breeding furnishes the most economical way to obtain large-producing cows. The purebred bull, with generations of high-producing ancestors back of him, must be used for breeding, and only the best heifers from the best cows should be chosen to be the dams of the next generation.

CERTAIN BULK IS NECESSARY

Table Gives Classification of Common Feeds as to Bulkiness—Palatability Important.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A certain bulk is necessary in the grain mixture given to the dairy cow to obtain the best results. When heavy feeds are used, some bulky ones should be included to lighten the mixture, since it is probable that a certain degree of bulkiness aids digestion. Some of the common feeds are classified as to bulk in the following table:

Raise the Dairy Calves, the Nation Needs Them.

Classification of Common Feeds as to Bulkiness.

Bulky.	Gluten feed
Alfalfa meal	Rye
Corn-and-cob meal	Barley
Bran (wheat)	Heavy or
Dried brewers' grains	Compact.
Dried distillers' grns.	Buckwheat middlings
Oats, ground	Cottonseed meal
Malt sprouts	Linseed meal
Dried beet pulp	Coconut meal
Medium.	Peanut meal
Corn meal or feed	Gluten meal
Hominy	Wheat middlings

Palatability is of great importance in successful feeding. The best results can not be obtained with any feed which is not well relished by the cow; consequently any unpalatable feed to be used should be mixed with those that are appetising.

In making the grain mixture care should be exercised that too large a quantity of either constipating or laxative feed is not included. Cottonseed meal, for example, is decidedly constipating and should be fed with laxative grains or succulents, such as silage or roots. For ordinary feeding in most parts of the United States not more than one-third of the grain should be cottonseed meal. In some sections larger quantities have been fed, but this practice is not be recommended. On the other hand, linseed-oil meal, because of its distinctly laxative action, should not be fed ordinarily in greater quantities than 1½ pounds a day.

MAKE TEST OF YOUNG BULLS

Some of Best Breeders Loan Out Animals to Dairymen in Community to Try Them Out.

Some of the best breeders follow the practice of lending out a number of the young bulls to dairymen in the community merely for the purpose of trying them out. Of course, many of these bulls prove to be mediocre, but when a valuable one is found he is the property of the lender and will repay any expense involved in his discovery.

A sire that has proved his worth always is in demand and can be sold readily if the public knows of his whereabouts. The purchaser can be found by advertising.

FATAL WEAKNESS OF DAIRY

Use of Sires Whose Ability to Improve Production Is Unknown Cause of Trouble.

A fatal weakness in the dairy business is haphazard breeding, that is, the use of sires whose ability to improve dairy production is unknown. Of course this cannot be known until some of his daughters come into production. And it cannot then be known with any degree of accuracy unless performance records are kept upon the cows and their daughters. Up to this time reliance has been placed upon the ancestry of a bull almost entirely, with the stress laid upon the fact of registration

FARMERS APPROVE COUNTY AGENT WORK

County Agent Telling of Advantages of Good Seed Corn and Demonstrating How It Should Be Stored and Tested.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"I do not think that any county can well afford to do without an agent," is the tribute a live Mississippi farmer, near Hattiesburg, pays his county agent in a recent letter to the United States department of agriculture. He was referring particularly to the assistance rendered by this agent and his assistant in securing all kinds of seed, improved stock, and farm implements; marketing the farmers' produce; getting their grain thrashed, so that there would be plenty of home-grown seed; securing labor to gather the crops; and obtaining reduced prices on fertilizers.

"The agent can do so much for the farmer," he writes, "because no one farmer can afford to work up these things for the community and in that way reach the entire county and get united effort in buying, selling, shipping, and anything that needs co-operative effort."

Farmers near Hattiesburg are said formerly to have been prejudiced against county agents and demonstration work, but they have seen the results obtained by following the methods advocated by them

UNSAFE SOURCES OF FARM WATER SUPPLY

Streams, Ponds, Ditches and Reservoirs Unsatisfactory.

Temperature Is Not Pleasing and Presence of More or Less Polluting Matter Is Certain—Some Hints on Ice Supply.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Streams, ponds, irrigation ditches and small open reservoirs are unsatisfactory and unsafe sources of farm water supply. The subject is considered in Farmers' Bulletin 941, "Water Systems for Farm Homes," recently issued by the United States department of agriculture.

The temperature of such water seldom is satisfactory, and the presence of more or less polluting matter is certain. Often the carcasses of farm animals are found therein. In thousands of cases the domestic supply is taken directly from irrigation ditches. In other instances a cistern, often without a filter, is filled at such times as the ditch water runs clearest. Often open reservoirs are necessary to collect and store rainfall for the use of stock, and occasionally they are used as sources of domestic water and ice supplies.

Under favorable conditions, where the basin is large and deep (10 feet or more), the bottom free of mud, muck, or other organic matter, the surroundings clean, and the circulation good, the quality of surface water may improve by long storage. However, these conditions are seldom realized on the farm, and the amount of improvement or purification is never certain.

The only safe course is to avoid drinking water from any surface source unless such water has been purified by filtration or sterilized by boiling or by chemicals. Prudence dictates, also, that ice gathered from shallow, unclean sources should not be brought in contact with food and drinking water. It is particularly important to reject snow ice and the first inch or so of clear ice formed.—From Farmers' Bulletin 941, Office of Public Roads.

DO NOT OVERCROWD STOCK IN SHIPPING

Attempt to Save Freight Often Causes Heavy Losses.

Load in Well-Bedded Cars and Do Not Overload—Little Extra Care Will Insure Shipper Against Loss of Animals.

"Don't try to save on your freight bill by overcrowding your live stock in shipping," says P. K. Heerwagen of the Colorado agricultural college.

"One shipper overcrowded some of his stockers, and when his consignment reached the Denver market, seven head had been trampled to death, causing him a loss of at least $300.

"Load your live stock in well-bedded cars, and do not overload, or underload, as one is as bad as the other. Put in only enough animals to make the car snug, so that the animals won't be thrown around or have room to lie down in transit.

"A little extra care in the shipping of live stock will mean money to the shipper, for it will insure him against loss, and the stock will arrive in fresher condition for market.'

PRICES NOT CUT BY LARGER PRODUCTION

Interesting Figures Given by Bureau of Crop Estimates.

Abnormal Conditions Created by War and Other Causes Have Imposed Special Relationship of Prices and Value.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is often said that when the farmer has a bumper crop the price is so low that the total value of the crop is below that of a usual crop, but the abnormal conditions created by the war and other causes have imposed a special relationship of crop prices and total value to the production of 1918 in comparison with 1917.

In the estimates of the bureau of crop estimates it appears that larger production has been followed by lower price and lower total value only for barley, cabbage, onions, and broom corn, while larger production has been followed by higher price and hence by higher total value for wheat, buckwheat, flaxseed, rice, sweet potatoes, tobacco, apples, oranges, and cranberries.

As is often the fact, lower production is associated with higher price and higher total value for oats, hay, sugar beets, peaches, and sorghum raised for sirup, but exceptions to this relationship are found in potatoes and hops, both of which had lower production and lower price.

Rye, cotton, the kafirs and peanuts, had a higher production in 1918 than in 1917 and a lower price, but not low enough to prevent a higher total crop value; whereas these conditions were reversed for corn and beans, both of which had smaller crops and higher prices, but not high enough to prevent a lower total crop value.

DANDRUFF MAKES HAIR FALL OUT

A small bottle of "Danderine" keeps hair thick, strong, beautiful.

Girls! Try this! Doubles beauty of your hair in a few moments.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine for a few cents at any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.—Adv.

WORMS ARE INJURIOUS TO GROWING PIGS

Not a Very Good Place for Hogs—Clean, Pens and Abundance of Exercise Will Do a Great Deal Toward Protecting Animals From Disease.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Intestinal worms are common in hogs, and are particularly injurious to growing pigs. Insufficiently fed, neglected pigs living in dirty pens and yards, fed from filthy troughs, drinking contaminated water, bathing in old hog wallows, and rooting and sleeping in manure piles and stack bottoms soon become infested with worms. Such pigs do not thrive but develop into pot-bellied, profitless runts. Pens should be kept clean and dry and the manure frequently removed.

Mixtures containing charcoal, copperas, etc., such as that described, are believed by some to be of value as preventives and destroyers of worms, but their usefulness probably depends upon their general effect on the condition of the pig and not upon their action on the worms. Other things being equal, a pig in good condition is better able to resist the attacks of worms than one that is not in good condition. Mineral mixtures may, therefore, by helping to balance the ration, tend to increase the powers of resistance to the ill effects of worms and other parasites. They should, however, be classed as tonics or conditioners rather than as worm preventives or destroyers.

Santonin, which was formerly widely used as a remedy for worms in hogs, is practically unobtainable at the present time owing to foreign trade conditions.

Effective Treatment.

The following treatment has been found to be very effective in expelling intestinal worms in experiments conducted by the zoological division of the bureau of animal industry:

Withhold all feed and water for 24 hours, then give each pig from one to two ounces of castor oil to which has been added oil of American wormseed as follows: Pigs weighing less than 50 pounds, one-half teaspoonful; pigs weighing 50 to 100 pounds, one teaspoonful; large hogs, two teaspoonfuls. Each pig should be dosed separately if the best results are to be obtained. Castor oil should always be given with oil of American wormseed. Other laxatives are not satisfactory.

Dangerous to Drench Hogs.

Drenching hogs is dangerous, as they are liable to get the remedy into the lungs. With sufficient assistance pigs may be held, the mouth kept open by means of a couple of loops of wire or rope, or leather straps, and the medicine given in a tablespoon or a large kitchen spoon. By this method, though it is troublesome, one may be certain that each pig gets his proper dose. After dosing with the above mixture the pigs may be fed and watered. Repeat the treatment in ten days.

Change Pastures Frequently.

Healthy hogs become infected with intestinal worms from feed, water and soil which have been infested by the droppings from infected hogs. Frequent change of pasture is one of the best means of reducing worm infestation to a minimum. Hogs, however, should not be allowed to run at large on open range, as this favors the spread of hog cholera.

Swine can be raised when they are confined in limited quarters if the quarters are kept clean, but they will do much better and stay in better health if they have plenty of pasture. Divide the pasture into convenient areas, so that the hogs can be shifted from one pasture to another. This not only provides fresh pasture but affords an opportunity to disinfect the pastures by plowing and reseeding or by exposure to the sun and weather.

SANITARY BARNS FOR STOCK ARE FAVORED

Fair Standard of Hygiene Should Be Maintained.

Important That Animals Be Given Abundance of Natural Light and Pure Air to Prevent Prevalence of Disease.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Losses of live stock due to disease are less on farms operated under reasonably sanitary conditions, and are slight in proportion to those on farms where no special attention is given to making the housing conditions sanitary. A man about to embark in the live-stock industry should hesitate, say officials of the United States department of agriculture, unless he is able to supply buildings suitably equipped to maintain at least a fair standard of hygiene. The prevalence of diseases, particularly tuberculosis, and their rapid spread in communities where large numbers of animals are confined in dark, damp, poorly ventilated buildings—especially of bank-barn type—and the nonprevalence of similar diseases among animals which are allowed to roam at large, illustrates the importance of constructing barns so that the live stock may have abundant natural light and pure air.

Sanitary barn construction means the liberal use of concrete and glass. This does not necessarily mean expensive construction. The sanitary barn should be built on a site that has the advantages of good natural drainage and a good water supply. The surroundings should be in keeping with the interior construction. Barn yards and exercising lots should be dry. Concrete feeding forms which are properly sloped and drained are advisable. In all cases convenience in locating barn sites should be secondary in consideration to sanitation.

MUCH MEAT WAS INSPECTED

Million Head More of Cattle Slaughtered in October, 1918, Than in October, 1917.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The meat inspection service of the United States department of agriculture supervised the slaughtering of over a million head more cattle in October, 1918, than in October, 1917. That additional protection to the American table came as the result of additional wartime tasks.

HARDEN HORSES FOR HARD SPRING WORK

Animals Often Pushed Beyond Limit at Start of Season.

Most Good Farmers Have Work Teams in Good Condition—Of Much Importance to Have Collar Fit to Avoid Sore Shoulders.

After a winter of comparative idleness horses are soft and are not able to stand long days of hard work. At the starting of spring's work, however, there is a tendency to rush the first crops in, particularly the small grain, "before more bad weather comes," and horses are often pushed beyond the limit of what they should endure. More is done in the long run to take it easy the first three or four days, rather than to let soft, ambitious horses push into work until sheer exhaustion compels them to quit. Crowding never pays at the start of spring's work.

Horses' shoulders are also out of condition for hard work at the commencing of spring. Most good farmers have their work teams well in flesh by spring. This means the collar that fits during the work season of the year before is too small at the beginning. It is a cruel mistake to use it if so small the shoulder is damaged by it. A good plan is to lay aside the regular collar and start with a soft cloth collar, the kind that may be bought for a dollar at most harness shops. In a few days or weeks the shoulder is down to normal and then the regular leather collar may be used and it will fit. When all folks learn that the collar should be fitted to the horse instead of the horse to the collar there will be less ill treatment of "man's noblest servant."

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Tankage is valuable for brood sows.

* * *

The sheep shed or barn should be entirely waterproof.

* * *

Corn silage, unhusked corn and clover hay are all splendid roughage foods.

The calf which is raised on skim milk should be taught early to eat grain.

Breeding ewes should be kept in good condition, and should have plenty of exercise.

GOOD ROADS

DRAINAGE IS BIG ESSENTIAL

Side Ditches Should Be Amply Large to Carry Off Water as Rapidly As It Enters.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The only reason for crowning a road surface is to enable it to shed water, and unless effective means are provided for disposing of the water after it is drained off the surface crowning will be of very little, if any, advantage. The side ditches should be amply large and should have sufficient fall to carry the water away as rapidly as it enters them, and they should have outlets at all convenient points. Cross drains or culverts should be constructed wherever it is desirable to transfer drainage water across the road, and they should usually be provided with end or wing walls for protecting the slopes of the embankment. When the material composing the roadbed is likely to be springy, a system of longitudinal under-drainage may be found necessary to secure proper drainage. In constructing a road, of any type whatever, it should be constantly borne in mind that adequate and continually effective drainage is absolutely necessary if the road is to be maintained in good condition.

WORKING ON DIXIE HIGHWAY

In Illinois Improvement Will Extend Over Distance of 54.5 Miles Costing $904,700.

One of the features of the year's work will be the improvement of the Dixie highway, which will be done by the states acting in co-operation with the government. Thus in Illinois the highway will be improved from the county line north through Will, Kankakee and Iroquois counties to the Vermilion county line running south. This work will extend over a distance of 54.5 miles at a cost of $904,700 and the construction will be of concrete and bituminous macadam.

At the same time Georgia will be working on the road from Atlanta through to Macon, through Clayton, Henry, Spaulding, Pike and Monroe counties, a distance of seventy-two miles and a continuation of the Dixie line in that state. In Tennessee and Kentucky projects will be under way which will further serve to improve this famous old highway which cuts through the central section of the country from north to south.

PATCHING IN RIGHT MANNER

Work Done Properly While Road Is Wet and Followed by Drag Is Superior Plan.

Patching done in the proper manner when the road is wet, followed by a road drag, will maintain an old gravel road surface as good as new until it is so badly worn that an entire new surface is required. The gravel should never be poorer than that forming the surface layer of the old road, and especially should not contain an excess of clay.

Civilize and Educate.

Good roads are civilizers and educators. They are the vanguards of other good things. They bring increased land values. Above everything else, they bring good people. No community that has improved its roads has ever regretted it. Road improvement is a good investment for any community.

Known by Its Roads.

In a way a country is known by its roads. It is within the range of possibilities that a time not far distant may bring home to the people of this country their lack of foresight in not making easy the "way of the wagon."

The Farm Tractor.

Let the farm tractor and the gas engine do their part to solve the labor question. They will relieve one of many a hard task and will stay on the job indefinitely.

"Safety-First".

The combined efforts of the St. Joe Vol. Fire Co., and the local Dramatic Club netted a neat sum to be applied on the debt made by purchasing a motor-truck for the Fire Dept. That the town and community appreciated the efforts of these organizations was attested by the crowds that braved the inclement weather both nights of the production of the play. "Safety-First" from first to last was a winner. The leading role, that of Jack Montgomery, was successfully carried by Durwood Ridgway, and he was ably supported by Esther Bowman (Jack's wife,) Jerry Arnold Jack's friend (Merritt Maxwell) and Virginia, Jerry's financee, (Kathryn Kinsey) were equally as good—Sam Mumaw kept his reputation as the "best ever" funny man and he had a successful rival on comedy parts in Lena Meek as Mary Ann, the Irish cook—Carl Perkins, the college boy, Ray Reasoner as the Terrible Turk, Olive Frye, the Turkish maiden, and Blanche Leighty, the society mother, were all fine. There was not a weak character in the play and much credit is also due the Directress, Mrs. Price. The entire proceeds were $181.55; expense $32 02, net proceeds $145.53. The Fire Dept., desires to thank the public for their patronage and the several liberal donations. Also the Dramatic Club which helped to make it possible to net this sum above much credit is due them as the time and efforts they put forth to make the play a success and the manner in which they played each part, could mean nothing but success. Also those who helped make the play a success by furnishing songs and other music between acts.

Obituary

Mary Adelaide Bartlett, daughter of Silas H. and Almira A. Bartlett, was born in Springfield Tp., Allen Co., Ind., April 21, 1850. When she was seven years of age, her parents moved to DeKalb Co., settling near Newville, and practically all the remainder of her life was spent in this county, excepting the last three months which were spent in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Harry Kees, in Marion, Ind., where she passed away, Monday, Feb. 24, 1919, aged 68 yrs., 10 mos. and 3 days.

She was married to Alexander B. Filley, in November, 1869. To this union three children were born: Nina A., Iona Belle and Frank H., who together with two brothers, George Bartlett, of Ft. Wayne, and Charles Bartlett, of Waterloo, and one sister, Sadie Bartlett, of Waterloo, and six grand children survive her.

In her girlhood days she united with the Church of Christ at Newville, Ind., and she with her husband were charter members in this church at St. Joe, and she remained true to her faith till the end.

On Dec. 16, 1905, her husband was accidentally killed by a falling limb of a tree, and with her children married and settled in homes of their own, she bravely took up the burdens necessary to the maintenance of the home where, if she had remained till May 26, next, she would have lived 40 years.

For a number of years she had been an active member of the Ladies Literary Club at St. Joe. She also had served for several years in the local W. C. T. U., and was a member of the Rebekah Lodge of St. Joe till death; the sisters of this order having charge of all her funeral services.

The funeral was held in the Church of Christ of St. Joe, on Feb. 26, at 2 P. M. The funeral discourse was delivered by Eld. J. O. Rose, of Angola, in the presence of a large audience of relatives, neighbors and friends, and the burial was in Riverside Cemetery.

Those out-of-town attending the funeral of Mrs. Filley were Charles Bartlett and wife and Miss Sarah Bartlett of Waterloo, George Bartlett of Fort Wayne, Mrs. Ethel Sawyer of Chicago, Frank Filley, wife and daughter of Huntington, Harry Kees and wife of Marion, C. A. Woodcox, wife, daughter and son of Adrian, Michigan, Mahlon Baker and wife and Mrs. Emanuel Hendricks of Auburn and Mrs. Adda Patterson of Fort Wayne.

Whereas God in His all wise providence has caused Mrs. Adda Filley, His faithful servant, to hear the command, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world," therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the members of the Rebekah Lodge, extend our heart-felt sympathy to the bereaved family, and commend them to God, who is the true source of comfort and consolation.

Resolved, that we as a lodge humbly submit to this dispensation of Providence, and say with the poet;

Be still, sad heart, and cease repining;
Behind the clouds is the sun still shining.
Thy fate is the common fate of all;
Into each life some rain must fall,
Some days must be dark and dreary.

Committee { Loretta Hull, Mary Kinsey, Nellie Perry.

Letha Alice Kain, daughter of J. S. and Mary J. Kain, was born near Newville, Ind., April 27, 1897.

In the distribution of talents her Creator was generous with her; Nature put in the wealth of her heart the precious gold of cheerfulness, Ambition called her to the heights, and vision opened to view the best path which she was want to choose.

Having a desire to add to those talents with which God had so richly endowed her, after completing the work of the grades in the district school she entered the St. Joe High School and graduated with the class of 1915. Later she took the Normal Course at Marion and at Tri-State College to prepare herself to enter upon the work of teaching.

Miss Letha taught two terms at Newville, one term at Coburntown and after starting on the second term resigned to enter government work.

On Oct. 16th. of last year she began her work at Washington, D. C. and was faithful at her post till the hand of the great epidemic that has caused so many hearts to bleed throughout the land, took her from her task.

About four weeks ago she was taken sick with influenza and later developed a case of pneumonia, slowly the dread desease did its work, the eye lids became heavy and at last she fell asleep in Christ Feb. 20, 1919, at Washington, D. C. Aged 21 years, 9 months and 23 days.

Early in life she gave her heart to God and her hand to the church. The precious graces of her sweet Christian character shed their fragrance along the pathway of life, and that most beautiful of beautiful things—Christian Character—was her great possession as she entered the Eternity.

She is survived by the sorrowing father and mother, the following brothers and sisters:—Stella J., Everett, Calvin, who is in the service of his country, oversea; Grace, Gladys, Forest, who has just recently came back from France; Blin, Russell, and Dwight. Many other relatives and friends also mourn.

Thackery has said "Those who are gone from you, you have. Those who departed loving you, love you still, and you love them always. They are not dead those dear hearts and true. They are just away."

I cannot say and I will not say
That she is dead, she is just away.
With a cheery smile and a wave of her hand,
She has wondered into another land.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon (Feb. 24) from the Newville U. B. Church, Rev. Beauchamp, of Waterloo, officiating. E. R. Kinsey, funeral director. Interment in the Newville cemetery.

The Best Incubator Is-- ALWAYS the CHEAPEST

Suppose you bought a flimsy, "cold cornered" incubator this year! And five eggs in each corner—twenty eggs out of every 100 failed to hatch!

Or the chicks die in the shell! Or the deadly 10-day mortality period snuffed out their frail lives. Would an incubator like this cost you less? No! It would be most expensive—would be the costliest incubator you could buy!

The Simplicity—the wonderful no-cold-corner incubator—will save your high-priced hatching eggs—save your chicks!

On the above basis of loss, last year, $185,000,000.00 worth of marketable poultry was lost by American poultry raisers. Besides this think of the loss of eggs, time, fuel, etc.

Try a "Simplicity."

High School Notes

ST. JOE.

Preparations are underway for a high school musical to be given the first Friday evening in April, Apr. 4th.

The boys basket ball team is preparing to attend the district tournament at Kendallville, Friday and Saturday of this week. Their skedule is not known as yet, but here is wishing them the best of luck.

Saturday the last institute of the teachers of Spencer, Concord and Newville townships for the year was held at the St. Joe high school building. The children of the intermediate room furnished music under the direction of C. A. Woodcox in a very creditable manner on the afternoon program.

Last Wednesday evening both teams went to Butler and played good games. The girls were outclassed in size but not in pluck. Their score resulted in a Butler victory of 33 to 2. The line-up was the same in both halves. The boys game resulted in a St. Joe victory of 23 to 21. Before the game the announcement was made that this would be the last game of the season on the home floor, and that a return game with St. Joe was improbable. But after the game the Butler team seemed more certain than before as to the improbability of a return game.

QUEEN ANITA OF PORTUGAL

Wouldn't Evanston, Ill., U. S. A., take on airs if its former belle, Miss Anita Stewart, should become a real, honest-to-goodness European queen? To be sure, the king business is "in bad" in most parts of Europe, but it is not entirely closed in all places. For example, the king of Great Britain and Ireland will continue to do business at the old stand. And, what's more, it is not by any means impossible that the next king should take unto himself an American wife. There is nothing in the British constitution that forbids it, and America stands pretty well in the world's estimation just now.

Anyway, Miss Anita Stewart of Evanston married Count Dom Miguel de Braganza. He is cousin to former King Manuel of Portugal. Portugal forced Manuel off his throne a while ago. The republic which was set up appears to be more or less unpopular in that country and efforts are apparently being made to restore Manuel to the throne—or at least to make Portugal a monarchy once more. But Manuel, it is said, has had enough of the king business and does not take kindly to the proposition of going back on the throne.

That being the case, Count Braganza would be next in line. If the dynasty is restored and Manuel declines royal honors, the next queen of Portugal is likely to be Queen Anita.

Countess Braganza is the stepdaughter of a rich and very prominent Chicagoan of an early day, the late James Henry ("Silent") Smith, who was also identified with New York in his last years.

KING FERDINAND AND ROUMANIA

A general insurrection in Roumania induced King Ferdinand to attempt to flee to Jassy. Workingmen blocked the roadway from the royal palace, and the king and his family were forced to return. The king was wounded when the workers fired upon the palace. Rioters in the streets of Bucharest were then openly demanding the overthrow of the dynasty, crying: "Down with the puppets! Long live the republic!" In a clash between the military and demonstrators at Bukorst 60 persons were killed and 150 wounded.

The discipline of the Roumanian army is collapsing. The food and economic situation is rapidly growing worse, and the country's finances are completely demoralized. The position of the Bratiano cabinet is declared to be untenable.

It has been known for many months that German and Russian anarchists, amply supplied with money, have been working in Roumania trying to bring about anarchy and the deposition of the dynasty. However, King Ferdinand was welcomed to Bucharest on his return from Jassy.

The internal situation in Roumania has been most unsettled and the government has had to deal both with socialist agitators at home and anarchist propagandists from Russia. The reconstruction task of the government has been hard because of the manner in which the Germans pillaged the country during the occupation. Roumanian money, printed and floated by the Germans, has been causing financial difficulties among people of all classes.

SEATTLE'S BATTLING MAYOR

Ole Hanson, Seattle's battling mayor, who quelled that city's big strike in a way that has evoked nation-wide admiration, says what he means and means what he says.

Mayor Hanson, when he was traveling south to seek his fortune many years ago, was in a railroad wreck at Marathon, Tex. Two of his children and his wife escaped with slight injuries; but his baby girl, Dorothy, only fourteen months old, was burned and received fatal injuries. Since then he has a strong prejudice against riding in trains. He drove to Seattle in a covered wagon all the way from Racine, Wis., the family home and his birthplace. He went with two children; now he has ten.

Hanson started in Seattle 16 years ago as a grocer. Times were hard and he went "broke." Borrowing $75, he entered the real estate business, and soon ran out of town the leading man in that line, who was conducting an irregular series of transactions. Made popular by his fights for the people, Hanson became state senator. Once, on the floor of the senate, an opposing senator lied to him. Ole swatted him one on the nose.

On retiring from the senate, Ole came back to municipal affairs to find the red-light district running wild. As a result there came the recall of Mayor Hiram Gill. The city wanted an honest, truthful, fighting mayor, and they elected Ole Hanson.

He made good.

EBERT, PRESIDENT OF GERMANY

Pealing church bells announced that the Germans had chosen the head of their own state. Friederich Ebert, former saddler and socialist leader, appeared before the theater 20 minutes later and received as president of Germany those plaudits formerly marking the appearance of the monarch who once stigmatized the party to which President Ebert belongs as being made up of men "unworthy to bear the name of German." Despite the certainty of Herr Ebert's election, the theater at Weimar was crowded beyond anything previously seen since the opening of the national assembly. The gallery resembled the reichstag tribune in the old days, with men and women in gala attire jammed in every available inch of space. The boxes and balconies were also crowded to their utmost capacity. Great crowds massed outside during the session, waiting patiently in the cold for a chance to see the new president when he left the building, which he did immediately after a very brief speech of acceptance.

END OF SESSION COMES IN WEEK

General Assembly Endeavoring to Clean Up All Unfinished Legislation on Hand.

MAY ABOLISH SERVICE BOARD

Much Sentiment Against Commission Because of Acts Made Necessary by War—Water Plant Condemnation Bill Killed

Indianapolis.—With practically only the present week to complete the mass of unfinished legislation on hand, the members of the Indiana legislature are endeavoring to clean up as rapidly as possible the many matters demanding their attention.

The senate decided to give consideration to the tax reform measure in committee of the whole, similar action not having been taken by the house when the bill was considered by the lower branch of the assembly.

The appropriation bill carries amounts approximating $2,500,000 for the ensuing two-year period and the matter seems certain of reaching final adjustment the present week.

Rumors continue to be heard that a plot is on foot in the senate to kill the conservation commission measure.

In the house sentiment is apparent that the bill to abolish the public service commission will be passed. Much public sentiment is in evidence against the commission because of the situation brought on by the war under which the commission was compelled to raise rates for many utilities to allow them to meet the increase in cost of operation. The same sentiment is in evidence in other states, but cooler heads here, it is said, are remembering that if the commission is abolished at this critical time in the state's history the utility companies of the state will sink back into a lack of control which at once would mean an entire revision of sentiment regarding the necessity for state control.

The house killed the Day bill providing for condemnation by the city of East Chicago of the East Chicago & Indiana Harbor Water company's plant and its purchase by the municipality, after a referendum vote on the matter, when the measure came up for a third reading. The vote was 35 ayes to 51 noes.

The East Chicago & Indiana Harbor Water company is controlled by the same interests which control the Indiana Water company. These interests are headed by G. H. Geist of Philadelphia. Representative Day opened the debate on the bill declaring that he wanted the house to know "just how far the company had gone to prevent us from having pure water." He related that the public service commission once had ordered the company to install a filtration system but that it was found that the commission had no power to compel such installation.

Representative Hamilton of South Bend read a brief against the bill, dwelling principally on legal questions which he said would operate to prevent action under the bill and he declared that the city would be worse off under the provisions of the bill than now. He indicated that work on construction of the water filtration plant would be begun by the company this spring, and he argued that no courts have recognized the principle that a mere change in ownership of such a utility could legalize a public assessment for the property. He contended that another enactment by the legislature would have to precede the passage of the Day bill because the Day bill's provisions would carry the city over its bonded indebtedness limit.

Senator Joseph M. Cravens, Democrat, of Madison, who was made the target of attacks by Republicans in an effort to unseat him on charges that he had not been elected, has won his fight in the senate and was seated by the body. Thereupon he introduced his expense accounts in connection with the attempt to unseat him—and asked the senate to pay them.

The house bill, introduced by Representative Axby, to give widows and orphans of soldiers of the world war the same privileges of all kinds now enjoyed by relatives of soldiers of former wars, was read a second time in the house and sent to engrossment.

Refuses Raise for Judges.

The bill proposing increases in salaries of judges of the Supreme court from $6,000 to $8,000 and Appellate court judges from $6,000 to $7,500 was killed by the house of representatives. The measure was reported back from committee and the recommendation for indefinite postponement was sustained by the house by acclamation.

Truck Bill Amended.

The Dean bill to license all motor-vehicles according to horsepower and tonnage, which had been recommitted to the committee for amendment, was reported to the house, amended to provide for a license fee of $60 for each truck of more than ten tons' capacity and a fee of $30 for each trailer. The committee did nothing with the amendment tacked on by the house barring ten-ton trucks from state roads. Doubt was expressed as to the amendment's validity where army trucks are concerned.

Violate State Food and Drug Laws.

Many violations of the state food and drug laws have been found in the last two weeks by inspectors of the food and drug division of the state board of health, according to an announcement made public by H. E. Barnard, state food and drug commissioner. Although violations of the law were found in many places in the state, the most flagrant were found in Indianapolis.

For Use of English Only.

In the house Representative Axby introduced two bills affecting electors who are unfamiliar with the English language. One would strike from the election laws the provision that instructions to voters may be printed in foreign languages. The other would prevent election officers from assisting voters except in case of physical disabilities. This would mean assistance could not be given because of lack of knowledge of the English language. These measures are a part of the general movement to rid the statutes of anything that might encourage the use of the German language. Senator McCray has announced that he will introduce similar bills in the senate.

Governor Goodrich Speaks at Banquet.

Mrs. Medill McCormick of Chicago, of the Republican National Woman's party, was guest of a meeting at the annual banquet of the Republican Editorial association of Indiana and with Gov. James P. Goodrich shared the honor of being the principal speakers. The National League of Indiana, Republican members of the state legislature, state officials and party leaders joined with the editors in the banquet. "From this time on no national political party can succeed without the full partisanship of its women," declared Mrs. McCormick, who asserted the appointment of a woman's executive by the Republican national committee marks a new era in national politics. Governor Goodrich took up state and national politics in his address. Letters and telegrams from Senators Watson and New, Chairman Hays of the national committee and the 12 Indiana Republican members of congress were read.

Permanent Highways Urged.

A feature of the final day's session of the southeastern Indiana road school at Vincennes was an automobile inspection trip over improved highways in Lawrence county, Illinois, which is just across the Wabash river from Vincennes.

Professor R. C. Yoeman, highway extension engineer at Purdue university, told of the growing importance of highways, and J. P. Scott spoke on the construction of highways and told of the system being followed in Illinois.

Professor Yoeman pointed out that roads formerly were built at the expense of rural communities with the local and township unit being used as a basis of construction. He said that traffic has changed so rapidly within the last ten years and rapid-moving vehicles have grown in volume to the extent that road legislation and road improvement have lagged behind.

The state highway commission bill and the county unit bill now before the legislature, he said, propose to accomplish business system and reconstruction by adopting a larger unit of control. Many road superintendents and farmers attended the two-day session.

Authorizes County Road.

The senate passed the bill authorizing the construction of a county-line road in Huntington county; the senate joint resolution to amend the constitution authorizing the state Supreme court to pass on the constitutionality of bills in the legislature; the Aldredge bill establishing courses in physical education in high and elementary schools and the Munton bill, providing for creation of joint high and elementary schools where they represent two townships. The Beardsley bill to increase auto license fees on pleasure cars 100 per cent and trucks 200 per cent failed to pass because of a lack of constitutional majority. The Wright bone-dry bill was reported back from committee and an amendment providing that a person may keep not more than one gallon of liquor in his home instead of one quart as set out in the original bill was adopted. The senate adopted the favorable report on the McCray bill providing for election of members of state commissions. The bill proposing building of a dam across the Wabash river in Cass county was advanced to engrossment.

The bill creating the office of county engineer in counties of more than 85,000 population where the surveyor does not possess qualifications to serve as a civil engineer, which failed to pass Thursday because of lack of a constitutional majority, was called up again in the house and passed 60 to 38.

The house passed a bill appropriating $2,000 for the purchase of a site and erection of a memorial in Henry county for the late Wilbur Wright Dayton (O.) aviator.

Assessors Tax Cash Value.

The state board of tax commissioners has prepared its annual spring letter of instructions to assessors and will mail copies of it to all Indiana assessors. The board instructs the assessors who have begun on their annual work to list all property at its true cash value, and if the present legislature eventually provides for it, to take 50 per cent of the true valuation as the basis for the taxing valuation. The board directs assessors to take note of the law which requires the administration of the oath.

Hoosier State Happenings

North Vernon.—A branch of the Woman's Franchise League of Indiana has been organized here.

Evansville.—Post J, Travelers' Protective association of this city, passed resolutions favoring the spread of optimism in the land.

Anderson.—Herschell Anderson has sold the Perkinsville-Lapel independent telephone system to a group of farmers. It is the only remaining independent telephone line in the county.

Bowling Green.—Influenza has made its second visit here this winter and 50 cases are reported. Many business men are affected with the malady. None of the victims is thought to be seriously ill, however.

South Bend.—As a result of two patients leaving the St. Joseph County Tuberculosis hospital, due to alleged mistreatment, the county commissioners have ordered an examination into its affairs.

Sullivan.—Six weeks time was lost this winter in the Sullivan schools by the influenza epidemics. The time will be made up in the spring, school closing June 13. The attendance during the semester just closed was 50 per cent below normal.

Rushville.—The voters of Rush county in a special election voted 1,571 to 698 against the proposal for building a county hospital. Less than half the voters of the county took part in the election. The farmers opposed the hospital on account of the expense.

Winchester.—Walking influenza has been noted in this county. The symptoms, it is said, are sneezing, hiccoughs and sore throat and a very mild form of fever, not severe enough to force one to go to bed. Local physicians generally are viewing the matter seriously. One physician says it is a recurrence of the disease in a very mild form.

Hartford City.—That Blackford county is due for a visit from seventeen-year locusts is evident from the find made on a farm in Jackson township. Workers have uncovered hundreds of locusts in the larval condition. The locusts have worked near the top soil, indicating that they are slowly burrowing out and will appear with the first warm weather.

Lafayette.—A campaign for the testing of seed corn, especially community testing, has been launched in Indiana by soils and crops specialists on the Purdue university extension staff. The building of testers which will hold the kernels from 2,000 to 5,000 ears, is being advocated, and this plan is being followed for the first time in several counties.

Columbus.—John W. Phillips has sold a consignment of pelts of animals trapped by his son, Homer Phillips, of Seymour. The hides brought good prices, muskrat pelts, $1.70 each; minks, $5.50; skunks, $4.25; Opossum hides, that a few years ago brought 10 to 15 cents each, are now $2 on the local market. Coon pelts are $5 and $6, and red fox $15 to $18. The consignment sold for $300.

Newcastle.—An error in a resolution adopted by the Henry County Farmers' Institute and now going the rounds gives a view directly contrary to the views of the farmers. As published, the farmers are quoted as indorsing universal military training, while the exact wording of the resolution is as follows: "We are opposed to any law for compulsory military training, believing that such training leads to more war."

Lawrenceburg.—Clarence C. Madison, Dearborn county farm agent, has about finished a fruit tree spraying campaign, which included demonstrations in the orchards of several growers. Madison says that there are many orchards in this county that could be restored to good bearing if the work of spraying was attended to annually at the proper time. This county has invested much money in fruit trees that have borne little fruit, mainly because the young trees were not given the attention necessary to develop them.

Huntington.—The location of several portable limestone grinders for making limestone for agricultural purposes is being advocated by F. A. Loew, county agent, following tests of limestone outcroppings in various parts of the county which show them suitable for farm purposes. Portable grinders would make the cost of the stone low enough that it could be applied profitably to the poorer soils of the county. The limestone taken from the bed of Little river in its improvement shows a high percentage of calcium and magnesium carbonates, the two making it test 105 per cent as a neutralizing agent for acid soil. Outcroppings of limestone in Lancaster and Salamonie townships have been found suitable, and others are being tested.

Hartford City.—After years of contention between property owners and railroad officials over the closing of the south end of High street, for the purpose of erecting a new Pennsylvania railroad station, an understanding apparently has been reached and it is expected that a new building, to cost $45,000, will replace the small shed now on the site.

Laporte.—An offer has been made to the war department at Washington of the buildings and grounds of the Interlaken school, situated near this city if accepted, it is thought the pla will be used as a military hospital.

What Is the Cause of Backache?

BY DOCTOR CORNELL

Backache is perhaps the most common ailment from which women suffer. Rarely do you find anybody free from it. Sometimes the cause is obscure, but Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., a high medical authority, says the cause is very often a form of catarrh that settles in the delicate membranes of the feminine organs. When these organs are inflamed, the first symptom is backache, accompanied by bearing down sensations, weakness, unhealthy discharges, irregularity, painful periods, irritation, headache and a general run-down condition. Any woman in this condition is to be pitied, but pity does not cure. The trouble calls for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which is a separate and distinct medicine for women.

It is made of roots and herbs put up without alcohol or opiate of any kind, for Dr. Pierce uses nothing else in his prescription. Favorite Prescription is a natural remedy for women, for the vegetable growths of which it is made seem to have been intended by Nature for that very purpose. Thousands of girls and women, young and old, have taken it, and thousands have written grateful letters to Dr. Pierce saying it made them well. In taking Favorite Prescription, it is reassuring to know that it goes straight to the cause of the trouble. There is but one way to overcome sickness, and that is to overcome the cause. That is precisely what Favorite Prescription is intended to do.

SAGE AND SULPHUR DARKENS GRAY HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Restore Color, Gloss and Attractiveness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.—Adv.

To Tease the Teut.

The other day at an exposition a woman stood viewing a big warplane, upon which were painted the customary red, blue and white circles, when she was heard to remark to her husband: "Isn't it strange that the allies should all paint targets on their airplanes?"

Good health cannot be maintained where there is a constipated habit. Garfield Tea overcomes constipation. Adv.

Slightly Sarcastic.

"Do you feel able to take a few letters, Miss Pounder?"

"Why, certainly. That's what I'm here for, isn't it?"

"I suppose so, but my request came so soon after your last telephone conversation that I was afraid you would be exhausted."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Feel Lame and Achy?

Colds and grip leave thousands with weak kidneys and aching backs. The kidneys have to do most of the work of fighting off any germ disease. They weaken—slow up, and you feel dull, irritable, or nervous—have headaches, dizziness, backache, sore joints and irregular kidney action. Then the kidneys need prompt help. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. Thousands praise Doan's for quick, satisfactory results.

An Ohio Case

C. O. Moorhead, manager poultry & produce business, 602 S. Washington St., Greenfield, O., says: "For three years I was unable to work and became weak and run down. I suffered from backache and had bladder trouble. The kidney secretions were scanty. I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and I got better rapidly. My kidneys began acting regularly and the backache left me."

WOLVES OF THE SEA

By RANDALL PARRISH

Copyright, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

Foreword.

Anson Carlyle, aged twenty-three, the ninth in descent from Capt. Geoffry Carlyle of Glasgow, Scotland, was among the heroic Canadian dead at Vimy ridge. Unmarried, and the last of his line, what few treasures he possessed fell into alien hands. Among these was a manuscript, apparently written in the year 1687, and which, through nine generations, had been carefully preserved, yet never made public. The paper was yellowed and discolored by years; occasionally a page was missing, and the writing itself had become almost indecipherable. Much indeed had to be traced by use of a microscope. The writer was evidently a man of some education, and clear thought, but exceeding diffuse, in accordance with the style of his time, and possessing small conception of literary form. In editing this manuscript for modern readers I have therefore been compelled to practically rewrite it entirely, retaining merely the essential facts, with an occasional descriptive passage, although I have conscientiously followed the original development of the tale. In this reconstruction much quaintness of language as well as appeal to probability, may have been lost, and for this my only excuse is the necessity of thus making the story readable. I have no doubt as to its essential truth, nor do I question the purpose which dominated this rover of the sea in his effort to record the adventures of his younger life. As a picture of those days of blood and courage, as well as a story of love and devotion, I deem it worthy preservation, regretting only the impossibility of now presenting it in print exactly as written by Geoffry Carlyle.

CHAPTER I.

Sent Into Servitude.

Knowing this to be a narrative of unusual adventure, and one which may never even be read until long after I have departed from this world, when it will be difficult to convince readers that such times as are herein depicted could ever have been reality, I shall endeavor to narrate each incident in the simplest manner possible. My only purpose is truth, and my only witness history. Yet, even now lately as this all happened, it is more like the recollections of a dream, dimly remembered at awakening, and, perchance, might remain so, but for the scars upon my body, and the constant memory of a woman's face. These alone combine to bring back in vividness those days that were—days of youth and daring, of desperate, lawless war, of wide ocean peril, and the outstretched hands of love. So that here, where I am writing it all down, here amid quietness and peace, and forgetful of the past, I wander again along a deserted shore, and sail among those isles of a southern sea, the home for many a century of crime and unspeakable cruelty. I will recall the truth, and can do no more.

It was still early morning when we were brought out under heavy guard and marched somberly forth through the opened gates of the jail. Ahead we could perceive a forest of masts, and what seemed like a vast crowd of waiting people. That we had been sentenced to exile, to prolonged servitude in some foreign land, was all that any of us knew.

The guards prodded the crowd savagely with the butts of their muskets, thus making scant room for us to shuffle through, out upon the far end of the wharf, where we were finally halted abreast of a lumping brig, apparently nearly ready for sea. There were more than forty of us. I gained glimpse of the hooker's name—Romping Betsy of Plymouth. A moment later a sailor passed along the edge of the dock and instantly a whisper passed swiftly from man to man. "It's Virginia, mate; we're bound for Virginia."

The eyes of a prisoner met mine. "Virginia, hey?" he grunted. "Ye're a sailorman, ain't ye, mate? Well, then, whar is this yere Virginia?"

"That's all right, mates," I returned cheerily. "We'll fall into the hands of Englishmen out there. In America, where all the tobacco comes from. I've been there twice—and to a land beyond they call Maryland. 'Tis a country not so unlike England."

"Yer better stow that, my man," growled someone above me, and I looked up into the stern eyes of the captain of the guard, "or it may be the 'cat' for ye. So ye've been ter the Virginia plantation, hev ye? Then ye must be Master Carlyle, I take it. I heerd tell about ye at the trial, but supposed ye ter be an older man."

"I am twenty-six."

"Ye don't look even thet. Ay, they're ready for ye now. Fall in there—all of yer. Step along, yer d——d rebel scum."

I stared aft at the poop deck. There were a number of persons gathered along the low rail, probably all passengers. Then my eyes encountered a strange group foregathered beside the lee rail.

There were four in the little party, one of them a negress. Another was clearly enough a colonial proprietor, a heavily built man of middle age, purple faced. I passed these by with a glance, my attention concentrating upon the other two—a middle-aged man and a young woman standing side by side. The former was a dashing looking blade, of not more than forty, attired in blue slashed coat, ornamented with gilt buttons, and bedecked at collar and cuffs with a profusion of lace. A saffron colored waistcoat failed to conceal his richly beruffled shirt, and the hilt of a rapier was rather prominently displayed. Such dandies were frequently enough seen, but it was this man's face which made marked contrast with his gay attire. He was dark and hook-nosed, apparently of foreign birth, with black mustache tightly clipped, so as to reveal the thin firmness of his lips, and even at that distance I could perceive the lines of a scar across his chin. Altogether there was an audacity to his face, a daring, convincing me he was no mere lady's knight but one to whom fighting was a trade. He was pointing us out to his companion, apparently joking over our appearance, in an endeavor to amuse. Seemingly she gave small heed to his words, for although her eyes followed where he pointed they never once lighted with a smile, nor did I see her answer his sallies. She was scarcely more than a girl, dressed very simply in some clinging dark stuff, with a loose gray cloak draping her shoulders and a small, neat bonnet of straw perched upon a mass of coiled hair. The face beneath was sweetly piquant, with dark eyes and rounded cheeks flushed with health. She stood, both hands clasping the rail, watching us intently. I somehow felt as though her eyes were upon me, and within their depths, even at that distance, I seemed to read a message of sympathy and kindness. The one lasting impression her face left on my memory was that of innocent girlhood, dignified by a womanly tenderness.

What were those two to each other? I could not guess, for they seemed from two utterly different worlds. Not brother and sister surely; and not lovers. The last was unthinkable. Instinctively I disliked the man, aware of an instant antagonism, realizing that he was evil; while his companion came to me as revealment of all that was true and worthy, in a degree I had never known before. From the instant I looked upon these two I felt convinced that, through some strange vagary of fate, we were destined to know more of each other; that our life lines were ordained to touch and become entangled, somewhere in that mystery of the western world to which I had been condemned.

What Were These Two to Each Other?

Then the guards came to me, and, with my limbs freed of fetters, I was passed down the steep ladder into the semidarkness between decks, where we were to be confined. It proved a dismal, crowded hole in which we were quartered like so many cattle, the only ventilation and light furnished by the open hatch above. The ticket given me called by number for a certain berth, and I found this, throwing within the small bundle I bore. Almost immediately there was a sound of tramping feet on the deck above, and the creaking of blocks. Then a sudden movement of the hull told all we were under way.

CHAPTER II.

The Prison Ship.

The greater portion of that voyage of 53 days I would blot entirely from memory if possible. I cannot hope to describe it in any detail—the foul smells, the discomfort, the ceaseless horror of food, the close companionship of men turned into mere animals by suffering and distress, the wearisome days, the black, sleepless nights, the poisonous air, and the brutality of guards. I can never forget these things, for they have scarred my soul.

The hatch above remained open, but carefully guarded night and day, while we were permitted on deck for air and exercise only in squads of ten, two hours out of every twenty-four. This alone served to break the dread monotony of the voyage. From our exercise on deck we generally returned below drenched to the skin, but glad to even pay that price for two hours of fresh air, and an opportunity to gaze about at sea and sky. We were herded well forward, a rope dividing us from the main deck, which space the passengers aft used as a promenade. There were only three women aboard, a fat dowager, the young lady I had noticed at embarkation, and her colored maid. I gained but one glimpse of the young lady in the first two weeks at sea, and then only as we were being ordered down to our quarters for the night. Just as I was approaching the hatch to descend our eyes met fairly, and I instantly knew she saw and recognized me. For a single second our glances clung, as though some mysterious influence held us to each other—then the angry guard struck me with the stock of his piece.

"What er ye standin' thar fer?" he demanded savagely. "Go on down—lively now."

I saw her clasping fingers convulsively grip the rail, and, even at that distance, marked a sudden flame of color in her cheeks. That was all her message to me, yet quite enough. Although we had never spoken, although our names were yet unknown, I was no criminal to her mind, no unrecognized prisoner beneath contempt, but a human being in whom she already felt a personal interest, and to whom she extended thought and sympathy. I continued entirely ignorant of the identity of the young woman. She remained in my memory, in my thoughts nameless, a dream rather than a reality. I did learn that the gay gallant was a wealthy Spaniard, supposedly of high birth, by name Sanches, and at one time in the naval service, and likewise ascertained that the rotund planter was a certain Roger Fairfax of Saint Mary's in Maryland, homeward bound after a successful sale of his tobacco crop in London. It was during his visit to the great city that he had met Sanches, and his praise of the colonies had induced the latter to essay a voyage in his company to America. But strange enough no one so much as mentioned the girl in connection with either man.

CHAPTER III.

Dorothy Fairfax.

We were not far from two hundred miles east of the Capes. I had been closely confined to my bunk for two days with illness, but now, somewhat stronger, had been ordered to deck by the surgeon. The last batch of prisoners, after their short hour of recreation, had been returned to the quarters below, but I was permitted to remain alone undisturbed.

I was still standing there absorbed when a voice, soft-spoken and feminine, broke the silence.

"May I speak with you?"

I turned instantly, so thoroughly surprised my voice faltered as I gazed into the upturned face of the questioner. She stood directly beside me, her head uncovered. Instantly my cap was off, and I was bowing courteously.

"Most certainly," with a quick side glance toward the guard, "but I am a prisoner."

"Of course I know that," in smiling confidence. "Only you see I am rather a privileged character on board. Perhaps you may be punished if you talk with me—is that what you mean?"

"I am more than willing to assume the risk. I have made few friends forward, and am even bold enough to say that I have longed for a word with you ever since I first saw you aboard."

Captain Carlyle finds a friend but at the same time he finds that he has an enemy on board the Romping Betty. His enemy warns that he will get revenge, but why? Geoffry racks his brain in vain for the answer.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON FOR MARCH 9

JOSHUA, PATRIOT AND LEADER.

LESSON TEXT—Joshua 1:1-9.

GOLDEN TEXT—Be strong and of a good courage.—Joshua 1:9.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL — Joshua 1:10-2:17; 5:13-15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A story of a brave leader. Memory Verse—Joshua 1:8.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Follow the right leader. Memory Verse—Deut. 1:7, 8.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—When to be brave.

The book of Joshua is a history of the conquest of the promised land and its apportionment among the tribes of Israel. It takes its name from its principal character—Joshua. During the wilderness journey he was Moses' minister, and captain of his army. When Moses was denied the privilege of going over the Jordan, Joshua was appointed to the leadership of Israel. Being so long faithful as a servant, he is now qualified to rule. Only those who have themselves learned to obey are fit to rule. Moses, the representative of the law, brought Israel to the borders of Canaan. Joshua was the man chosen to lead the people into the place of rest. The name "Joshua" has the same derivation as the name "Jesus." The law (Moses) was our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ; but Christ (our Joshua) has given us victory and rest.

I. Joshua's Call (1:1,2).

Moses, God's servant, is dead, but God's work must go on. He continues his work by calling others to take it up, though he buries his workers. Joshua, no doubt, was sorrowful over the loss of his master, but there is no time for mourning. The best way to cure our griefs and sorrows is to take up courageously the burdens and responsibilities which our leaders have laid down.

II. God Renews His Promise of the Land to Israel (1:3, 4).

The promise had been made to Abraham, and renewed to Isaac, Jacob and Moses. It is now renewed to Israel when they are about to enter upon its possession. The borders of the land were quite large (v. 4) "from the wilderness and this Lebanon, even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun, shall be your coast." The nearest it was ever possessed was during the reigns of David and Solomon, though not then fully realized. This country still belongs to the Jews, and in God's own time they shall possess it. Their getting possession of this land was due entirely to themselves. God promised them, that wherever their feet set upon the land it was theirs. If they failed to secure possession it was because they failed to claim it. We would all enjoy larger blessings if we would claim them.

III. God's Presence Promised to Joshua (1:5).

Joshua was entering upon a perilous and difficult enterprise, but the Lord said as he was with Moses so would he be with him. The difficulties before him were:

1. The Jordan river (v. 2). It was now at its flood (3:15), making it impossible for armies to cross.

2. In the land the people were living in walled cities. Notwithstanding this, God's help insured success. (1) "I will not fail thee nor forsake thee." (2) "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee." (3) "As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee."

IV. Conditions of Blessings in the Land (1:6-9).

1. "Be strong and of a good courage" (v. 6). His mission was to go in and divide the land among the tribes for an inheritance. God could not bless him if he should play the coward.

2. Unwavering obedience to the word of God (v. 7). In a land of idolatry it requires much courage to obey the true God. The prosperity and good success was conditioned upon unswerving obedience to God's commands. In all his work he must conform his life to the law of God. To pass from the path outlined therein would bring disaster and ruin. In order to accomplish this the law of the Lord must constantly be in his mouth. He was to meditate therein day and night. If we are to prosper in our Christian experience there must be that regular and reverent study of God's Word. Joshua renders prompt obedience. He did not stop to cavil, but at once gave orders for the march. God made the plan and gave the directions. His responsibility was to go forward without doubting, taking possession of the inheritance.

Sacrifice.

A work that requires no sacrifice does not count for much in fulfilling God's plans. But what is commonly called sacrifice is the best, happiest use of one's self and one's resources—the best investment of time, strength, and means. He who makes no such sacrifice is most to be pitied. He is a heathen because he knows nothing of God.—Samuel Chapman Armstrong.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By Mary Graham Bonner

THE FAIRIES' CALL.

"One day a little girl named Melly," said Daddy, "had two callers. Their names were Kitty and Ralph, but Ralph was always called Little Boy.

"They wore wings made of a very pretty blue material which had wires in them so the wings would stick out.

"They rang the bell when they came to see Melly, though as a rule they always walked inside and called to her.

"'Tell Melly,' they said, 'that two fairies are calling on her.'

"They all had lots of fun as they had brought some wings for Melly, too, and soon they were all playing they were fairies.

"They played all sorts of games and after awhile, when they had grown tired of racing and skipping and jumping and turning somersaults and of dancing so that one moment they were really like fairies and another like acrobats or performers in a circus, they all got in the hammock.

"They had not been there long when three little people came hopping along and the children knew in a moment they were fairies.

"'Hello Kitty, hello Melly, hello Little Boy,' they called and their voices sounded like music and their laughter like tinkling bells.

"'Hello,' called the three children.

"'We've left Fairyland to come and call,' said the first little fairy.

"'We're going back later on, as there is going to be a ball there tonight as soon as old Mr. Moon comes out,' said the second fairy.

"'And we're going to sing a song,' said the third fairy.

"'Oh, won't you sing it to us?' asked Kitty and Melly and Little Boy.

"'Would you like to hear the song?' asked the fairies. 'Really and truly would you like to hear it?'

"'Oh yes, really and truly and honestly and everything,' said the children.

"'Then you shall hear it for fairies love children you know, and like to make them very, very happy. Every time a child cries there is a fairy crying in Fairyland too, and when a child cries hard the fairy's wings become droopy and her beautiful clothes don't stand out as a fairy's should, but they hang about her as though she had been out in a dreadful shower.

"We Will Sing Our Song for You."

"'But when a child laughs a fairy laughs too, and the more laughter there is in childland the more there is in Fairyland.

"'And when we can see that in your hearts there is dancing because you feel so happy, then we give a ball.

"'Tonight we just have to give a ball because there has been so much laughter today in the children's world. And when we three fairies saw you three children playing fairies we thought we'd come and pay you a little visit.'

"'We're so glad you did,' said the children.

"The fairies all smiled and then the first fairy said,

"'We will sing our song for you, as soon we must go back to Fairyland.'

"Then the three fairies joined hands and as they swayed with their little bodies to and fro they sang this song.

We're the fairies so gay,
And we laugh alway.
Though when a child cries,
A fairy then sighs.
So please laugh, children dear,
So we'll be of good cheer.
Good-bye children three,
May you always happy be.

"And with this the three fairies left the three children. Soon Kitty was rubbing her eyes and Little Boy was rubbing his eyes and Melly was rubbing her eyes.

"'The fairies have been to call on us,' they said as they got up from the hammock. And then they all laughed and smiled as they thought of the beautiful ball in Fairyland."

On the Losing Side.

Don't be afraid of being on the losing side. Defeat in a good cause is infinitely better than helping to win a victory for a cause in which you do not believe. Stand by your convictions. One who surrenders them in order to win is really on the losing side.—Girl's Companion.

Two Ambitions.

LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE IF SICK, CROSS, FEVERISH

HURRY, MOTHER! REMOVE POISONS FROM LITTLE STOMACH, LIVER, BOWELS.

GIVE CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS AT ONCE IF BILIOUS OR CONSTIPATED.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels needs a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative;" they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—Adv.

Forest Waste.

We have used up about half the forests we originally possessed. Although there are forest associations in nearly every state, supplementing the excellent work of the national forest service, trees are being used up faster than they are being grown. When a tree is cut less than half of it reaches the consumer. The sawmill wastes amount to 49 per cent of the tree. Forest fires cause a loss of $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 yearly. There are 147 national forests in the United States, consisting of 155,166,619 acres.—Thrift Magazine.

RHEUMATISM IS PAIN ONLY, RUB IT AWAY

Instant relief from pain, soreness, stiffness following a rubbing with "St. Jacobs Liniment."

Stop "dosing" rheumatism.

It's pain only; not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Liniment" right on the "tender spot," and by the time you say Jack Robinson—out comes the rheumatic pain and distress. "St. Jacobs Liniment" conquers pain! It is a harmless rheumatism liniment which never disappoints and doesn't burn the skin. It takes pain, soreness and stiffness from aching joints, muscles and bones; stops sciatica, lumbago, backache, neuralgia and reduces swelling.

Limber up! Get a small trial bottle of old-time, honest "St. Jacobs Liniment" from any drug store, and in a moment you'll be free from pains, aches and stiffness. Don't suffer! Rub rheumatism away.—Adv.

Collector of Internal Revenue, Peter J. Kruyer, is sending one of his Deputies, Mr. Showalter, solely to help people in this vicinity to determine their individual liability and to comply with the law's requirements as to 1918 incomes. His office hours will be from 8 A. M. to 8 P. M. each day, and he will remain in town until the close of business on March 12. "This free advisory service, "writes Collector Kruyer, "is planned for those who are required for the first time to consider their liability and to make sworn returns. "Many thousands must this year file returns who were not affected by the prior Federal laws taxing incomes. Here are the requirements:

"Every unmarried person who had a net income of $1,000 or over during 1918; and every married person who, together with wife (or husband) and minor children, had a net income of $2,000 in 1918."

"The advice and services of the Deputy Collector are entirely free, and he is authorized to administer the oath required on returns, free of charge. Union Services Sunday.

Began with Union Township Sunday School, followed at the Noon Hour with Basket Dinner. Great Crowds Swarm Each Session. State Worker Pays Tribute to Convention—"Best attended in the state."

March 9, 1919, an all day Township Sunday School Convention was held in the Lutheran and M. P. churches, beginning at 9:30 with a union Sunday School which had an attendance of 200 with an offering of $12.33. At the close of this Miss Emma Lemen, state worker, gave a short talk on elementary work. After which Rev. A. K. Mumma addressed the boys and girls until the dinner hour, when the congregation went to the basement and partook of a bountiful basket dinner. Immediately after the dinner hour Miss Lemen had charge of the primary and intermediate conference, in which she urged the schools not doing so to take up the graded system for childrens' division. She also told of the childrens' drive which is to be held in the near future in which it is hoped to gather in many children to the Sunday School who are not attending. After the conference the convention went to the M. P. church where the afternoon and evening sessions were held. M. T. Bishop had charge of the devotional, reading the 15th chapter of St. John for the scripture lesson followed by prayer by Rev. C. O. Johnson.

Miss Lemen gave the address of the afternoon and talked on Sunday School standards. Telling how difficult it was to do any definite work when each state as well as each denomination had a different standard and it was only when we came together on an International standard that anything could be accomplished. She hoped each school would adopt these standards and become a 100% school She also suggested that each school bring its standard chart to the next township convention and take the township standard to the county convention. She said the school who lived up to the International standard would be able do good work. Also we can do more and better work if we go about it in a business like way. The Sunday School is not only training the children to be christians but to do good work as well. She laid emphasis on starting the children right by giving them lessons suited to their age. She said the standard was to be used as a measuring rod. After Mr. Sturgis made a few remarks the departmental reports were given as follows: Cradle roll, Mrs. Lora Leighty, Sup't., reported all four schools with cradle rolls with enrollments as follows Christian 13, Lutheran 23, Concord M. P. 10, St. Joe M. P. 20, total 66 with an addition of 14 for the year, also this department measures up to the standard as follows: Concord M. P. 70%, Christian 75%, Lutheran 80%, St. Joe M. P. 80% Mrs. Bessie Tustison gave a fair report of the elementary division saying one school, the Christian, was using the graded system, the others the International lessons. Earl Wyatt reported the secondary division as doing fair work and being organized. J. R. Shilling made the following report for adult classes, Concord M. P. 3 classes with charters and 50 scholars enrolled, St. Joe M. P. 3 classes with charters and 50 scholars enrolled, Christian 3 classes with charters 40 scholars enrolled, Lutheran 4 classes with charters 40 scholars enrolled, total 13 classes with 187 scholars enrolled. Mrs. Eva Sheffer reported for the home department as follows: Concord M. P. 4, Christian 4, St. Joe M. P. 6, Lutheran 13, total 27 members with an offering of $4.45. Teacher training reported by Dr. Sheffer. There is no regular class altho one teacher was in a way doing teacher training work in having her scholars take turn about teaching. A community class has been recommended and he hoped soon to get it organized. M T. Bishop reported the temperance work, said only one school, the M. P., had reported to him. Mrs. Ella Patterson gave the missionary report that 3 schools had missionary instruction occassionally. One, Concord, did not have any instruction. This has been the first convention for a long time when every one of the department superintendents were present with reports. The report of the last meeting was read and the financial report given by the secretary-treasurer. This was followed by the report of the nominating committee, F. B. Leighty chairman, submitting the following names to be voted on, chairman, J. N. George; vice chairman, Ed Pflaummer; setretary-treasurer, Ada Bassett. Division superintendents, childrens division, Nellie Perry; this includes cradle roll, primary and intermediate classes. Young people's division, M. T. Bishop; adult, J. R. Shilling this includes the organized bible classes, home department and parents department; administrative division, F. B. Leighty, this includes the pastors, department superintendents, secretary-treasurer and publicity. Educational division, J. B. Haifley, this includes teacher training, missionary and temperance. A motion was made and seconded that the above officers be accepted. The committee on Resolutions reported with Earl Wyatt, chairman. The resolutions were read and adopted as follows:

Whereas this township is assembled in township Sunday School convention,

Resolved, that we recommend the use of the graded lessons in the childrens division of the township schools.

2nd., that as this requires teachers trained especially for their work, that we recommend and urge the adoption of the teachers training course.

3rd., As the good people of this country through a mistaken love for our Soldier boys fell to the wiles of the tobacco trust in that they were induced to send tobacco and cigarettes to our boys, Therefore that we in convention assembled, pledge our united and individual efforts to do all in our power to counteract the harmful effects of the habit.

4th. That we thank the managers of this convention for the efforts and energy they have displayed in providing this convention.

Com. { Earl Wyatt, B. S. Sheffer, J. P. Buckingham.

Announcements. Benediction by Rev. Mumma.

The evening session began with song service followed by another interesting address by Miss Lemen which was shortened because she must catch the evening train. She began by praising the convention, said it was the best township convention she had ever attended. That the superintendents gave such good reports. Her topic for the evening was "Extravagance." First in time wasted in beginning Sunday School, second, because the superintendent did not have a program outlined before coming on Sunday morning. She recommended that each superintendent get and read the book, "How to run a little Sunday School." He should also have an outline for the work for the quarter and make use of each Sunday in a definite way, also should outline work for the year. He should not assume the whole responsibility but have officers councils. Third the teachers time should not be wasted by interuptions. Her time can also be wasted by being late, not having lessons prepared and having a wrong lesson for the group of children which she teaches. She said most schools did not use business methods in their financial dealings also. Miss Lemen left immediately after the close of her talk and the rest of the evening was spent in having a violin solo by J. E. Sturgis, songs by the congregation, announcements, a duet by Bessie Tustison and Mr. Sturgis and benediction by Rev. Johnson. Mr. Sturgis had charge of the entire musical program and proved himself very efficient along this line. At the afternoon session his son Ralph assisted in the musical part. Taken altogether the convention did not experience one dull minute from start to finish and was one of the best ever held here.

The following report shows the amount of money on hand $19.75. Amount paid out $15 81 leaving a balance of $3.94 in treasury.

Ada Bassett, secretary-treasurer.

The Case of Hursh vs Hursh

Several cases have been filed in the Allen County and DeKalb County Circuit Courts in which the above parties were involved and we now attempt to give a brief setting of the cases.

Some ten or more years ago W. C. Hursh and Serdelia Hursh, his wife, conveyed a farm in Allen County to John C. Hursh by warranty deed, and for a valuable consideration. John C. Hursh then re-conveyed a life estate to W. C. Hursh and Serdelia Hursh in said farm. W. C. Hursh was the father of John C. Hursh, and Serdelia Hursh was a step-mother to John C. Hursh.

Some two years ago W. C. Hursh died. A short while after the death of the father and husband, Serdelia Hursh requested that her step-son take over the farm on the condition that he care for her during her natural lifetime, providing her with the ordinary comforts of life. Mr. J. E. Pomeroy was interviewed by the parties, and he witnessed the execution of a quick claim deed, made by Serdelia Hursh to John C. Hursh. It was expressly stipulated in that quick claim deed that John C. Hursh was to care for the step-mother during her lifetime Owing to the age of the step-mother the deed was not made a matter record in the Allen County Recorder's office.

Mr. Hursh then took his step-mother to his home in Auburn and there provided for her, in his comfortable home. Last fall she requested him to take her to visit some of her relatives, near and in Allen county. He did so. While she was in Allen County, Ezriah Hursh, it is said, took her to Fort Wayne and an application was made for the appointment of a guardian. Ezriah was so appointed and qualified.

Then the guardian, without any order from the Court whatsoever proceeded to take charge of Mr. John C. Hursh's farm, sell some of the personal property thereon and to appropriate some of it unto his own possession. This brought on litigation.

The guardian sold corn in the shock off of the farm to Lester Houk and Frank Pervines. Mr. Hursh employed attorney Life of Auburn to bring an action in Replevin. Houk and Pervines executed a bond. Later Serdelia Hursh, by her guardian, Ezriah, brought an action to set aside the conveyance made by her to John C. Hursh, and to quiet title. This action was brought in Allen Circuit Court. Messrs. Schlatter and Ryan represented the plaintiff in this action. Attorney Life of Auburn, and Leonard, Ross and Zollars represented Mr. John C. Hursh and they filed an answer in general denial and a cross-complaint to quiet title in the name of their client.

A week ago last Monday the court found for John C. Hursh on his cross-complaint and declared "that John C. Hursh is the owner in fee simple and in possession of the real estate in his cross-complaint and in the complaint herein described; that neither of the defendendant to said cross-complaint has any right, title or interest in or to said real estate or any part thereof." The Court further decreed that John C. Hursh should pay $20.00 per month for the support of his step-mother, in lieu of his keeping her himself. This arrangement was perfectly satisfactory to Mr. Hursh.

The replevin cases are yet to be tried out. And in those cases the only matter at issue will be the amount that the parties will have to pay for the corn. The Court's decision in Allen County fully decides the fact that the guardian had no right whatsoever to dispose of or take possession of any the property on the farm.

St. Joe Beats Hudson 33-20

The St. Joe high school basket ball team attended the district tournament at Kendallville last Friday and Saturday. St. Joe attracted the attention of the fans in the opening game with Hudson on Friday morning. With one regular player out of the Hudson line-up the first half ended a tie 14 to 14. But in the second half St. Joe defeated Hudson by a score of 33 to 20.

The second game in which the local team figured was played Friday evening when they clashed with Angola in the semi-finals. The score for the first half was 14 to 10 in St. Joe's favor. Angola was defeated in the final game Saturday evening by Kendallville with a score of 30 to 3. Kendallville will represent this district in the state tournament held at Lafayette Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

The St. Joe boys showed a spirit of sportsmanship thruout. While they were defeated by Angola by one point the Waterloo team, whose slogan thruout the season seems to have been "Win at any cost" were defeated by the same team with a score of 34 to 14. The members of the local team are to be complimented on their clean, consistent playing and manly conduct thruout their attendance at the tournament. They attracted the attention of the officials and fans in a creditable manner. Abbott and Binford were the referees, the former acting in both the St. Joe games.

Is Doing Business.

Monday was a bumper day for the Curie store, and yet nothing out of his ordinary volume of business. While there were not many in town yet the trade was exceptionally good. A Mr. Joe Miller, of east of Auburn, came to St. Joe and purchased three double disc roller, one for L. C. LaRue, John Brown and self. Mr Don Simons, of east of Spencerville, made the purchase of a new Turnbull wagon and Oliver Sulky plow. Curie is drawing trade from a distance because he has the goods and the prices are reasonable.

Who Benefits By High Prices?

You feel that retail meat prices are too high.

Your retailer says he has to pay higher prices to the packers.

Swift & Company prove that out of every dollar the retailer pays to the packers for meat, 2 cents is for packers' profit, 13 cents is for operating expenses, and 85 cents goes to the stock raiser; and that the prices of live stock and meat move up and down together.

The live-stock raiser points to rising costs of raising live stock.

Labor reminds us that higher wages must go hand in hand with the new cost of living.

No one, apparently, is responsible. No one, apparently, is benefited by higher prices and higher income.

We are all living on a high-priced scale. One trouble is, that the number of dollars has multiplied faster than the quantity of goods, so that each dollar buys less than formerly.

INDIANA STATE NEWS

Thornton.—A spotted Poland China boar sold for $1,275 at a sale here. Six sows were sold at an average of $254.50.

New Albany—Six deaths from influenza within four days, and five others ill of the malady, is the unusual record in the family of Lester Stiles at Cedar Farm, on the Ohio river, 18 miles below this city.

Decatur.—Adams county wheat was not damaged by the open winter, County Agricultural Agent J. R. Meeks says. The county acreage this year is 27,500 acres, which is a 36 per cent increase over that of last year.

Anderson. — Stockholders of the Union Traction company of Indiana, who met in annual meeting at the general office of the company in this city, heard a report on the income account for the year of 1918, which showed a deficit of $98,542.94.

Muncie.—Sugar camps are being opened in eastern Indiana. The maple sugar production this year will be larger than in many years. The sugar stringency last year is said to have been the means of stimulating the industry. Several farmers of Delaware county are also preparing to raise sugar beets.

Richmond.—Fire, which destroyed the men's hospital building at the Eastern Indiana Hospital for the Insane here, resulted in the burning to death of one patient, and a property loss of $25,000 or more. The man who lost his life was John H. Lehman, of Muncie, who was one of 22 inmates of the hospital ward. Titus Corah, another patient, was reported missing.

Noblesville.—A $7,000 issue of 4½ per cent gravel road bonds offered by County Treasurer Austin had no bidders. This is the first time that gravel road bonds have been offered in this county in a year. The commissioners have approved petitions for the improvement of 20 highways, but owing to a lack of demand for bonds it is not likely the improvements will be made.

Vincennes.—Hoyt D. Decker, one of the first 11 American soldiers taken prisoner by the Germans in the world war and one of the first Yankees in khaki to walk in the streets of Berlin, arrived at his home here from Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, O., where he obtained his final discharge. Private Decker lost an eye on the night of November 2, 1917, when the Germans conducted their first raid on an all-American trench.

Frankfort.—There is a big demand for apartment houses, modern dwellings and office buildings in the city of Frankfort, according to local real estate men. They say, however, that there is no relief from the situation for the present, as the high cost of materials will prevent what otherwise would have been a spring building boom. Factory owners and other employers of labor report that men coming to the city have been unable to find suitable homes.

Evansville.—Pastors and teachers of Lutheran churches and schools representing the congregations in fifteen or twenty counties in southwestern Indiana met here and pledged support for the $3,000,000 fund for superannuated ministers and teachers. The drive to raise the money will be held on Sunday, March 22. The churches in southwestern Indiana belong to the central district, embracing Ohio, Indiana and northern Kentucky. Its quota is $650,000.

Shelbyville. — Governor James P. Goodrich and Professor G. I. Christie, assistant secretary of the United States department of agriculture, will be here Saturday afternoon, March 22, to address the annual meeting of the Shelby County Better Farming association. Professor Christie will speak of the food conditions in Europe now and during the war. The governor is expected to touch on some of the laws enacted during the session of the legislature.

Sullivan.—Four large real estate deals, amounting to nearly $100,000, have been completed by which some of the best farm land in Sullivan county changed owners. John T. Hays sold his 320-acre farm in Gill township for $115 an acre, $36,200; M. F. Waters sold his 134-acre farm in Hamilton township for $20,000, or $150 an acre; Frank Starner sold his 120-acre farm in Gill township for $200 an acre, a total of $24,000; Ben Davis sold a farm of 100 acres in Fairbanks township for $125 an acre, or $12,500.

Huntington.—At a meeting of the executive committee of the County Dairy association, a Dairy Calf club, similar to the Shorthorn Calf club, was organized. Boys and girls not more than twenty years old may participate. They will buy pure-bred cattle calves, entering in a show at the end of two years, when all animals will be offered at auction sale. The owners will have the privilege of bidding. The calves are to be bred to pure-bred sires and the offspring is to belong to the owners.

Noblesville.—The foundry department of the Union Sanitary Manufacturing company in this city, which has been closed since last November, resumed operations. The entire plant will resume work within a short time, it is said, giving employment to approximately 200 men.

Sharpsville.—Liberty bonds valued at $10,000 were stolen from the Sharpsville bank by professional yeggmen, who used acetylene gas to burn into the private deposit boxes. The bank's patrons are the losers. Several thousand dollars' worth of War Savings stamps also were taken.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR MARCH 16

THE CITIES OF REFUGE.

LESSON TEXT—Joshua 20.

GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.—Matthew 5:7.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Numbers 35; Deuteronomy 19.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Protecting the unfortunate.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—Treatment of unintentional offenders.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—Our responsibility toward offenders.

I. The Need of the Cities of Refuge (20:1-3).

Justice everywhere cried "An eye for an eye," "A tooth for a tooth," "Blood for blood," and the avenger of blood was charged with the duty of satisfying this cry. While justice should not be allowed to miscarry it is most important that there be mercy shown. Sometimes just men forget to be merciful. In order that the innocent be protected and mercy shown to the unfortunate and yet justice be done the cities of refuge were authorized. It was not a scheme by which the criminal was screened from justice, but a provision whereby the innocent was protected.

II. Regulations Touching the Cities of Refuge (20:4-6).

1. The right of entrance not to be denied (v. 4). It was obligatory upon the rulers of the city to admit upon demand the one who fled hither, pending a trial which would disclose the fact as to whether the crime had been intentional or not.

2. The security of the one who entered the city (v. 5). The rulers of the city did not dare to deliver the man slayer to the avenger of blood for punishment until a fair trial had been given; neither could the avenger cross over the threshold of the city to touch a hair of the one who had taken refuge in it.

3. The right of fair trial (v. 6). This provision of mercy made it so that the refugee could be safe while careful investigation was made as to whether he had killed "unwittingly" or by wicked purpose. If it should be proved that the man was guilty of murder he was delivered over by the authorities to the avenger of blood that justice might be done.

4. The innocent slayer must remain in the city (v. 6). Even though the trial should exonerate him from intentional killing, yet he must remain in the city in order to be saved. So grave is the act of taking a human life that even the innocent man was obliged to be separated from his home and friends at least until the death of the high priest. This deprivation enforced the obligation to shield life.

III. The Appointment of the Cities of Refuge (20:7-9).

1. On the west side of Jordan (v. 7). (1) Kedesh in Naphtali on the north; (2) Shechem in Mt. Ephraim in the center; (3) Hebron in the south.

2. On the east side of Jordan (v. 8). (1) Golan in Bashan on the north; (2) Ramoth-Gilead in Gad in the center; (3) Bezer in Reuben in the south. In this distribution there was a place of safety accessible to all. These cities were not only in reach, but good roads, well marked, led to them so that the refugee might reach a place of safety before being overtaken (Deut. 19).

This beautifully illustrates the refuge which the sinner has in Christ: (1) It's necessity. Since by accident or wicked purpose men did kill, in order to be saved from the avenger these cities of necessity were appointed. All have sinned and are exposed to the wrath of God, therefore if any be saved a place of safety must be provided in Christ. (2) This provision was by divine appointment. "Of him are ye in Christ Jesus" (1 Cor. 1:30). (3) The cities were accessible to all. They were so distributed that wherever the unfortunate circumstance should occur the slayer could flee to the city before being overtaken. Christ is not far off. The Bible shows what great effort God makes to save men. (4) The one who fled to the city was secure. The avenger did not dare cross over the threshold of the city. Every one who is in Christ is secure. No one can lay anything to the charge of God's elect. (5) The individual must flee to the city. The manslayer would be exposed to danger if he remained at home or outside of the city. The sinner, if he would be saved, must come to Christ. There is no place of safety for those who remain away. The safety in Christ is even more vital than that in these cities. To him the guilty can flee with the assurance of safety.

The Only Riches.

The only riches one possesses is what one gives.—Martialis.

Obeying.

Is there any one great principle, any universal law, which reaches over the whole course of a man's life, which holds good alike in all its parts and under all conditions? Yes, indeed: "Not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me."—F. Paget.

Sweet Wine of Human Life.

Mirth is the sweet wine of human life. It should be offered sparkling with mental life unto God.—Henry [illegible].

A Natural Question.

"When I was a little lad," self-satisfiedly said the portly plute, "my good mother used often to say to me, 'Cyrus, be honest and save your money.'"

"Ah, yes!" returned old Festus Pester. "And which did you do?"—Kansas City Star.

A Meek and Lowly Follower.

Much to her chagrin, the lady speaker had inadvertently and continually used the expression "Do you follow me?" A meek little man in the front row added to her annoyance by signifying each time that he did.

The lady speaker was exceedingly annoyed — exceedingly. Finally she beckoned to the house policeman.

"Officer," she ordered, "I wish you would take this offensive male brute into custody. He has persisted in following me all evening."

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

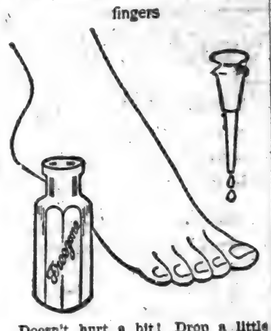
LIFT OFF CORNS!

Apply few drops then lift sore, touchy corns off with fingers



Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little Freezone on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then you lift it right out. Yes, magic!

A tiny bottle of Freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

Freezone is the sensational discovery of a Cincinnati genius. It is wonderful.

COUNT FIFTY! PAINS AND NEURALGIA GONE

Instant relief! Rub this nerve torture and misery right out with "St. Jacobs Liniment."

Rub this soothing, penetrating liniment right into the sore, inflamed nerves, and like magic—neuralgia disappears. "St. Jacobs Liniment" conquers pain. It is a harmless "neuralgia relief" which doesn't burn or discolor the skin.

Don't suffer! It's so needless. Get a small trial bottle from any drug store and gently rub the "aching nerves" and in just a moment you will be absolutely free from pain and suffering.

No difference whether your pain or neuralgia is in the face, head or any part of the body, you get instant relief with this old-time, honest pain destroyer—it can not injure.—Adv.

STATE ASSEMBLY COMES TO CLOSE

Seventy-First Session of Indiana Legislature Adjourns Monday Night.

DISCUSS AN EXTRA SESSION

Unfinished Matters Result in Talk of Bringing Legislators Together Later to Dispose of the Pending Bills.

Indianapolis.—Monday saw the close of the seventy-first session of the Indiana general assembly which has been in session the past several weeks. Final effort to enact into laws the remaining vastly important administration measures characterized the closing hours and some bills failed to gain attention.

Numerous vastly important bills occupied the attention of both houses Monday, committees were rushed as never before, and the Hoosier legislative machinery moved with the prediseness of a huge manufacturing plant under the direction of an efficiency engineer with his competent force of time-study men at their numerous respective posts.

That all of the business on hand could not be completed as was desired was plainly evident when the session opened. Adjourment on Monday made it evident that all of the measures that should have had attention could not be passed upon. This situation prodded the members of both branches of the legislature to do their utmost to complete their tasks as best they could under the great pressure.

The several unfinished and vital administration bills naturally demanded the attention of the lawmakers, necessitating delay on reaching some of the propositions that had been pending and upon which action had been expected by those directly interested.

The wind-up of the affairs of the general assembly, while not entirely satisfactory to all members, is said to equal the work of numerous previous legislative bodies, especially since the latter did not face such momentous questions as were before the Seventy-first assembly.

Extra session talk has been heard frequently on the argument that measures of great importance to the state generally failed to gain the attention they deserved. What action with reference to a special session that may be taken remains to be seen.

The majority of the members of both branches remained in the city over Sunday in order that they might give attention to more pressing business in hand.

The final stamp of condemnation in Indiana was placed on the red flag of anarchism when the house of representatives concurred in the senate amendment to the Deem bill. The Deem measure was linked with the anti-anarchism bill. It makes it unlawful to carry in a parade or otherwise display a red flag by persons known to oppose organized government, and defines the crime of anarchism, making it punishable by imprisonment.

Concurrence by the house on the senate amendment to state highway commission bill the latter part of last week sent the measure to the governor for his signature. It carried with it a provision that all automobile taxes should be turned into the state highway fund.

Governor Goodrich signed the bill creating a separate department of insurance and providing for the appointment of an insurance commissioner.

$574,000,000 for Roads.

If the states should co-operate fully with the federal government in road building in the next three years there will be available $574,000,000 for the work.

The post office appropriation bill, which has been signed by the president, makes an extra appropriation of $200,000,000 for road building. States must do their part in order to participate in this federal appropriation.

Indiana's allotment under the original federal aid act combined with the extra appropriation provided in the bill is $1,621,077.08 for the fiscal year, $2,564,846.86 for 1920 and $2,699,838.80 for 1921, making $6,885,762.74 for the three years.

To obtain this money the state must appropriate a like sum from its own treasury.

Judge Scholfield Is Dead.

Curtiss Scholfield, judge of the Jay county circuit court, died at his home at Brazil, following several days' illness. Death was caused by plural pneumonia and complications. Judge Scholfield, who was forty years old, was a graduate of the Indiana Law school.

Saylor Summoned to Washington.

Oliver Saylor of Huntington left for Washington, D. C., following receipt of a summons from the senate propaganda committee, to appear before the committee, which has continued its investigation since adjournment of the Sixty-fifth congress. Saylor went to Russia to do literary work, arriving there shortly before the second Russian revolution. He returned to the United States in July and since that time has been writing articles on the Russian situation. He testified before the senate committee Friday.

Lets Contract for Courthouse.

Spencer county commissioners let the contract for the new $175,000 courthouse, Rockport. Work on the courthouse, which will be a memorial to Abraham Lincoln, who lived in Spencer county when a boy, will start at once.

Dry Forces to Celebrate.

The funeral services of John Barleycorn of Indiana will be celebrated at the Masonic temple, April 2, under the auspices of the Indiana Dry federation, the prohibition state committee and the state W. C. T. U. Prohibition workers from all parts of the state will attend the afternoon and night sessions. The afternoon sessions will be devoted largely to the W. C. T. U. of Indiana.

Kill Drainage Fund Bill.

House bill 465, introduced by Representative Barker of Boone county, providing for the transfer of emergency drainage repair funds to the general township fund, was killed in the house, the enacting clause being stricken out. The author explained that the purpose of the bill was simply to get rid of some bookkeeping and to place numerous small sums where they could be used. It was the general belief of the members of the house that the money should go back to the land owners.

Vermilion Bill Signed.

Governor Goodrich signed house bill 200 which opens the way for the moving under certain conditions, of the Vermilion county seat from Newport to Clinton. The fight to move the county seat away from Newport has been a long and hard-fought one, figuring in elections and politics in many ways. The law provides that on petition the county commissioners shall hold a special election to determine whether the removal actually shall take place.

Seventh District Federal Revenue.

Federal revenue in the Seventh Indiana district for 1918 will amount to about $22,000,000, according to an estimate fixed by George W. Spencer, chief deputy collector. The reports for 1917 amounted to $18,000,000. Mr. Spencer says there were 25,000 industrial income tax returns for 1917, but there will be 50,000 for 1918. This means the Terre Haute office, which includes Evansville and Terre Haute, will handle 75,000 different reports, as there will be about 25,000 other returns of different kinds.

Rush Calumet Dredge Plan.

The navigation committee of the Calumet Manufacturers' association is pushing the twenty-year-old project of dredging and straightening the Calumet river channel from Hammond to South Chicago, and is securing deeds for a project to make a navigable belt which makes a complete circuit via the river and have outlets at Indiana Harbor and South Chicago. The association also is working for a road to North Harvey, linking Hammond with Hegewisch, Riverdale, Dalton and Blue Island. Over 400 industries on the Indiana and Illinois sides of the state line will be affected by the straightening of the river, if it is done.

Pass Compensation Bill.

With the salary of members of the industrial board advanced to $4,000 a year, the amount they receive at present, the bill amending the workmen's compensation act was passed by the senate under the suspension of the rules. The vote was 42 to 1.

Senator Kolsem of Terre Haute, a coal operator, succeeded in having an amendment adopted postponing application of the law to the coal miners of the state until April 1, 1920, but on motion of Senator Negley, majority leader, this amendment was reconsidered and voted down. The amendatory bill in its present form compels all coal operators to adopt the state compensation system.

Bonanza Days for Tobacco Growers.

These truly are bonanza days in the white burley tobacco growing region of southern Indiana, southern Ohio and northern Kentucky.

Prosperity is apparent on every hand. The tobacco grower literally has money to burn. He is burning it in gasoline in newly purchased automobiles. Many farmers have not only one but two machines—one for general use and another for family purposes. He is burning his money in modern furnaces, which heat the entire house instead of depending upon the old-style heaters and fireplaces. On the lines of the interurbans and near the towns having electric plants he is burning electricity in recently installed lighting systems in his home and barns.

The excitement of speculation is comparable only with the bonanza days in Western mining camps when new finds of ore thrilled the prospectors. The war that made the wrist watch and cigarette respectable has made the tobacco grower rich.

Divorce Bill Defeated.

Representative Gordon's bill to amend the divorce law of the state was referred to as a measure that would lead to much fraud and bring disgrace on the state of Indiana during debate in the house. The purpose of the bill was to make incurable chronic mania existing for ten years or more a cause for divorce. Several speakers called attention to the fact that unavoidable misfortune coming to a wife or husband could never in justice be made cause for divorce. The enacting clause was stricken out.

FREE INFORMATION FOR HOMESEEKERS.

The U. S. Railroad Administration has assembled information regarding farm opportunities in the several states, and will furnish it to homeseekers free on request. The work will be done through the newly established homeseekers' bureau, headquarters in Washington.

"We are receiving about 1,000 letters a week from persons who wish to engage in farming," said J. L. Edwards, manager of the Agricultural Section of the U. S Railroad Administration. "The inquiries come from every state, asking about agricultural advantages in undeveloped territory. We furnish dependable data, and through our service many investors have been able to find just what they were looking for.

"Our information is put out in form of illustrated booklets, by states, sent to those sufficiently interested to write and tell us what kind of a farm project they have in mind, and naming the state the opportunities in which they desire to investigate. Homeseekers can find in the United States productive land at reasonable prices and on liberal terms, first-class markets, excellent transportation facilities, a satisfactory climate, and ideal living conditions. Now that the war is over, I look for a revival of farm development beyond that of any pre-war period." Correspondence from homeseekers is solicited. Address, Room 2000, Homeseekers' Bureau, U. S. Railroad Administration, Washington, D. C.—Adv.

SAGE TEA BEAUTIFIES AND DARKENS HAIR

Don't Stay Gray! It Darkens So Naturally that Nobody can Tell.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.—Adv.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. Many cases of Deafness are caused by Catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the Mucous Surfaces.

WEAK KIDNEYS MEAN A WEAK BODY

When you're fifty, your body begins to creak a little at the hinges. Motion is more slow and deliberate. "Not so young as I used to be" is a frequent and unwelcome thought. Certain bodily functions upon which good health and good spirits so much depend, are impaired. The weak spot is generally the bladder. Unpleasant symptoms show themselves. Painful and annoying complications in other organs arise. This is particularly true with elderly people. If you only know how, this trouble can be obviated.

For over 200 years GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil has been relieving the inconvenience and pain due to advancing years. It is a standard, old-time home remedy, and needs no introduction. It is now put up in odorless, tasteless capsules. These are easier and more pleasant to take than the oil in bottles.

Each capsule contains about one dose of five drops. Take them just like you would any pill, with a small swallow of water. They soak into the system and throw off the poisons which are making you old before your time. They will quickly relieve those stiffened joints, that backache, rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, gall stones, gravel, "brick dust," etc. They are an effective remedy for all diseases of the bladder, kidney, liver, stomach and allied organs.

GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules cleanse the kidneys and purify the blood. They frequently ward off attacks of the dangerous and fatal diseases of the kidneys. They have a beneficial effect, and often completely cure the diseases of the bodily organs, allied with the bladder and kidneys.

If you are troubled with soreness across the loins or with "simple" aches and pains in the back take warning, it may be the preliminary indications of some dreadful malady which can be warded off or cured if taken in time.

Go to your druggist today and get a box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. Money refunded if they do not help you. Three sizes. GOLD MEDAL are the pure, original imported Haarlem Oil Capsules. Accept No Substitutes.—Adv.

Proof that Some Women do Avoid Operations

Mrs. Etta Dorion, of Ogdensburg, Wis., says:

"I suffered from female troubles which caused piercing pains like a knife through my back and side. I finally lost all my strength so I had to go to bed. Harry Friend Writes News

Langres, France
Medical Dept. U. S. Army
Feb. 14, 1919

Mr. Fred Leighty,
Editor ST. JOE NEWS.
Dear Friend:

Will write you a few lines this fine winter evening to tell you I am well and feeling fine. Have never felt better in my life. Wish you and your family the best of health.

I suppose the people in the states are wondering when the boys will get home. Well Fred, I am doing the same thing. Since the war has closed I have been very anxious to get home, but I guess we will have to wait until our turn comes to sail.

How is the winter weather in St. Joe? We are having fine weather. Just a little snow on the ground.

Well Fred, I will give you a brief description of my trip from the time we left the states.

We went on board the ship July 13, 1918 and sailed the next morning, it being Sunday morning and an ideal day. We arrived in Halifax, Canada, July 16, and anchored in the harbor for two days leaving on the 18th., and arriving in Liverpool, England the last day of July. It was a fine trip and I sure enjoyed it, although we were glad to see land and to get on it once more. Many of the boys were sick but it did not affect me at all. We spent a few days in different "rest camps" (as they called them) in England and went by rail to South Hampton and across the English Channel to Cherbourg, France and then by rail through France to Langres, where we are now located. We have been very busy since our arrival in camp taking care of the boys brought back from the battle fields of France. I have not been at the front, but Fred I sure have seen some of the horrors of war. I have met Forrest Kain over here Foss Blaker from Butler and Paul Maxwell, who was in the hospital from gas burns.

I would be very glad to hear from you and receive some news from in and around St. Joe. So good-bye, I remain your friend,

Pvt. Harry Friend,
Base Hospital 53,

War Expo. Is Great

Detroit, Mich.
March 3, 1919.

Dear Folks:

I got your letter today. I do not expect to get back before the first of April unless I have unusual good luck. You see it is all according to what I know, and while I'm as good as the average at my studies I could do a whole lot better. I will be kind of glad to get back to St Joe at that.

Say folks, you sure missed the time of your life yesterday. I wish you could have been here. I was to the War Exposition in the morning and sure some fine sights, indeed. There was one big gun that was taken off of the Commerce Raider "Emden" its barrell was about fifteen feet long. There was also a camouflaged whippet tank. There were German helmets by the dozen, including a big shiny brass affair with an eagle, or some kind of a bird on top, taken from one of the Kaiser's body guard, and a black helmet with skull and cross bones on, taken from the "Crown Prince's" regiment. There were a lot of native Indian rifles taken at Subhandk war, Mohammed Border, from the Turks by the 13th. British Lancers on April 9, 1915. There was also the wreckage, (part of it) of a German Zeppelin that was downed in a raid over London. The Englishman dived head first into it with his plane. There was a German Fokker aeroplane, a Candron aeroplane, two French photographic areoplanes, a French spad, (another aeroplane) a German Albatross plane and a wrecked German sea plane, a Peugnot areo motor and a Benz (German) 250 H. P. 6 cylinder motor also several "Rotary's" (I'd call them) with nine cylinders in a cast circle and all on one crank shaft. The whippet tank was used in the battle of Chateau-Thierry. There was a Nieupart Bi-plane taken from the Verdun Front after making 20 trips over the German lines. All of these planes were so bullet punctured that they looked like a sieve. There was also a "Big Bertha" there too, also some 16 inch shell two or three feet long, machine guns and small cannons by the dozen. If you get a chance to see only a part of this at Fort Wayne why don't you miss it or you will regret it the rest of your life. Well so long,

Your son,
Carl Bassett

TEMPERATURE OF THE WATER

At Depth of 40 to 60 Feet It Is About 50 Degrees—Uniform Throughout the Year.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The temperature of ground water varies with latitude, season, depth and geological conditions. Ordinarily at a depth of forty to sixty feet it is about 50 degrees, and is nearly uniform throughout the year. At lesser depth seasonal and atmospheric changes are likely to affect it. Hence if there is much fluctuation in the temperature, or if the water is made turbid by rains, a supply of shallow origin is indicated. Deep ground waters are generally progressively warmer the deeper obtained, the increase running about one degree for each fifty to sixty feet increase in depth.

WOOD ASHES AS FERTILIZER

Expert Figures That Ton Is Worth $54—Crops Need Every Pound of Potash Obtainable.

Save the wood ashes. At present prices of potash an expert figures that the potash in 100 pounds of hardwood ashes is worth $2.50, and in addition there are in the same ashes 20 cents' worth of phosphoric acid. This would make a ton of dry, hardwood ashes worth $54. At the same rate pine ashes are worth $30 a ton, and should be carefully saved. Give the ashes that come from the stoves and furnaces the same protection and use them on the land just as intelligently as would be given the high-priced commercial fertilizer. The crops will need every pound of potash that can be obtained from ashes and every other available source before the European mines are again operated for export.

SOY BEANS QUITE VALUABLE

May Be Combined Advantageously in Many Systems of Crop Rotations —Seed Is Valuable.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The soy bean may be combined advantageously in many systems of crop rotations. It is especially adapted to short rotations, taking either an entire season or a part of a season following some grain crop. The cash value of the seed is sufficient to encourage growing the beans as one of the main crops. When the whole season is thus devoted to soy beans, they may take any place in a rotation system where corn can be used. In the southern states the crop is adapted to practically the same place in rotations as cowpeas.

The small grains may follow soy beans, and the soil requires but little preparation after a crop of soy beans. In North Carolina and Tennessee a soy bean crop is often grown between two wheat crops or between two oat crops. A rotation of corn, soy beans, wheat, and clover is practiced quite generally in many sections north of the Ohio river. In some sections the soy bean is substituted for oats in such four-year rotations as corn, oats, wheat, and clover or potatoes, oats, wheat, and clover. The soy bean can also be used as a catch crop where new seedlings or grass and clover have failed and on wheat or oat stubble fields where clover or grass has not been sown or has not succeeded. As a crop after early potatoes or cannery peas and as an orchard cover crop, the soy bean is highly recommended, as it will produce a large quantity of fall pasturage or material for plowing under on soils in need of organic matter.

FACTORS OF SOIL FERTILITY

Plant Feeding Is Not Simple Problem of Supplying Manure and Commercial Fertilizers.

The expression, "soil fertility" is used to include the factors which make a soil productive. Plant feeding is not a simple problem of supplying manure and commercial fertilizers. An abundance of available plantfood is an essential factor of soil fertility, but there are other important factors.

FARMERS AND BUSINESS MEN

Young Man of Present Day Learns by Study and Practice of Modern Business Methods.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Farming is being adapted more and more to a business basis, and farmers are being recognized by the business men of the cities as having real business standing. The expression, "Farmers and business men," has become "Farmers and other business men." Once the young man learned the farming trade by working mostly with his father and brothers; now he learns farming in that way and also in school and college, and by the study and practice of modern business methods, so that he becomes a different type of farmer from the countryman of one or two generations ago.

The demand of the present farmer has brought about a new method of dealing with him and supplying him with any available information he may desire. It is recognized that it is not good practice to load farmers with advice—to tell them what to do and when to do it—and this changed attitude brings more satisfactory relations to all concerned. It has resulted in freer consultation and the arrival at safer conclusions and more correct practices than could possibly come from working separately.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Paulding, Paulding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indigestion of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

The Best Incubator Is-- ALWAYS the CHEAPEST

Suppose you bought a flimsy, "cold cornered" incubator this year! And five eggs in each corner—twenty eggs out of every 100 failed to hatch!

Or the chicks die in the shell! Or the deadly 10-day mortality period snuffed out their frail lives. Would an incubator like this cost you less? No! It would be most expensive—would be the costliest incubator you could buy!

The Simplicity—the wonderful no-cold-corner incubator—will save your high-priced hatching eggs—save your chicks!

On the above basis of loss, last year, $185,000,000.00 worth of marketable poultry was lost by American poultry raisers. Besides this think of the loss of eggs, time, fuel, etc.

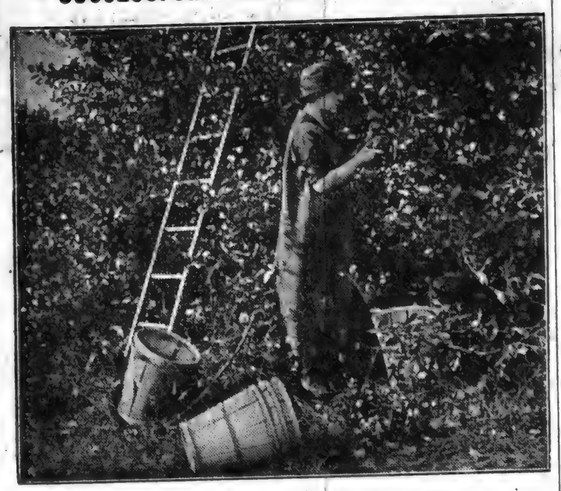
MANY VARIETIES OF FRUIT MAY BE GROWN SUCCESSFULLY IN MOST PARTS OF COUNTRY



Gathering a Product Worth More Than It Cost.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A more general culture of fruits in gardens and in home orchards will contribute substantially to the health and pleasure of the family besides furnishing a supply of valuable food products at a relatively small outlay of money, pomologists of the United States department of agriculture say. In many localities it is difficult to purchase suitable fruit, and this is an added reason for its home production wherever possible.

The ideal fruit or home orchard should contain several varieties of different kinds of fruit, each kind represented in many cases by a considerable number of varieties ripening one after another over a long period. Large yields, good shipping quality and attractive appearance all may be made secondary to high dessert quality or special excellence for cooking purposes.

Throughout much of the country the same garden may grow apples, pears, peaches, plums, cherries, quinces, strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, dewberries, currants, gooseberries and grapes. In the colder northern sections the winters are too severe for peaches, while in the warmer parts apples, currants, gooseberries and certain varieties of several of the other fruits fail because they are not adapted to the long, hot summers and mild winters.

Economizing Space.

It is possible to plant between apple trees, when set 32 feet apart, smaller growing trees, such as the peach or plum, placing one between each two trees in a row, as well as planting a row between rows of apple trees. This is a temporary arrangement, however, since the apple trees eventually will need all the space, and before crowding begins the interplanted trees should be removed.

Currants and gooseberries commonly do better, especially in the southern limits of their range, if grown where there is partial shade. This sometimes can be provided by planting them between fruit trees. Raspberries and blackberries are sometimes planted between trees, but the practice is not advisable unless the soil is naturally moist and fertile. Vegetables, as well as strawberries, also may be grown between the rows if the trees are small and do not shade the ground very much.

Locating the Orchard.

The land on which the fruits are planted, other things being equal, should be convenient to the house. It should be well drained, since fruit trees will not thrive on poorly drained soil. The air drainage also must be good, and for this reason low levels where cold air settles should be avoided. Most fruits can be grown on a great variety of soils, but where possible it is better to avoid light, sandy soils and heavy clays.

Good nursery stock of suitable kinds and varieties is fundamental to success in fruit growing. A good root system is essential. A tree or bush, as a rule, should have several main roots and many smaller ones when received from the nursery. A medium-sized tree or plant for the variety is usually preferable to a very large or under-sized one. Apples, pears, quinces, plums and cherries are best suited for home orchard planting after they have grown in the nursery for two seasons. Peach trees should always be planted after growing in the nursery one season.

In the North fruits are usually planted in spring as early as the soil can be put in suitable condition. In middle latitudes and in the South autumn planting is widely practiced, while in some parts of the extreme South planting may be done at almost any time during the winter.

LOSS FROM EROSION IN UNITED STATES

Trouble Occurs in Every State in the Union.

Terracing Is the Most Effective Method of Stopping Washing Away of Soil—Other Means That May Be Employed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Soil erosion, or the washing away of earth by water, costs the farmers of the United States $1,000,000 every year. Soil losses from this cause occur in every state of the Union and in almost every county of every state. Nine years ago the National Conservation congress reported that 4,000,000 acres of farm land had been practically ruined by soil erosion.

Terracing is the most effective method of stopping erosion. Other means that should be employed in connection with terracing are deep plowing, growing cover crops, plowing under organic matter, contour plowing, and underdraining.

Since erosion is due largely to the rapid movement of the rain water over the surface of the ground, methods of preventing erosion must cause the water either to sink into the soil or drainage channel. If the rain water were absorbed by the soil as fast as it falls, there would be very little erosion.

In order to drink up surface water rapidly a soil must be very permeable, which means that it must contain fairly large open spaces through which the rain water can pass easily, or where it can be stored temporarily. Some soils are naturally very permeable. A number of ways of increasing the permeability of a soil are deep plowing, plowing under organic matter such as manure, stubble, stalks and cover crops; the practice of tile drainage and, in certain soils, the use of explosives.

Vegetation covering the surface of the ground protects the soil from the direct action of the rain and checks the flow of the water over the surface, giving the soil a better opportunity to absorb the water. It is therefore important that some kind of cover crop, such as vetch, clover, oats, wheat or rye, be grown on the land during the winter or at any time that the land is not used for other crops.

READING CIRCLES TO ASSIST THE FARMER

Prejudice Against "Book Farming" Fast Losing Ground.

West Virginia Clubs Devote the Winter Months to Definite Study of Some of More Difficult Farm Problems.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Recent reports from the West Virginia extension service indicate that any prejudice against "book farming" which exists is fast losing ground in that state where last year 80 farmers' clubs with a membership of more than 1,000 farmers devoted the winter months to a definite study of some of their more difficult farm problems at reading circles held regularly throughout the season. These winter reading circles are becoming more popular in the state and fully 100 clubs with a membership of at least 2,500 farmers are pursuing some one of the several reading courses offered by the state extension department this year. The county agents are very active in this work, organizing farm bureaus and local community clubs and stimulating greater interest in the reading circles in their localities. Subjects such as soil fertility, farm crops, animal husbandry, horticulture, and farm management are being studied.

THE DAIRY

PLAN FOR BETTER DAIRYING

Joint Ownership of Purebred Sires Enables Herd Improvement at Minimum Expense.

Dairymen who would like to use purebred bulls to improve their herds but who cannot afford to purchase such animals should investigate the advantages of a co-operative bull association. These organizations are formed by farmers for the joint ownership, use and exchange of purebred bulls. The purchase price and cost of maintenance are distributed according to the number of cows owned by each member, thereby giving the dairyman an opportunity to build up his herd at a minimum expense. The organization also helps its members to market dairy stock and dairy products, to fight contagious diseases of cattle intelligently, and in other ways to assist in improving the dairy industry.

The typical co-operative bull association is composed of from fifteen to thirty farmers, who jointly own five bulls. The territory in which these farmers live is divided into five "breeding blocks," one bull being assigned to each block. As many as fifty or sixty cows may belong to the farmers in each block, and the bull in the block should be kept on a conveniently located farm. To prevent inbreeding each bull is moved to the next block every two years. If all the bulls live, and if all are kept until each has made one complete circuit, no new bulls need to be purchased for ten years. In this way each member of the association has the use of good purebred bulls for many years, at a cost of only a small part of the purchase price of one good bull—usually less than is invested in a more inferior bill owned by individual dairymen.

In a survey conducted by the United States department of agriculture on 1,219 farms in eight districts in Iowa, Minnesota and Massachusetts in which there were no associations, it was found that there were 817 bulls, having an average value of $76. Had the owners of these cheap bulls been properly organized the same investment would have purchased the necessary bulls of an average value of $283. In one association having more than 100 members the original cost of good purebred bulls to each member was only $23. When questioned regarding the value of co-operative bull associations, 150 farmers in Maryland, Michigan and Minnesota estimated that the use of bulls belonging to the organization increased the value of the offspring in the first generation from 30 to 80 per cent, with an average of 65 per cent.

The selection of the bulls for an association is one of the most important considerations. A good purebred bull will make rapid and marked improvement in the herds, and the association interest increase in proportion to the improvement obtained. If a poor dairy bull is used the milk production of the members' herds is sometimes reduced, the interest is lessened, and these conditions may lead to the breaking up of the association. Success in the operation of an association depends a great deal on the care that is used in its organization. Dairymen contemplating forming an association should consult the local county agent, write to the state agricultural college or to the dairy division of the United States department of agriculture at Washington for advice and assistance. The farmers' bulletin previously mentioned will be found of great value along this line, particularly the suggestions which are given in connection with the constitution and by-laws.

ATTRACTIVE CONTAINERS

The use of neat and attractive containers for butter, standardized to a uniform size and style, is highly desirable both for local and foreign markets. Carelessly packed butter has not only a poor appearance but also usually brings a lower price.

AGITATION OF COLD CREAM

Sometimes It Will Whip and Expand Until Churn Is Full and Butter Will Not Form.

Sometimes when cold cream is agitated in the churn it will whip and expand until the churn is nearly full. In this condition butter will not form because the cream cannot be sufficiently agitated. When a low temperature of the cream is the cause of difficult churning the trouble may be easily corrected by raising the temperature.

HEALTHY HENS PRODUCED BY RIGHT FEED AND SHELTER AT UNIFORM TEMPERATURE

A Successful Flock Depends on Early Care of Chicks.

Did you ever watch Mrs. Cock Robin care for her young? She builds for them a downy, comfortable nest; she rustles plenty of choice worms to satisfy their hunger; in her every action she shows care and solicitude for the welfare of her brood. Similarly, the management and brooding of young chicks necessitate the maximum of conscientious attention in order that every possible comfort and facility be provided for the rapid and economical development of the baby flock. On many poultry farms the brooding of chickens is one of the most critical operations, especially for the beginner.

Rearing Chickens With Hen.

Sitting hens should be confined to slightly darkened nests at hatching time and not disturbed unless they step on or pick their chickens when hatching, in which case the chickens should be removed as soon as dry to a basket lined with flannel or some other warm material, and keep near a fire until all the eggs are hatched; or the eggs may be removed and placed under a quieter hen whose eggs are hatching at the same time. An incubator may also be used to keep the earliest hatched chickens warm, in case they are removed from the nest. If the eggs hatch unevenly, those which are slow in hatching may be placed under other hens, as hens often get restless after a part of the chickens are out, allowing the remaining eggs to become cooled at the very time when steady heat is necessary. Remove the egg shells and any eggs which have not hatched as soon as the hatching is over. Hens should be fed as soon as possible after the eggs are hatched, as feeding tends to keep them quiet; otherwise many hens will leave the nest. In most cases it is best that the hen remain on the nest and brood the chickens for at least 24 hours after the hatching is over.

Dusting the Hen.

The hen should be powdered with a good insect powder before moving her and the chickens to the brood coop. She should be dusted every two weeks, or as often as necessary until the chickens are weaned. If lice become thick on the chickens, or if they are troubled with head lice, a very little grease, such as lard or vaseline, may be applied with the fingers on the head, neck, under the wings, and around the vent. Great care should be taken, however, not to get too much grease on the chickens, as it will stop their growth and in some cases may prove fatal.

The hen should be confined in the coop until the chicks are weaned, while the chickens are allowed free range after they are a few days old. Where hens are allowed free range and have to forage for feed for themselves and the chicks, they often take them through wet grass, where the chicks may become chilled and die. Most of the feed the chicks secure in this manner goes to keep up the heat of the body, whereas feed eaten by those that are with a hen that is confined produces more rapid growth, as the chicks do not have too much exercise. Then, too, in most broods there are one or two chicks that are weaker than the others, and if the hen is allowed free range the weaker ones often get behind and out of the hearing of the mother's cluck and call. In most cases this results in the loss and death of these chicks.

Milk Mashes Good for Chicks.

The young chicks may be fed any time after they are 36 to 48 hours old, whether they are with a hen or in a brooder. The first feed may contain either hard-boiled eggs, johnnycake, stale bread, pinhead oatmeal, or rolled oats, which feeds or combinations may be used with good results. Mashes mixed with milk are of considerable value in giving the chickens a good start in life, but the mixture should be fed in a crumbly mass and not in a sloppy condition. After the chickens are two months old they may be fed four times daily, and after three months old three times daily, with good results. Johnnycake composed of the following ingredients in the proportions named is a very good feed for young chicks: One dozen infertile eggs or one pound of sifted beef scrap to ten pounds of cornmeal; add enough milk to make a pasty mash, one tablespoonful of baking soda, and bake until done. Dry bread crumbs may be mixed with hard-boiled eggs, making about one-fourth of the mixture eggs, or rolled oats may be used in place of the bread crumbs. Feed the bread crumbs, rolled oats, or johnnycake mixtures five times daily for the first week, then gradually substitute for one or two feeds of the mixture finely cracked grains of equal parts by weight of cracked wheat, finely cracked corn, and pinhead oatmeal or hulled oats, to which about 5 per cent of cracked peas or broken rice and 2 per cent of charcoal, millet or rape seed may be added. A commercial chick feed may be substituted if desired. The above ration can be fed until the chicks are two weeks old, when they should be placed on grain and a dry or wet mash mixture

COLD WEATHER FEED FOR CHICKEN FLOCK

Give Grain In Deep Litter to Make Hens Exercise.

To Obtain Best Results It Is Necessary to Give Fowls Plenty to Eat—Beef Scrap Is Essential for Egg Supply.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Feed grain in a deep litter on the floor and make the hens exercise for it. The mash may be fed either wet or dry, and should be so regulated that the fowls will get about equal parts of mash and of the scratch grains. It is necessary to give the fowls plenty to eat to get good results, but the birds should always be eager for each feed. In cold weather feed about one-third of the scratch grains in the morning and two-thirds at night. In this way the hens are forced to exercise more than if they receive all the grain they desire at the morning feed. A good scratch mixture may be made of equal parts, by weight, of cracked corn, wheat and oats; and a mash may be made of two parts cornmeal and one part each of wheat bran, wheat middlings and beef scrap. Green feed, such as cabbages, mangel wurzel beets, cut alfalfa, or sprouted oats, should be supplied to replace the green feed which the fowls have been securing in the fields; and beef or fish scrap, skim milk, cut green bone, or some similar feed is needed to replace the bugs which the fowls have been getting on the range. Beef scrap or feed of this nature is very essential in securing a good supply of eggs during the winter months.

FEED CHICKS OFTEN

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Feed young chickens three to five times daily, according to your experience in poultrying. Do not overfeed. Furnish small quantities of food, barely enough to satisfy the appetites of the young fowls, and keep them exercising during the daytime. But at the evening meal allow the chicks to eat all they want. Greater care must be exercised not to overfeed young chicks that are confined than those that have free range, as leg weakness is apt to result among those confined.

A Single Remedy Often Cures Many Diseases

BY VALENTINE MOTT, M. D.

It is almost impossible to give a list of the endless diseases that follow indigestion Perhaps a whole column in this newspaper would be required to print them all. You eat to keep alive—to supply blood and flesh and bone and muscle and brain. It is easy to see that if your food is not digested and taken up by the delicate organs and distributed where it is needed, a disease of some sort is sure to come. Dyspepsia is a common symptom, and so are liver complaint, loss of flesh, nervousness, bad memory, dizziness, sleeplessness, no appetite. Many times, when neglected, indigestion results in coughs, throat diseases, catarrh, bronchitis and even more dangerous things. And all these disorders arise because the food is not properly digested in the stomach. It is plain even to a child that relief and cure are to be had only by setting up a healthy condition in the stomach. Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., many years ago combined a number of vegetable growths into a temperance remedy for indigestion, and called it Golden Medical Discovery. It is probably the most efficacious discovery ever made in medicine, for the list of people all over the world who have had their countless ills overcome by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes an amazing total of thousands.

I know of no advice better than this: Begin a home treatment today with this good vegetable medicine. It will show you better than I can tell you what it will do. When taking Golden Medical Discovery, you can rest assured of one very important thing—it contains neither alcohol nor opiates. There is nothing in it but standard roots and herbs that possess curative properties of a high order. A safe medicine is the only kind you can afford to take.

FRANTIC WITH PAIN

Long Suffering From Kidney Trouble More Than Words Can Describe. Doan's Brought Health and Happiness.

Mrs. Anna Thorson, 290 South St., Stamford, Conn., says: "I hadn't any more strength than a child, and after sweeping my back hurt me more and more. My headaches were so bad it seemed as though my skull were being torn into shreds and I would finally lose track of everything and lie in a stupor for hours. I felt I had to keep going or lose my mind and I kept up often when I trembled all over with weakness. My feet were swollen and every bone in my body seemed to ache. My fingers got almost as rigid as pieces of wood and the knuckles swelled. The kidney secretions were dark colored, scanty and terribly burning. I suffered more than words can describe. I finally began using Doan's Kidney Pills and I believe with all my heart that they kept me out of the grave. I am well and happy after going through enough pain to drive me frantic. Doan's saved my life."

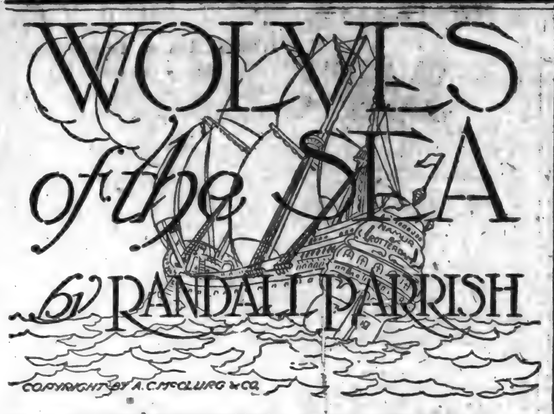
WOLVES of the SEA

By RANDALL PARRISH



COPYRIGHT BY A. C. McCLURG & CO.

Geoffry Finds a Friend—and an Enemy.

Synopsis — Geoffry Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for participation in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanchez, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London.

"Why especially with me?"

"Rather a hard question to answer at the very beginning," I smiled back at her. "Yet not so difficult as the one I shall ask you. I am only one of fifty prisoners, scarcely cleaner or more reputable looking than any of my mates. Yet surely you have not sought speech with these others? Then why especially with me?"

Even in the growing dusk I could mark a red flush mount into the clear cheeks at this insistent question, and for an instant her eyes wavered. But she possessed the courage of pride, and her hesitancy was short.

"You imagine I cannot answer. Oh, but I can; I know who you are; my uncle pointed you out to me. I am traveling home with him to Maryland. I am Dorothy Fairfax. He was present at your trial before Lord Jeffries. You are Geoffry Carlyle, in command of the ship that brought Monmouth to England. I heard it all."

"All? What else, pray?"

Her eyes opened widely in sudden surprise and she clasped and unclasped her hands nervously.

"Do you really not know? Have you never been told what happened?"

"Only that I was roughly forbidden to speak, called every foul name the learned judge could think of, and then sentenced to twenty years penal servitude beyond seas," I answered soberly. "Following that I was dragged from the dock, and flung into a cell. Was there anything else?"

"Why you should have known, Lord Jeffries sentenced you to death; the decree was signed, to be executed immediately. Then influence was brought to bear—some nobleman in Northumberland made direct appeal to the king. That was what angered Jeffries so."

"An appeal! For me? Good God! not Bucclough—was it he, the duke?"

"Yes; it was whispered about that the king was in his debt—some word of honor, and dare not refuse. The word of mercy came just in time, ordering Jeffries to commute your sentence. At first he swore he'd hang you, king or no king, but his nerve failed. My uncle said he roared like a bull. This Bucclough; is he not your friend?"

I hesitated for an instant of indecision, looking into her face, but the truth would not be denied.

"Scarcely that," I said soberly. "Nor can I solve entirely his purpose. He is my brother, and I am the next in line. We are not even on speaking terms; yet he is childless, and may feel some measure of dislike to have the family end in a hangman's knot. I can think of no other reason for his interference. I knew nothing of his action."

"I am glad it became my privilege to tell you. Besides, Captain Carlyle," simply, "it may also help you to understand my interest. If you are of the Carlyles of Bucclough, how happened it that you went to sea?"

"Largely necessity, and to some extent no doubt sheer love of adventure. I was a younger son, with very little income. There were then two lives between me and the estate, and the old duke, my father, treated me like a servant. I always loved the sea, and at fourteen—to get out of his sight, I think largely—was apprenticed to the navy, but lost my grade in the service by a mere boyish prank. His influence then would have saved me, but he refused to even read my letter of explanation. I dared not return home in such disgrace, and consequently drifted into the merchant service. It is a story quickly told."

"Yet not so quickly lived."

"No, it meant many hard years, on all the oceans of the world. This is the first message reaching me from the old home."

"I have seen that home," she said quietly, "and shall never forget the impression it made on me. A beautiful place. I was there on a coaching party, the first summer I was in England. I was a mere girl then, and everything seemed wonderful. I have been away from Maryland now for three years. Nothing else would satisfy father. Maryland is only a colony, you know."

"Your home is at Saint Mary's?"

"Lower down the Potomac. Have you ever been there?"

"Twice; once as mate, and the last time as master of a ship. My latest voyage in these waters was made nearly two years ago."

"It is not so strange then, is it, that I should have felt interested in you?" she asked suddenly, as though justifying herself. "When Uncle Roger first told me who you were, and then explained what had occurred at your trial, naturally you became to me something entirely different from the others. Were you actually with Monmouth?"

"In sympathy, yes; but I had no hand in the actual fighting. I was not even ashore until it was all over with. Still I shall pay my share of the bill."

"And you know what that means, do you not? What will happen when we reach Virginia?"

"Perfectly; I have no illusions. I have seen just such ships as this come in. We are to be advertised, and sold to the highest bidder. A week from now I shall probably be out in the tobacco fields, under the whip of an overseer, who will call me Jeff. All I can hope for is a kind-hearted master, and an early opportunity to escape."

"Oh, no!" and in her eagerness her hands actually clasped mine. "It is not going to be quite so bad as that. That is what I wanted to tell you. That is what gave me boldness to come across here to you tonight. It has all been arranged. You are not going to be sold on the block with those others. Uncle Roger has already contracted with the captain for your services. You are going north with us to Maryland."

I drew a deep breath, and in the sudden impulse of relief which swept over me my own fingers closed tightly about her hands.

"I owe this to you; I am sure I must owe this to you—tell me?"

Her eyes dropped, and in the dim light I could mark the heaving of her bosom as she caught her breath.

"Only—only the suggestion," she managed to say in a whisper. "He—he was glad of that. You see I—I knew he needed someone to take charge of his sloop, and—and so I brought you to his mind. So please don't thank me."

"I shall never cease to thank you," I returned warmly, conscious suddenly that I was holding her hands, and as instantly releasing them. "It will save me the degradation which I dreaded most of all—the toiling in the fields beside negro slaves, and the sting of the lash. Ay, it means even more—"

I hesitated, instantly realising that I must not utter those impetuous words leaping to my lips.

"More!" she exclaimed. "What more?"

"This," I went on, my thought shifting into a new channel. "A longer servitude. Up to this moment my one dream has been to escape, but I must give that up now. You have placed me under obligations to serve. Between us this has become a debt of honor."

"But wait," she said earnestly, "for I had even thought of that. I was sure you would feel that way—any gentleman would. Still there is a way out. You were sentenced as an indentured servant. I saw the entry myself. It read: 'Geoffry Carlyle, Master Mariner, indentured to the Colonies for the term of twenty years, unless sooner released; crime, high treason.' Any indentured man, under our Maryland laws, can buy his freedom, after serving a certain proportion of his sentence. Did you not know that?"

I did know it, yet somehow had never connected the fact before directly with my own case. God! what a relief; I stood up straight once more in the stature of a man. I hardly know what wild words I might have spoken had the opportunity been mine; but at that instant the figure of a man crossed the deck toward us, emerging from the open cabin door. Against the gleam of yellow light I recognized the trim form advancing, and as instantly stepped back into shadow. My quick movement caused her to turn and face him.

"What!" he exclaimed, and evidently surprised at his discovery. "It is indeed Mistress Dorothy—out here alone? 'Twas my thought you were safely in your cabin long since. But—prithee—I mistake; you are not alone."

"I was preparing to go in," she answered, ignoring his latter words. "The night already looks stormy."

"But your friend?"

The tone in which he spoke was insistent, almost insolent in its demand, and she hesitated no longer in meeting the challenge.

"Your pardon, I am sure—Lieutenant Sanchez, this gentleman is Captain Geoffry Carlyle."

He stood there stiff and straight against the background of light, one hand in affected carelessness caressing the end of a waxed mustache. His face was in shadow, yet I was quite aware of the flash of his eyes.

"Ah, indeed—some passenger I have not chanced to observe before?"

"A prisoner," she returned distinctly. "You may perhaps remember my uncle pointed him out to us when he first came aboard."

"And you have been out here alone talking with the fellow?"

"Certainly—why not?"

"Why the man is a felon, convicted of crime, sentenced to deportation."

"It is not necessary that we discuss this, sir," she interposed, rather proudly, "as my personal conduct is not a matter for your criticism. I shall retire now. No, thank you, you need not come."

He stopped still, staring blankly after her as she vanished; then wheeled about to vent his anger on me.

"Carlyle, hey!" he exclaimed sneeringly. "A familiar sound that name in my ears. One of the brood out of Bucclough?"

"A cadet of that line," I managed to admit, wonderingly. "You know of them?"

"Quite as much as I care to," his tone ugly and insulting. Then an idea suddenly occurred to his mind. "Saint Guise, but that would even up the score nicely. You are, as I understand it, sent to Virginia for sale?"

"Yes."

"For how long a term?"

"The sentence was twenty years."

"Hela! and you go to the highest bidder. I'll do it, fellow! To actually own a Carlyle of Bucclough will be a sweet revenge. 'Twill count for more than were I to tweak the duke's nose."

"A very noble plan for revenge," I admitted. "And one which I am not likely to forget. Unfortunately you come too late. It happens, senor, that I am already safely indentured to Roger Fairfax."

I turned away, but he called angrily after me:

"Do not feel so sure of that Carlyle! I am in the game yet."

CHAPTER IV.

Black Sanchez, Pirate.

I rested in my berth for a long time, staring blankly up at the dark deck above, unable to sleep, and endeavoring to figure out the true meaning of all these occurrences. I felt that I could understand the interest exhibited by Dorothy Fairfax, and, greatly as I already admired her, I was not egotist enough to even imagine that her effort to serve me had basis in any personal attraction. But what about Lieutenant Sanchez? Why was this unknown Spaniard already so openly my enemy? Could it be because of Dorothy Fairfax? I felt finally that I had the clue—jealousy, the mad, unreasoning jealousy of his race.

I had no false conception as to this; no vagrant thought that her interest in me was any more than a passing fancy, born of sympathy and a desire to aid. Nevertheless, as she had thus already served me, I now owed her service in return, and here was the first call. If conditions made it possible it was my plain duty to place myself between these two.

What mystery is back of the Namur of Rotterdam, the strange ship which the Fairfax party encounters as it sails up the bay? Sanchez shows little interest, but Fairfax and Carlyle are worried. What can the strange craft be doing in this spot?

PUBLIC ROADS

FEDERAL AID FOR ROAD WORK

Small Amount Paid Out in 1918 Was Because of Steps Taken for Conservation.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Although $14,550,000 was available for expenditure on the post roads from the federal aid road act, only $425,445 was paid from federal funds in the highway construction season of 1918 on all projects. The reason for this, according to the annual report of the secretary of agriculture, was the steps taken to conserve money, labor, transportation and materials in highway work during the war, and at the same time to facilitate really essential highway projects.

In connection with the federal aid road work a letter was addressed to each state highway department asking that a program of federal aid construction be submitted at the earliest possible date, in which would be included only those projects which the state highway departments considered vitally necessary to the transportation facilities of the country.

At the request of the capital issues committee, engineers of the department were made available for inspecting and reporting upon proposed highway and irrigation and drainage bond issues. Inspections were made of 181 separate projects, involving total bond issues of $86,912,396. An arrangement was made with the fuel administration whereby highways of special importance should receive enough bituminous material to provide for adequate maintenance, and where necessary to permit construction and reconstruction. From May 13, 1918, when the co-operation became actively effective, until the close of the fiscal year, 2,235 applications, calling for 75,000,000 gallons of bituminous material, were received from states, counties and municipalities. Of this amount approval was given and permits were issued for 58,000,000 gallons.

In order to co-ordinate the activities of various government agencies, so far as they relate to highways; better to conserve materials, transportation, money and labor; to eliminate delays and uncertainties, and to provide positive assistance in carrying on vitally effective highway work, the secretary requested each of the government departments and administrations interested to name a representative to serve on a council to deal with highway projects during the period of the war. As a result, the United States highways council, consisting of a representative from the department of agriculture, the war department, the railroad administration, the war industries board and the fuel administration was formed in June. During the first four months of its existence the council passed upon about 5,000 applications, involving nearly 4,000,000 barrels of cement, 3,250,000 tons of stone, 1,140,000 tons of gravel, 1,207,000 tons of sand, over 77,000,000 brick and nearly 20,000,000 pounds of steel, and 140,000,000 gallons of bituminous materials.

PAY AND FILE INCOME TAX BEFORE MAR. 15

U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau Gives Warning That Severe Penalties Will Be Enforced.

WOMEN WITHIN LAW'S SCOPE; HOW THEY REPORT INCOME

The Income Tax drive comes to a close on Saturday night, March 15.

The payments and returns due on that date under the provisions of the new Revenue Law must be in the hands of local Internal Revenue Collectors before their offices close that night.

The Income Tax is being collected to meet the war expenses. Every person who shouted and tooted his horn on Armistice Day is now called upon to contribute his share of the cost of winning the war.

The laggards and the dodgers will face severe fines and jail sentences. The Internal Revenue Bureau announces that its officers will check us all up to see that every person who comes within the scope of the Income Tax law did his share.

Where to Pay and File.

Residents of Indiana will make returns and pay their taxes to Peter J. Kruyer, Collector of Internal Revenue, Indianapolis, or to Isaac R. Strouse, Terre Haute, or to any of the deputy collectors who are now doing free advisory work on Income Tax.

Payments sent by mail should be attached to the returns and should be in the form of check, money order or draft. Cash payments by mail are sent at the taxpayer's risk of loss.

If you are unable to make your return personally because of illness, absence or incapacity an agent or legal representative may make your return.

If there are any doubtful points as to your items of income or allowable deductions you should get in touch at once with a Revenue officer or a banker for advice.

Women Pay Tax.

Women are subject to all the requirements of the Income Tax. Whether single or married, a woman's income from all sources must be considered.

If unmarried or if living apart from her husband she must make her return for 1918 if her net income was $1,000 or over.

If married and living with her husband her income must be considered with the husband's in determining the liability for a return. Their joint income, less the credits allowed by law, is subject to normal tax. The wife's net income is considered separately in computing any surtax that may be due. Husband and wife file jointly, as a rule. If the husband does not include his wife's income in his return the wife must file a separate return.

Severe Penalties.

The new Revenue Law places severe penalties on a person who fails to make return on time, refuses to make return or renderg a frauduient return. For failure to make return and pay tax on time a fine of not more than $1,000 is named and 25 per cent of the tax due is added to the assessment. For refusing willfully to make return or for making a false or fraudulent return there is a fine of not exceeding $10,000 and imprisonment of not exceeding one year, or both.

Farmers' Income Taxable.

Every farmer and ranchman who had a fair or a good year in 1918 must heed the Income Tax this year. He must consider all his income as taxable. He is entitled to deduct from his gross income all amounts expended in carrying on his farm. The cost of farm machinery, farm buildings and improvements cannot be deducted. The cost of live stock, either for resale or for breeding purposes, is also regarded as investment.

Overtime and Bonuses Taxed.

Salary and wage earners must consider as taxable every item received from employers and from other sources. Bonuses and overtime pay are to be reported as well as the regular payments.

Allowances for Losses.

Losses sustained in 1918 and not covered by insurance are deductible items if incurred in the taxpayer's business or trade, in any transaction undertaken for profit or arising from fire, storm, shipwreck or other casualty or from theft.

SQUARE DEAL FOR EVERY INCOME TAX PAYER.

Washington, D. C.—"The rights of all persons now filing Income Tax returns are amply protected by provisions for abatements, refunds and appeals," says Commissioner Daniel C. Roper.

"Every person can be sure of a square deal. No person is expected to pay more than his share of tax. His share is determined solely by the amount and nature of his net income for 1918, as defined in the law.

"Abatement petitions are dealt with open-mindedly. Refunds will be made in every case where too much tax is erroneously collected.

"The Income Tax is 'on the level' all the way through."

King Patterson Dies

St. Joe was shocked last Thursday evening to learn of the death of H. King Patterson of Greenville, Ohio, a former citizen of St. Joe. Death came just before noon on Thursday as the result of acute indigestion, which effected his heart.

He was the son of F. A. Patterson and wife of Hicksville and most of his life was spent there. He visited St. Joe frequently before moving here, and became intimately acquainted with nearly everyone here. He managed the opera house rink and picture show business here. The funeral was held at Hicksville on Saturday afternoon with a number of St. Joe relatives present.

Dose it Pay To Spray?

Some think it pays to advertise,
Some think another way;
But one thing sure we must admit,
The farmer has to spray.

The Apple, Pear and Apricot,
All blight and show decay;
The only way to stop the pests,
Is pruning, care and Spray.

The choicest fruit of any land,
Our state can lead the way;
But it won't grow by luck or chance,
We must get out and Spray.

The San Jose Scale, and codling moth,
Are here, and here to stay;
Unless you get the spray pump out,
And Spray, and Spray, and Spray.

You must use lime and sulphur,
And Berdeaux too I say;
And put in arsenate of lead,
To poison up the spray.

Two hundred bushels to the tree,
Is quite a crop, you say;
But you can't raise one-fourth that much,
If you neglect to spray.

So Mr. Farmer hurry up,
And drive those pests away;
Just fix your price, we don't mind that,
By the job, or by the day.
Let us spray.

AN OPEN LETTER TO UNCLE SAM

By WILLIAM WALLACE COOK

Dear Uncle Sam:
I'm just a plain American whose heart
Has thrilled with pride as through this war I've done my modest part
To help Our Boys on land and sea. I could not tote a gun;
My hair is gray, my form is bow'd, my years are nearly run.
I could not march beneath the Flag, I could not face the foe—
As others faced him overseas—and give him blow for blow.
Old Time has worked his will with me; and so it was my fate
To have this Armageddon come some fifty years too late.
And yet I've helped! My dollars fought, if not my flesh-and-blood;
My dollars did their bit to stem the mad Teutonic flood.
And some I gave the Crimson Cross to bind the wounds that bled;
And some I gave the orphaned ones who cried aloud for bread;
And some I gave to comfort those who bore the battle's brunt
And, weary, sought a breath of home behind the fighting front.
An old man's pride is here, I trow; an old man's love, as well;
A dollar's blessed of heaven when it cheers in war's red hell;
Yet here my duty could not stop; it ran to needs beyond;
Of ev'ry loan you issued, Sam, I bought a goodly bond.
I made myself this slogan, 'n the thought of duty done:
THE MAN BEHIND THE BOND'S BEHIND THE MAN BEHIND THE GUN!
You gave me, Uncle Samuel, what worldly gear I've got,
For here the chance to work and win is ev'ry person's lot;
In Freedom's cause our fathers wrought—those men of sterling worth—
A heritage of glory for the chosen of the Earth!
I fear that sometimes we forget, so keenly we pursue
Our individual destinies, the debt we owe to you.
No country can be greater than the citizens it holds;
No flag no better, brighter, than the faith that flag enfolds.
And freemen are not freemen when, the crisis bravely met,
They will not, if they must, give all to pay their freedom's debt.
And so this loan for Victory I'll make my proudest boast—
I'll lend my money to this Loan unto the uttermost!
I'll make another slogan and I'll fling it wide and far:
THE MAN BEHIND THE BOND'S BEHIND THE PEACE BEHIND THE WAR!

Suing for Commission.

The case of the Main Realty Co. against Horatio H. Squiers was set for trial before a jury in the DeKalb circuit court Tuesday.

The realty company is located at Fort Wayne and Mr. Squires is a resident of Concord township, now living on the J. W. Sherer farm. The company says the defendant agreed in writing to give the plaintiff a commission of 5% in the sale of a tract of suburban real estate at Fort Wayne, when sold under certain conditions: and that the sale was made for $15,000, but that Mr. Squiers has failed to pay the commission.

In his answer to the complaint, the defendant says that the pretended contract was without any consideration whatever. He declares that on November 3, 1917, he entered into a contract with the company wherein the company agreed to act as an agent to procure a buyer for the real estate, the life of the contract being six months. A buyer was not found and on December 4, 1918, the parties agreed that the contract should be annulled and that Squires agreed to pay, and did pay, $20 to the company as a full settlement, except that if Squires should thereafter sell the property to any person to whom the company had shown the real estate on or prior to that date, he was to pay a commission of 5% of the selling price.

Squires declares he never thereafter sold the real estate to any person to whom the plaintiff had ever shown it.

CHARGE OF FRAUD.

Squires adds that after the agreement had been entered into the company fraudulently procured a contract to be written in which it had inserted the following language:

"The said H. H. Squires hereby agrees to pay to the Main Realty Co. the sum of 5% commission of the purchase price of said property if he sells the same during the time that said option contract is in force, which is to and including the third day of May, 1918."

Squires said when this contract was read to him this portion was left out with the intent to defraud him. He believed the reading to be correct, he says, but when he undertook to read it one of the employes of the company took the contract and fraudulently pretended to explain it to Squires and misstated its contents.

Squires therefore demands a judgment. Edgar W. Atkinson and Clarence P. Squires are his attorneys, while the plaintiff's attorneys are J. E. Pomeroy and W. H. Reed.

Clean Up On Ashley

The St. Joe basket ball team won the game played at the Y. M. C. A. Friday evening with the Ashley basket ball team. The score at the close of the contest was 42 to 15. Each team had won a game on their own floors and it was decided that a fair to play the deciding third would be on a floor strange to the players of both teams, so the Y. M. C. A. floor was selected. Only a small crowd was present, the bad roads preventing many basket ball fans from St. Joe and Ashley from attending.—Star.

OUR PRAYERS

We pray and we weep with emotions that weary us;
Ready to worship our heroes of war.
We put them on pedestals high as old Sirius,

'Twould carry the message to God that we're serious
If we backed up our prayers with a Liberty Bond.

Move Clocks Ahead

Since the movement for the repeal of the daylight saving law has failed, clocks throughout the country will again be turned forward one hour on March 30.

The law, as enacted last March, specifies that the change shall take place the last Sunday in March, which this year falls on the 30th. The official change is supposed to take place at 2 o'clock in the morning, but it is suggested that the most convenient way for the average person will be to turn the clock forward one hour on going to bed Saturday night, March 29. Clocks will be turned back again on the last Sunday in October.

THE MISER AND THE WOMAN.

A miser, born in a land afar,
Who'd gained a fortune over here,
Where Liberty is the guiding star,

"The Nation's call to lend I flout.

A woman gazed on a star of gold.
She'd given all she had to give,
And sacrificed to lend, 'twas told,
That Liberty and Land might live.
"And I'll lend again and again," she said,

And to keep true faith with our hero dead

PUREBRED SIRE HAS MUCH TO DO WITH MAKING PROFITS FOR CATTLE GROWERS

Shorthorn Cattle Grazing on Kansas Farm.

(By FRANK D. TOMSON.)

There has come a very decided change in the affairs on the average stock farm. The cost of operation has moved very much upward, just as the cost of living has made itself felt in the city. Farm land has been gradually taking on a higher valuation. Corn and hay and the various grains have a more attractive value. Farm labor has been costing steadily more from year to year. The cost of making a pound of beef or a quart of milk is no longer on the plane where it used to be.

True, beef has advanced in selling value, yet this advance has not been sufficient to warrant the cattle grower on the farm to continue with the ordinary standards if he desired to make a profit. This situation has led to a more general study of trade values and comparative results than has ever been known among the farmers before. And so it is that many a carload of grade cattle has gone to market. They sold for more money than they ever commanded before, but even this return did not justify in most cases the farmer continuing with his grades when purebreds were available at current prices. In many cases purebreds have been purchased and placed on the farm where formerly the grades had been profitably grown. The initial cost was greater per head than that of the grades, but the decrease in numbers to be maintained in order to get the same gross profits assured at once a very considerable saving in high-priced feed. The advantage of the purebred is that its quality when finished will command a higher price per pound at the market. Not only this, but except in comparatively rare instances, they attain more weight at a given age, so that the producer has the advantage of a greater number of pounds and a higher price for every pound.

Advantage of Purebred Sire.

Anyone familiar with the beef markets has long since recognized that the purebred sire has had more to do with making profits to the growers than any single factor. The buyers on the markets are always on the lookout for quality, and when you combine quality and weight the margins of profit are certain to be more nearly satisfactory. But as purebred cattle have become more numerous they are more frequently in comparison with grades and inferior standards at the markets, and the purebred invariably has the advantage, or in such cases where he fails it is due to some other cause.

There have been many arguments offered to encourage farmers to grow purebred cattle, but these arguments have not been necessary since the cost of maintenance has reached its present level, nor with the numerous object lessons with which they have become familiar.

In England, where live stock improvement has been carried on more successfully and for a longer period than in any country, the great majority of the cattle stocks are purebred, or practically so. The shorthorn greatly outnumbers other breeds. This is due to its responsiveness to farm conditions and its dual purpose character. On every farm where beef making is conducted a reasonable quantity production of milk is essential and this the shorthorn provides along with its beef yields.

It will be a long time in this country before we reach anywhere near a 50 per cent proportion of purebred cattle of all breeds, but there is abundant evidence that we are steadily and certainly moving in that direction. The time will come when we will have passed the 50 per cent mark and will approach a 75 per cent total, but that will be a long while in the future. The available supply of purebred cattle for breeding purposes is insufficient to permit of attaining these percentages in the near future. Certain it is, however, that once the farmer has given purebred cattle a reasonable trial he will not be satisfied to put in his time with less responsive and less profitable standards.

STOP SLAUGHTER OF BIRDS

Wardens Wage Constant War on Unprincipled Slayers of Feathered Friends of the Farmer.

The guardian of the birds on protected lands is an important part of the work of the federal and Audubon authorities. Although state and national laws have been passed making it wrong to kill the birds for their plumage, plume hunters are constantly raiding the nests of the waterfowl and killing them for the sake of the prices the wings will bring. Thus a constant watch is necessary. Patrol boats are constantly hovering along the shores of the reservations, and more than one pitched battle has been fought to save the egret or gulls from slaughter. In Florida, one of the best game wardens of the Audobon society was killed by bird butchers.

If those who call the robin the thief of their fruit, and hate him for his early morning raids on their berries, would realize that the little fruit spoiled is a light dessert for the huge quantity of insects killed before the fruit was touched, then their feelings would be more kindly. Cutworms and cranefies, which do great harm to grain crops, are favorite foods for robins, while leaf-beetles, vine-worms, etc., are eaten in great numbers.—Exchange.

Love Knows No Rank.

The little girl from Texas shyly asked the officer of the day where Robert —— could be found.

She had his picture with her. Did not the lieutenant wish to see it? No, O, but in the picture Robert had his machine, "and everything."

Well, yes, the lieutenant might take a look at it. The girl really was very pretty.

The lieutenant glanced at the picture. Robert was a big, good-looking fellow. But what was this? Why, the fellow was leaning nonchalantly against the basket of a balloon.

The telephone rang. Robert had been located. The officer detailed a guard to escort the young woman to her affianced.

They reached his company. A man, his back turned, was outside the kitchen door, busily scrubbing pans. A look of sympathy came into the eyes of the girl until—he turned.

"Robert!"

And as his arms went around her she never missed his machine.—Fort Omaha Gas Bag.

DRUGGISTS! VICK'S VAPORUB SHORTAGE OVERCOME AT LAST

The Deal Scheduled for Last November, Which Was Postponed on Account of the Influenza Epidemic, Is Now Reinstated—Good During the Month of March.

OVER ONE MILLION JARS OF VAPORUB PRODUCED EACH WEEK

It is with pride that we announce to the drug trade that the shortage of Vick's VapoRub, which has lasted since last October, is now overcome. Since January 1st, we have been running our laboratory twenty-three and a half hours out of every twenty-four. Last week we shipped the last of our back orders, and retail druggists, therefore, are no longer requested to order in small quantities only.

NOVEMBER DEAL RE-INSTATED

This deal, which we had expected to put on last November and which had to be postponed on account of the shortage of VapoRub, is re-instated for the month of March. This allows a discount of 10% on shipments from jobbers' stock of quantities of from 1 to 4 gross. 5% of this discount is allowed by the jobber and 5% by us.

We advise the retail druggists to place their orders immediately, so that the jobbers will be able to get prompt shipments to them.

THANKS OF THE PUBLIC DUE THE DRUG TRADE DURING THE INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC.

The thanks of the American public are certainly due the entire drug trade—retail, wholesale and manufacturing—for what they accomplished during the recent influenza epidemic. The war caused a shortage of physicians—nurses were almost impossible to obtain—the demand on the drug trade was unexpected and overwhelming, and to this demand they responded nobly. Retail druggists kept open day and night and slept where they dropped behind the prescription counter. Wholesale druggists called their salesmen off the road to help fill orders—hundreds wired us to ship Vick's VapoRub by the quickest route, regardless of expense.

A TREMENDOUS JOB TO INCREASE OUR PRODUCTION

In this emergency we tried to do our part. We scoured the country for raw materials—our Traffic Manager spent his days riding freight cars in—we shipped raw materials in carload lots by express and pleaded with manufacturers to increase their deliveries to us.

But it was a slow process. Some of our raw materials are produced only in Japan—supplies in this country were low and shipments required three months to come from the Far East. Then we had to recruit and train skilled labor. We brought our salesmen into the factory and trained them as foremen. We invented new machinery, and managed to install it on Christmas Day, so as not to interfere with our daily production.

143 JARS OF VAPORUB EVERY MINUTE DAY AND NIGHT

By January 1st we had everything ready to put on our night shift, and since then our laboratory has been running day and night. To feed our automatic machines, which drop out one hundred and forty-three jars of VapoRub a minute or one million and eighty thousand weekly, has required a force of 500 people. Our Cafe Department, created for the benefit of these workers, served 7,000 meals during the month of January alone.

13 MILLION JARS OF VAPORUB DISTRIBUTED SINCE OCTOBER.

An idea of the work we have accomplished this fall may be given by our production figures—13,023,976 jars of VapoRub manufactured and distributed since last October—one jar for every two families in the entire United States.

During the influenza epidemic Vick's VapoRub was used as an external application in connection with the physician's treatment, and thousands of people, unable to obtain a doctor, relied on Vick's almost exclusively.

Literally millions of families all over the country, from California to Maine, and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf, have found Vick's VapoRub the ideal home remedy for croup and cold troubles.

VALUE OF CLIPPING OFTEN OVERLOOKED

Benefit to Horse and Also to Owner Who Saves Feed.

At Least 20 Per cent in Cost of Feeding Is Saved by Use of Clippers as Often as There Is Sufficient Hair to Clip.

(By JAMES COLEMAN.)

If horse owners only knew the advantages attached to the clipping of working horses, the manufacturers of clipping machines would do a much more thriving business. From all points I have considered the pros and cons of the practice, and I have proved, at least to my own satisfaction, that clipping is an all-around benefit to not only the horse, but to the owner, who may save considerably in the cost of feeding.

Any thinker will readily accept the statement that hair eats. Therefore, the heavier a horse's coat the greater percentage of what he eats is devoured by his hair. In humans it has been proved a similar condition obtains. A little girl with a heavy head of hair often is weak and her parents are puzzled to account for her lack of robust health. Let the child's hair be cut off and she rapidly improves in condition and regains juvenile vivacity.

For a working horse a heavy coat is just the opposite of a necessity; for it means that the hair has to be fed. Nothing assists so materially in the fattening of a poor horse as clipping his coat and keeping it short. At least 20 per cent is saved in the cost of feeding a working horse—any breed—by using the clippers as often as there is sufficient hair to clip.

In the winter time it is impossible to dry even a racehorse thoroughly after he has "got up a sweat," and racehorses are almost invariably clipped once in the season and sometimes oftener.

It is impossible to keep properly clean the hide of a horse that has a heavy coat, and as "a good clean" is reckoned by horse owners as being worth half a feed it needs little calculation to know what clipping means. For the working horse, clipping is a positive necessity.

Dressing for Trees.

The orchard trees will appreciate a dressing of stable manure this winter if none has been applied for several years. Put on the ground as far out from the trees as the branches reach.

HOME-GROWN FRUIT

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Home-grown fruit is desirable—

Because it reaches the family fresh and in best condition.

Because the family has fruit of which it would often be deprived if it had to be purchased.

Because, if the proper varieties be selected, a continuous supply of fruit of superior quality may be secured, regardless of market prices.

Because any surplus usually can be sold without difficulty, or otherwise conserved for use when fresh fruit is not available.

Because the care of the home fruit garden provides for spare time congenial and profitable occupation which is in reality recreation for those who enjoy seeing things grow.

REMOVAL OF OBJECTIONABLE STUMPS BY USE OF DYNAMITE IS MOST ECONOMICAL

Getting Land Into Shape by Blowing Out Stumps.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Explosives can be used to advantage in clearing most land. Either alone or in combination with burning methods or pullers, explosives, if used efficiently, will materially reduce the cost of stumping.

Dynamite is a means of rapid clearing, and when it is used there is no capital tied up in idle machinery after the clearing is completed. If it is not possible to reduce the acre cost for stumping machinery to a reasonable figure, blasting is the most economical method, except perhaps the burning methods, to use in stumping small tracts. If in doubt whether to use dynamite alone in stumping it is advisable to get a 25 or 50-pound box and experiment to find how much it requires to blow out some average stumps on the tract. However, it is usually found more economical to use dynamite than to depend upon labor for doing the work.

It is difficult to clear the earth from the roots of stumps in clay soil. Where stumps are shot clear of the ground there is less adhering earth than where they are cracked and pulled. Perhaps in clay soil it would be more economical to shoot the stumps clear of the ground.

Cost of Explosives.

If explosives are bought in small quantities the cost is rather high. To reduce the cost it is recommended that several farmers club together and buy in large quantities. Careful, experienced persons can safely do the work with high explosives, but no one should attempt to use them until he thoroughly understands the best and safest methods of handling. Various brands of explosive require different methods of handling, and full and detailed information as to the best ways of using them is absolutely essential. For this reason, the reader is advised to study with extreme care the instructions issued by the manufacturer of the brand of explosive which he proposes to use. If dynamite is to be handled in cold weather, study very carefully the manufacturers' instructions on thawing dynamite. Many accidents have happened through ignorance or carelessness in thawing. The blasting caps are much more sensitive than the dynamite itself, and should be handled with great care. A cap crimper is an inexpensive tool, and its use may prevent serious accidents.

Best Time to Blast.

The best time to blast stumps is when the ground is saturated with water. The explosive works most efficiently then because the gases resulting from the explosion do not escape through the spaces between the soil particles.

An explosive containing a low percentage of nitroglycerin will do the same work in wet soil as one containing a higher percentage would do in the same soil when dry. Dynamite with 20 per cent of nitroglycerin or its equivalent is used almost exclusively on the Pacific coast, it could be used effectively for stumping operations in many other parts of the United States, especially where the soil is heavy, wet or where the stumps are well decayed. Dynamite with 40 per cent nitroglycerin is largely used in the South for blasting the longleaf pine, and the lake states for white pine. In many cases a lower grade of explosive could be profitably substituted. The 40 per cent grade should be used where the soil is somewhat light and dry or where the stumps are green. The 60 per cent grade of dynamite has been used with good success in blasting stumps in the porous coral soils of southern Florida, in blasting stumps at a dry time in sandy soil, and in blasting tough, green, hardwood stumps. The higher percentage dynamites are likely to pack heavy soil if used when it is very wet.

Roughly, the number of pounds of dynamite required to shoot a stump clear of the ground is the same as the square of the number of feet in the diameter of the stump at the cut off. For example, a 2-foot stump will require four pounds, and one 6 feet in diameter will require 36 pounds. Often less will do the work, but occasionally more is required. All factors, such as kind and soundness of the stumps, and kind and condition of the soil, influence the amount of explosive required for a stump of given size. Local reports and the throwing of parts of the stump high in the air indicate an excessive charge.

Firing Charges by Electricity.

The electrical method of firing blasts is beginning to be extensively used. In firing charges by this method the following equipment is needed: One blasting machine, 800 feet of double leading wire to reach from the stumps to the blasting machine, some connecting wire to connect the stumps together in a series, and electric detonators in place of the caps and fuses used in ordinary blasting. Firing by electricity has many advantages over the cap and fuse method. The danger of premature explosions is greatly reduced and the danger from delayed explosions is entirely eliminated. Probably more people have been injured in stump blasting by too hasty investigation of a delayed explosion than from any other cause. When using the cap and fuse method, the safe rule to follow when a charge does not explode as expected is to keep away from the locality until the next day. Where the stumps have been severely burned, are badly decayed, hollow, have several large spreading roots or where it is necessary to blast stumps so near to each other that the explosion of a charge under one stump would loosen the earth under the adjacent one, the use of the blasting machine will save dynamite and result in better work being done than if the cap and fuse are used. If the stumps have been partially burned out by any of the burning processes previously described, the roots can best be blown out by firing the charges with a blasting machine.

VARIETIES OF FRUIT FOR HOME ORCHARDS

Selection Is One of Most Important Considerations.

Prospective Planter Should Avail Himself of Suggestions of Experienced Growers in His Community—Place Orders Early.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the most important considerations in planting a home orchard is the selection of kinds of fruits and varieties of those kinds which will do well in the locality where they are to be grown. While many of the long-established nurseries are selling their stock through traveling agents whose integrity is unquestioned, it is better as a rule for a grower to deal directly with nurserymen than through agents. Place orders early and deal only with reliable nurserymen.

In selecting varieties a prospective planter should avail himself of the suggestions of experienced fruit growers in his community, his state agricultural college or the United States department of agriculture. In Farmers' Bulletin 1001, recently published by the department, the country is divided into 14 districts and the most desirable fruit varieties are given for each district. It will be sent free on application.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.—Adv.

The Auburn postmaster has received orders as follows: "that a recent act of congress permits discharged soldiers to retain clothing and equipment which they take away with them and that, therefore, postmasters should not accept parcels containing these articles for return to the war department."

The tax duplicate of Indiana was increased $108,800,619 in 1918, according to complications of county auditors' returns to the auditor of state. The county returns show a total of taxable property amounting to $2,233,761,065 for 1918. In the preceding year the total was $2,124,951,446. It is estimated that under the operation of the new tax law that the total tax duplicate for 1919 will be increased to more than $5,000,000,000. The war left its mark on the total polls in 1918. In that year there is shown a decrease of 25,671, as compared with 1917. Last year the total polls was 444,321 and the year before 469,992.

One Million Garments A Month-Red Cross Gift to Refugees.

Red Cross workers in the Lake Division are to help complete the national quota of 1,000,000 sewn and knitted garments a month to be made and sent by the American Red Cross to relieve acute suffering in northern France, Belgium, Italy, Roumania, Serbia, Greece, Montenegro, Palestine, Albania and other countries.

Lake Division headquarters has agreed to furnish at least 350,000 completed garments by the middle of May. Chapters will be called on to make the garments as soon as they are cut from raw materials at the Lake Division Department of Supplies in Cleveland.

Harvey D. Gibson, Commissioner to Europe, writes that the need is great to a degree few at home can realize. The peoples of various European countries are in unbelievable distress owing to lack of proper clothing and food. It is the aim of the Red Cross to augment the aid which European governments are able to give to their suffering populations.

"Every garment furnished" writes Mr. Gibson, "will cover a body which otherwise would lack proper clothing. Each garment will actually prevent suffering." Refugee clothing is needed in unlimited quantities for refugees from all over the world who have been driven from their homes by varying fortunes of war. In some of the countries mentioned these people have been for years in rags or with practically no clothes.

The Red Cross now has commissioners in these countries and is prepared to make distribution of all the garments that can be made in this country. The need is fully as pressing as the old need for soldiers' socks and sweaters.

Lake Division officials feel that the workers in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky will welcome this opportunity to continue their invaluable service to relieve human suffering.

children from 2 to 14 years of age, striped outing flannel petticoats in seven sizes and undershirts, large and small.

Every week 70,000 ready-to-sew garments must be shipped to Lake Division chapters — because the need overseas is so great, because National Headquarters has assigned this task to the Lake Division, and because, if the shipping were held up for a few days and the cutting continued, the warehouse would be crowded with high stacks of odd-shaped pieces of cloth.

One thousand refugee garments cut and ready to make have arrived at the DeKalb County Chapter and 75 nightgowns are being sent to St. Joe Branch. This work is needed at once and the ladies of St. Joe and vicinity are urged to come to the Red Cross rooms on next Wednesday afternoon, March 26, to sew.

Refugee Garments Are Ready to Sew.

How Many Can You Make?

With a steady humming that resounds through the long assembling and cutting rooms in the Lake Division warehouse, the high-powered cutting machines are carving out 50,000 refugee garments a week—five sizes of girls chimeses of unbleached muslin, nightgowns for

A Business Proposition

By WILL PAYNE.

Secretary Glass said the Victory Liberty Loan should appeal to the patriotism of the people of the United States and not be merely a business proposition.

Isn't that so? It was no business proposition that sent two million young Americans to France and made nearly two million more give up their time for more than a year to train for going. This Victory Loan is to pay for equipping them, sending them over, keeping them there and fetching them back. Will you look one of them in the face and say, "As soon as you stopped fighting and I had given you three hearty cheers you became just a business proposition?"

But the loan is a business proposition, too—this way:

You are Uncle Sam—a hundred odd million of you, individually. Says Uncle Sam to himself, "I owe several million dollars—owe it now on due and maturing obligations that must be met to the last cent. My credit is practically unlimited. I can borrow that money of the banks. They've got to lend it to me. That will mean a huge inflation of bank credit—bank loans all swollen up with my paper—banks consequently in a poorer condition to take care of the ordinary business of the country.

But if I do borrow the money of the banks I've got to pay them back some time. There are only two ways in which a man can finally get out of debt. One way is to sell some property and pay up; the other way is to earn more than he spends, saving the difference. I have no property to sell. Can't sell the White House or the national forests. The second way is the only way for me. "Shall I borrow the money from the banks now and thereby put off the real settlement, or shall a hundred million individual Uncle Sams right now save out of their incomes and lend the saving to the collective Uncle Sam, thereby enabling him to pay the bills and wipe the slate, with no inflation, leaving the banks in sound condition to meet the needs of ordinary business?"

That is the question. It is your debt. You owe the money. Finally you've got to pay it in some fashion. To lend in on the banks now is the most expensive way temporarily to dispose of it. To save, individually, is the best and cheapest way. Even waiving patriotism, it comes down to a business proposition. Only the savings and subscriptions of the whole public can take care of the loan without inflation.

THE FUN OF SAVING MONEY.

The fun of saving money! Best fun in the world, once you get started. Great game, isn't it, where every player wins, always, and no one could possibly lose.

What's the fun consist of? What constitutes the fun of any good game? The planning, the struggle, the contest; the spirit of competition, emulation, excitement; the rush, the climax, the triumph of making goal.

What's the cost, the price of admission? Just the cost of any good game; time, energy, the letting go of nonessentials for the joy of realised ambition and success.

What's the reward? The game and its gaining. The bliss of fighting, climbing, fighting and climbing to win.

What's the method? Begin and keep going. Make a start, set a goal and attain it. Start again and make the same goal in shorter period. Set a new and sterner goal and time limit and beat the record again.

Uncle Sam can't be beat as a partner, game credits root up before you know it, and it doesn't cost much to sit in.

Miss Mame Bair returned home Saturday after visiting a week with friends at Fort Wayne.

Mrs. J. C. Emme and children arrived home on Friday from visiting friends at Fort Wayne, several weeks.

The river has raised at an alarming rate daring the recent rains and much anxiety is felt about property in that vicinity.

R. U. Bowser made a trip to Ft. Wayne on Monday to consult an eye specialist and have a piece of steel removed that had become embedded in the eyeball.

Next Sunday will be "Go to Sunday School Sunday." Each person in Spencer township is requested to attend one of the three schools in the township.

The "Flu" is again raging in this vicinity, in many homes entire families are down. Many nurses are needed and calls have been made to Hicksville and Ft. Wayne but not enough have been secured.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Paulding, Paulding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

WHEAT GUARANTEE HELPS ALL CROPS

Acts as a Balance That Will Sustain Present Prices on All Farm Products.

PUT THE SURPLUS INTO BONDS

Federal Reserve Board Looks to Farmer for a Generous Support of the Coming Victory Liberty Loan.

The United States Congress has appropriated $1,000,000,000 to guarantee the American farmer $2.26 a bushel for his 1919 wheat crop, a price which is $1 a bushel more than he might reasonably expect if American wheat was thrown on the market to compete with Argentine, Australian and Indian wheat. The American farmer has responded to the government's guarantee by pledging the production of millions of bushels more wheat than he has ever grown before, according to officials of the United States Food Administration's Grain Corporation.

The American farmer has never been in better financial condition, the officials say. The report of the Federal Reserve Board shows that the 1918 farm crop added $17,000,000,000 to the wealth of the country. The corn crop alone put $3,528,813,000 in the farmer's pocket. Hay added $1,500,000,000 to the farmer's income. Apples brought him $230,000,000. Oats sold on the farm for something over $1,000,000,000.

The guaranteed price of wheat will not only assure the farmer a profit on wheat, but will also sustain the prices on other farm products, Food Administration officials point out. With the return of an abundance of labor, the farmer is assured a highly prosperous year.

With the surplus the farmer has from his last abundant harvest and with his present season's return in a large measure guaranteed, the Federal Reserve Board looks to the farmer for a generous support of the coming Victory Liberty Loan. The securities to be offered will merit his attention as first class investments, aside from their patriotic appeal.

"Sixty thousand American lads, many of them farmer boys, gave their lives for the freedom of democracy," said an official of the United States Food Administration. "Had the war continued throughout next summer, as our military chiefs believed it would, two hundred thousand Americans and many more hundreds of thousands of their compatriots would have been sleeping in Flanders' fields and beneath the sod of France and Lorraine.

"That these lives were spared was due in a large measure to the lavish expenditure of the United States government in assembling men and munitions to crush Germany. Most of the men and even less of the material of war was never used. Yet the mighty preparations of our government forced the Germans to cry 'Kamerad.'

"The American farmer's sons are coming home for the most part unscathed. For this the American farmer is duly grateful. From his abundance from the past year and from his assured prosperity for the coming season, he should and will set a new record, a Thanksgiving record, in his subscription to the Victory Loan."

—HELP "FINISH THE JOB."—

LET US STAND BY DEAR OLD UNCLE SAM.

Uncle Sam is asking for a Victory Liberty Loan to clinch the stupendous demonstration that moral force, not military force, is to rule the world. We must care for our army of occupation and bring it home; we must reconstruct and rehabilitate those who have been wounded and blinded in defense of the right. This is to be a Loan of Thanksgiving, and the response should be more hearty and joyous than the response to any of the preceding Loans. Uncle Sam has helped to save the world for Liberty and Civilization. Let us give him the wherewithal to complete the job.

—HELP "FINISH THE JOB."—

"Peace must be financed as well as war, and the initial stages of peace may be found even more expensive than war. Therefore, get behind the Victory Liberty Loan when it comes."

HER FIRST REAL MONEY

"This card represents my first real money," recently said a farmer's wife, with an odd look of mingled pride, deprecation and something very like triumph.

"At home, as a girl, I had no money. Mother bought things for us children with whatever money father gave her. Since I've been married it's been much the same. I've got things at the town stores and Jim's paid for them. Even my egg and butter money has gone, as a rule, to help with the household upkeep—turned in on the grocery bill, usually. I've never seemed able to hold on to a penny.

"But when the War Savings Stamps came along I said to myself, 'Here's your chance, Mary!' And now I buy War Savings Stamps regularly, take 'em in change as regularly as I sell chickens or cash the creamery check at the bank. I've filled several cards already, and I can tell you I gloat over 'em! When those War Savings Stamps mature I'll have real money of my own."

—CAPITALIZE YOURSELF—

Hold On to Your Stamps.

Do not sell your War Savings Stamps. The government borrowed the money for a specific purpose. If the securities are not retained your purchase will have been of no permanent benefit to the government. INDIANA SOLONS FINISH LABORS

SEVENTY-FIRST GENERAL ASSEMBLY ADJOURNS SINE DIE —WAS BUSY SESSION.

TAX MEASURE IS PASSED

Avalanche of Bills Awaits Governor Goodrich's Signature—Has Until Saturday to Finish Task.

Indianapolis.—The Sixty-First General Assembly of Indiana came to a close at midnight Monday night. So great was the amount of business to be disposed of in the closing session, in the senate the omnibus plan was adopted, by which many bills were adopted by one roll call.

The most notable acts of the legislature were the ratification of the national prohibition amendment, the passage of a presidential woman suffrage bill and the passage of the state highway commission bill by which the state is to have an improved system of state controlled roads.

Governor Goodrich will have until Saturday midnight to sign the final grist of bills. Those that he does not veto or refuse to receive will become laws at that time, even without his signature.

The tax reform bill was passed and now awaits the signature of the governor.

The two bills he allowed to become law without his signature were the Miltenberger bill, giving a wife the same surety rights as her husband and repealing the act of 1881 concerning rights of husband and wife, and the Noll bill, amending the law affecting policemen's pension funds in the first and second class by increasing the tax levy.

SMOKING TOBACCO FACTS FROM THE ENCYCLOPAEDIA

The Use of Flavorings Determines Difference In Brands

The Encyclopædia Britannica says about the manufacture of smoking tobacco: ". . . on the Continent and in America, certain 'sauces' are employed . . . the use of the 'sauces' is to improve the flavour and burning qualities of the leaves." Which indicates that a smoker's enjoyment depends as much upon the flavoring used as upon the tobacco.

Your nose is a sure guide in the matter of flavorings. Try this simple test with several tobacco brands: pour some tobacco into your palm, rub briskly, and smell. You will notice a distinct difference in the fragrance of every brand. The tobacco that smells best to you will smoke best in your pipe, you can rest assured.

Carefully aged, old Burley tobacco, plus a dash of pure chocolate, gives TUXEDO Tobacco a pure fragrance your nose can quickly distinguish from any other tobacco. Try it and see.

WOLVES OF THE SEA

By RANDALL PARRISH

Copyright, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

The Namur of Rotterdam—Ship of Mystery.

Synopsis — Geoffry Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for participation in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanchez, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London. Carlyle meets Dorothy, who informs him her uncle has bought his services. Sanchez shows himself an enemy of Carlyle.

In the intensity of my feelings I must have unconsciously spoken aloud, for a shaggy head suddenly popped out from the berth beneath where I lay, and Haley's interested voice asked solicitously:

"Hy, thar; whut's up, mate? Ye was mutterin' 'way thar an' not disturbin' me none, till ye got ter talkin' 'bout sum feller called Sanches. Then I sorter got a bit interested. I know'd thet cuss onct," and he spat, as though to thus better express his feelings. "The d——d ornary pirate."

I laughed, my whole mental mood changed by this remark.

"Do you refer to 'Black Sanchez?' I've heard of him; were you ever in his hands?"

"Wus I!" he laughed grimly. "I hed eight months of it, mate, and a greater demon never sailed. The things I saw done ye'd never believe no human bein' could do. If ever thar wus two people in one skin, sir, it's thet Black Sanchez. When he's playin' off fer good he's as soft an' sweet as a dandy in Piccadilly, an' when he's real he's like a devil in hell."

"Were you a prisoner—or did you sail under him?"

"Both, fer the matter o' thet, He give me the choice ter serve er walk the plank. I wus eighteen, an' hed an ol' mother at Deal."

"I see; but later got away?"

"Ay, I did thet," chuckling over the recollection. "But I hed ter wait eight months fer the luck."

"I had a shipmate once," I observed, interested in his story, "who claimed to have seen the fellow; he described him as being a very large man, with intensely black, hawklike eyes and a heavy black beard almost hiding his face."

"Maybe he looked like that when he saw him, but he ain't no bigger man than I am; he won't weigh as much by fifteen pound. Fact is he mighty seldom looks the same, fer thet's part o' his game. I've seen him in all sorts o' disguises. It's only his eyes he can't hide, an' thar's been times when I thought they wus the ugliest eyes ever I saw. He's sure an ornary devil, an' when he gits mad, I'd rather be afront of a tiger. Besides fightin's his trade, an' no weaklin' ain't goin' ter control the sort o' chaps he's got ter handle. Most of 'em would murder him in a minute if they dared. Oh, he's bad all right, but yer wouldn't exactly think so, just ter look at him."

"What, then, does he really look like?"

"Oh, a sorter swashbucklin' Spanish don—the kind whut likes ter dress up an' play the dandy. He's got a pink an' white complexion, the Castilian kind, yer know, an' wears a little mustache, waxed up at the ends. I heard he wus about forty-five; I reckon he must be thet, but he didn't look older than thirty."

Haley dropped off to sleep, but my mind continued to wander until it conjured up once again this West Indian pirate. His name and the story of his exploits had been familiar to me ever since I first went to sea. While only one among many operating in those haunted waters his resourcefulness, daring and cruelty had won him an infamous reputation, a name of horror. In those days, when the curse of piracy made the sea a terror, no ordinary man could ever have succeeded in attaining such supremacy in crime.

Black Sanchez—and Haley pictured him as a dandified, ordinary appearing individual, with white and red complexion, a small mustache and flashing dark eyes—a mere Spanish gallant, without special distinction. Why, that description, strangely enough, fitted almost exactly this fellow on board, this other Sanchez.

The suspicion which had crept into my mind was so absurd, so unspeakably silly and impossible that I laughed at myself and dismissed the crazy thought. Chuckling over it I finally fell asleep.

CHAPTER V.

The Namur of Rotterdam.

The brig, with all sails set and favored by a strong wind, drew rapidly in toward the point of landing. The great majority of the prisoners remained on deck, chained together and helpless, yet surrounded by armed guards, while the few who had already been purchased by passengers humbly followed their new masters ashore the moment the gangplank touched the soil of Virginia. There were five of us altogether thus favored, but I was the only one owing allegiance to Roger Fairfax. The rude landing wharf along which we lay was already densely crowded. Altogether it was a bustling scene, full of change and color, the air noisy with shouting voices, the line of wharves filled with a number of vessels, either newly arrived or preparing to depart. It was with no small difficulty we succeeded in forcing our way through this jostling throng until we attained to an open space ashore. I followed closely behind the three composing our party, Roger Fairfax and Sanchez, with the laughing girl between them for protection. Fairfax was evidently well known to a number present, for he was being greeted on all sides with hearty handshakes and words of welcome.

We boarded the Fairfax sloop. The baggage was transferred. I worked with the Fairfax servants and it cut my pride to the quick. Out in the bay I was sent to the wheel.

Not another sail appeared across that surface of waters, not even a fisherman's boat, the only other vessel visible along our course being a dim outline close in against that far-away headland toward which I had been instructed to steer. I stared at this object, at first believing it a wreck, but finally distinguishing the bare masts of a medium-sized bark, evidently riding at anchor only a few hundred yards off shore.

The Spaniard presently pointed out to Fairfax the position of the bark.

"Surely a strange place in which to anchor, Lieutenant," said Fairfax. "Bark rigged and very heavily sparred. Seems to be all right. What do you make of the vessel?"

The Spaniard twisted his mustache but exhibited little interest, although his gaze was upon the craft.

"Decidedly Dutch, I should say," he answered slowly. "The beggars seem quite at home there, with all their washing out. Not a usual anchorage?"

"No, nor a particularly safe one. Travers' place is beyond the bend.

"I Had Eight Months of It, Mate."

We'll put up with him tonight. D——n me, Sanchez, I believe I'll hail the fellow and find out what he is doing in there."

Sanches nodded, carelessly striking flint and steel in an effort to relight a cheroot.

We came about slowly. The distance to be covered was not great, and in less than ten minutes we were drawing in toward the high stern of the anchored vessel.

No evidence of life appeared on board, although everything looked shipshape alow and aloft, and a rather extensive wash flapped in the wind forward, bespeaking a generous crew. A moment later my eyes made out the name painted across the stern—Namur of Rotterdam.

Fairfax leaned far out across the rail as we swept in closer, but the Spaniard exhibited no particular interest in the proceedings. A hundred feet distant I held the dancing sloop to mere steerage-way, while Fairfax hailed.

A red-faced man with a black beard thrust his head up above the after rail and answered, using English, yet with a faint accent which was not Dutch.

"We ran down to see if you were in any trouble. This is a strange place to anchor. What are you—Dutch?"

The fellow waved his hands in a gesture indicating disgust.

"Dat's eet. Ve're ov Rotterdam—you see ze name ov ze sheep. But ve not sail frum thar dis time—no. Ve cum here from ze Barbadoes," he explained brokenly, "wiz cane sugar an' hides. Ve vait here for our agent."

"But why anchor in a place like this? Why not go on up to the wharves?"

"Vye not? For siz—I no trust my crew ashore. Zay vest Indy niggers, an' vud run avay ven ze chance cum. I know vat say do."

In spite of my efforts the two vessels were drifting rapidly apart. Dorothy appeared at the door of the cabin and stood there gazing in surprise at the bark, while the moment he caught sight of her Sanches went hastily forward, removing his hat with so peculiar a flourish as he approached as to cause me to notice the gesture.

Fairfax waved his hand to me to resume our course. Shortly after he crossed the deck to the wheel. There he stood watching the bark for some time.

"What do you make of her, Carlyle?" he asked finally. "I believe that fellow lied."

"So do I, sir," I answered promptly. "Whatever else he may be, he's no peaceful Dutch trader. That fellow got his accent from south Europe. If he was loaded with cane sugar and hides for market he wouldn't be nearly so high out of water. That bark was in ballast or I miss my guess. Besides if he was a trader where was his crew? I tell you the men on board that hooker had orders to keep down."

"I believe you are right," he admitted frankly. "There is something wrong there. I'll tell Travers and have him send a runner overland to give warning below."

CHAPTER VI.

The Mysterious Sail.

Where I leaned alone against the rail my eyes followed the Spaniard in doubt and questioning, nor could I entirely banish from mind Haley's description of that buccaneer bearing a similar name. Yet, in spite of my unconscious desire to connect these two together, I found it simply impossible to associate this rather soft-spoken, effeminate dandy with that bloody villain.

It was already quite dusk when we finally drew in beside Travers' wharf and made fast. Our approach had been noted and Travers himself—a white-haired, white-bearded man, yet still hearty and vigorous, attired in white duck—was on the end of the dock to greet us, together with numerous servants of every shade of color, who immediately busied themselves toting luggage up the steep path leading toward the house, standing conspicuous amid a grove of trees on the summit of the bank. The others followed, four fellows lugging with difficulty an iron-bound chest, the two older men engaged in earnest conversation, thus leaving Sanchez apparently well satisfied with the opportunity alone to assist the girl.

Except to render the sloop completely secure for the night, there remained little work for us to perform on board. The four of us passed the early evening undisturbed smoking and talking together. So the time passed quickly, and it must have been nearly midnight before we brought out blankets from the forecastle and lay down in any spot we chose on deck.

It was a fair, calm night, but moonless, with but little wind stirring, and a slight haze in the air, obscuring the vision. The others must have fallen asleep immediately. At last, despairing of slumber, and perchance urged by some premonition of danger, I arose to my feet and moved silently aft.

My startled eyes caught a glimpse of a speck of white emerging from the black shadows—the spectral glimmer of a small sail. The strange craft swept past, so far out that those on board no doubt believed themselves beyond sight from the shore, heading apparently for a point of land, which I vaguely remembered as jutting out to the northward.

Alone in the darkness, Carlyle battles against tremendous odds. He gains the upper hand, victory seems assured, and then—but read about it for yourself in the next installment of this unusual story.

DAIRY FACTS

CHURN BUTTER ONLY

Cream alone should be churned. It may be skimmed as soon as it rises or may be separated by a mechanical separator. The latter plan is the more efficient, and though requiring a considerable initial outlay often will be profitable. The cream should be set aside in a clean place by separate milkings.

BALANCED RATION FOR COWS

Important to Furnish Various Nutrients in Proportion the Animal Needs Them.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is probably well to refer to the composition of feedstuffs as it relates to economical feeding of the dairy cow. The cow takes into her digestive system feeds which she utilizes for the production of body tissues, heating the body, performing bodily functions, such as digesting feed, moving from place to place, and for milk production. It is sufficient to say that the constituents or compounds and the relative quantities necessary for these operations have been determined; that is, we know that milk contains protein and energy or heat-producing constituents, the protein being represented by the casein and albumin and the energy and heat-producing constituents by the fat and sugar. In addition to the constituents or compounds necessary for the production of milk, she also must have the constituents necessary for performing the other functions mentioned. These, for convenience, have been classified into proteins, carbohydrates, and fats. Fats perform much the same functions as carbohydrates and are worth for production practically two and one-fourth times as much per pound as carbohydrates, and in the balancing of a ration are usually classed with them. This brings us to a definition of a "balanced ration," which is a ration containing these various nutrients in the proportion the cow needs them.

The economical importance of a balanced ration is evident. The cow can use only certain elements or compounds in certain proportions; consequently, if the ration supplies an excessive amount of any one, the excess is liable to be wasted. Not only is this true, but as the cow has to assimilate it even though she cannot use it, her capacity for production is reduced.

In making a ration, cost is one of the important factors. The best practice is to compound a grain mixture so that it will balance with the home-grown roughage. With this in mind, the separate grains should be selected to supply the necessary nutrients at the lowest possible cost. For this, not only the price per hundred pounds but also the relative cost of each constituent, especially protein, must be considered. For example, to determine the cost of a pound of digestible protein in a given feed divide the price of 100 pounds by the per cent of digestible protein in the feed. If this calculation is made for several feeds, the relative cost of protein in each will be apparent. Then the feeds that furnish protein at the least cost can be selected. The same can be done to determine the cost of the carbohydrates and fat, which are the heat-making or energy-producing part of the feed.

KEEPING UP SOIL FERTILITY

Growing of Green Manure Crops Must Be Practiced Where Other Fertilizer Is Unavailable.

When barnyard manure, straw or stubble, are not available for use as fertilizer, then the growing of green-manure crops must be practiced. Soil fertility must be kept up and there must be the right supply of humus. There are very few farms where enough manure is produced so that the green-manure crops are not needed. However, where all the barnyard manure is properly saved, there is less need for the green manures. If the green crops, mainly the legumes, are grown in sufficient amount for aiding in fertility, the soil can be kept in fine condition even if there is a shortage of the barnyard manures.

ALLOWANCE TO CHILD IS ROAD TO ECONOMY

Home Economics Expert Says Way Is to Teach Youth Early Proper Apportioning of an Income.

"The best and most natural way of beginning true national economy, wise spending and wise saving," says Ruth Wardell, head of the home economics department of the University of Iowa, and who last summer started a home economics department in a Cleveland (Ohio) bank, "is by giving the children an allowance. The lesson of properly apportioning an income thus is early learned."

Miss Wardell favors the allowance arrangement at a very early age, say at six or seven. It may then be very small, and out of it the budding citizen may be expected to provide only school pencils, tablets, etc. The purchase of school books provides a logical next step; a little later some personal belongings, such as shoes, may be added.

"I say shoes," explains Miss Wardell, "because children seem to take more interest in shoes than in most articles of wearing apparel, and because shoes represent a highly important item to which children frequently pay little heed."

Fixing the Allowance.

The allowance should provide a little margin to encourage careful buying and saving possibilities. It should not necessitate so much care or thought as to burden the growing youngster. It should never, under normal circumstances, be "helped out" by irregular gifts or expected to cover other than the recognized items. The allowance, with its purchasing responsibilities, should be increased gradually, steadily. By the time high school is reached the boy or girl should be buying practically all his or her own clothes.

Miss Wardell tells an interesting story of a boy who called upon her in Cleveland, telling her of his manner of apportioning the rather generous allowance made by his father. He knew to a penny what every article he wore had cost him; he was intelligent regarding relative textile and wearing values; he saved steadily, systematically, with joy.

A Chicago mother started her little daughter out, similarly, at eight years old and at sixteen the girl was a better buyer than she was. These children were well started on the road to fine and self-respecting and independent citizenship. Both will enter college with a nice little financial nest egg to await the beginning of their business or professional life.

The child's allowance, it may be added, should be for necessities mainly, with but a fair and modest margin for personal luxuries and pleasures. It should always be recognized as allowing for a regular proportion of savings, preferably invested in governmental securities. It should be carefully adjusted, rigidly adhered to on both sides of the bargain. Such respect and observance not only will teach the child good economic habits, but will abolish many too frequent annoyances for the financial head of the family.

Each child given an allowance will understand that this sum, with his support and other parental provisions, represents his fair share of the family income, and that, as a decent citizen, he must not ask nor expect to exceed it. An adequate allowance system, moreover, will obviate the evil habit of crying or pleading for special indulgences and more funds.

—THINK BEFORE YOU SPEND—

Diamonds? Why Not W. S. S.?

Diamonds to the value of $2,000,000,000—more than half the available world supply and value—are owned in the United States of America.

Pretty things, diamonds, fascinating to watch, pleasing to wear, of high commercial value. Diamond prices rise every now and again, truly, but the rate of increase cannot be precisely calculated, and the risk of owning diamonds is large—unless they're tucked away in the safety deposit vaults where no one ever sees them.

Now $2,000,000,000 invested in government securities, War Savings Stamps, for example, would mean much better times for the country. Why not, for the sweet girl graduate, the bride, wife to be honored, War Savings Stamps instead of a diamond? Bright thought! The War Savings Stamps now and the diamond five years later—out of the War Savings Stamps profits when they mature.

THRIFT SCHOOL PLAN OUTLINED BY EXPERT

Dr. Shailer Mathews Explains Scope and Purpose of Great U. S. Educational Movement for Saving.

By DR. SHAILER MATHEWS.

(Chairman of W. S. S. Educational Committee for Seventh District and Vice Director for Illinois.)

Thrift will be taught in the schools of the states constituting the Seventh federal reserve district.

The children of Iowa will help prepare the Little Lessons in Thrift which are being written by Prof. Macy Campbell of the Iowa State Teachers' college, under the general direction of an educational committee of the district. Besides the chairman the educational committee consists of W. E. Larson, department of public instruction, Wisconsin; J. V. McNally, Detroit public schools, Michigan, and Macy Campbell, Iowa State Teachers' college.

The Little Lessons in Thrift appear fortnightly on printed sheets. The lessons are prepared for the different grades in the schools. They are illustrated and interesting. They teach savings as a phase of good citizenship, give problems of arithmetic in terms of thrift stamps, chewing gum, candy and other things a child buys.

It is a new field which is thus being opened up and the war savings organization is rendering a great service to the rising generation. Nor is it all mere theory. The teaching of the principles of thrift is combined with a sort of manual training in thrift, through the sale of War Savings Stamps in schools.

Along with these Little Lessons in Thrift the educational committee furnishes the schools with pupils' thrift cards, on which the teacher keeps an account of the amount, however small, which the pupil brings to her for the purpose of buying stamps. This practice itself becomes educational, because the pupil gets introduced to simple bookkeeping and banking.

These plans have received the heartiest co-operation of the school administration in the various states and cities. The parochial and private schools also are co-operating in the use of the material and plans prepared by the committee.

The young men and women of the next generation will have a higher respect for thrift and a better understanding as to how to spend their money, for they will learn even in the primary grades that thrift is not miserliness but a way of spending money so as to make it for them.

—SAVE; HAVE A PERSONAL— —SHARE IN THE FUTURE—

BILLIONS FROM THE NICKELS

Ever Stop to Think of Vast Sums That Can Be Saved From Small Amounts?

If every person in the United States saved a nickel in one day it would mean that at night the people would be just five million dollars richer. And then suppose the people kept this up for one month? It would mean that at the end of thirty days they would have saved one hundred and fifty million dollars.

Why not keep it up for the rest of 1919? What would be the result? One billion five hundred million dollars. Sounds like a lot of work for one little nickel to do, doesn't it, yet there are scores of industries in the United States which are paying big dividends on the little nickels gathered day by day.

This immense sum if invested in War Savings Stamps would earn for the savers approximately sixty-four million dollars in 1920—the work of "old man interest," who never takes a day off and who is continuously on the job.

Keep the Money Saved.

Thrift means saving money and keeping it saved. Patriotism does not mean enthusiasm today and indifference tomorrow. Buy War Savings Stamps and hold them. No man's duty is fully done when he purchases the securities. He must hold them.

GARDEN GIVES A LIFT.

A garden gives the game a lift,
And helps us practice ways of thrift,
That give us seeds from which we grow
War Savings Stamps that earn us "dough."
So with a garden toil to save
That you may never be a slave,
But keep on adding to your wealth,
Your peace of mind and ruddy health.

LOSS OF $200,000,000 TO PEOPLE OF COUNTRY CAUSED BY FOUR ALIEN PESTS

An Alien Rodent Executed in "Guillotine" Trap.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Four alien enemies have caused the people of this country two-thirds as much loss as more than 750 native rogues. The damage by the former is estimated at $200,000,000 annually and by the latter at $300,000,000 annually.

The chief alien enemies are the house mouse and three kinds of rats. The introduced European hare is also proving injurious in some localities. The natives are the more than 750 kinds of rodents that inhabit this continent north of Mexico.

Now, all of the 750 are, or may become, depredators, though many of them are only mildly and occasionally so, as is shown by the fact that together they accomplish only one and one-half times the damage caused by the four alien rodent pests. For the aliens are in practically every house, every barn, every mill, every elevator, every storehouse, over most of the country, while the natives run largely in the fields, ranges and woods.

Native Rodent Bad, Too.

Some of our native rodents are very bad citizens—such as the prairie dog, the pocket gopher, the ground squirrel. Even that ancient rival of the weather bureau, the groundhog, sometimes causes great damage, crunching corn like a litter of shotes or mowing down alfalfa or soy beans like a herd of steers. Against all these, unremitting warfare should be waged—unremitting or at least such occasional warfare as is necessary to hold them in check.

But the case is quite different as to certain other animals usually regarded as destructive—the skunk, the weasel, the mink, the fox, and the badger. These are among the most potent natural agents, says the United States department of agriculture, in preventing an undue increase in mice, rats, ground squirrels, pocket gophers, and the like. Some of these have been hunted, of course, for their valuable pelts, but they are hunted also because they are considered the enemies of domestic animals and game. Cognizance has not been taken of the fact that many of these small native animals destroy numerous injurious rodents and are thus an asset to the country. An occasional skunk, mink or fox does commit depredations in the poultry yard, but that is merely a case of an individual gone wrong, and punitive measures should be directed against the individual and not against the species. They are also in many places very destructive to game and are then destroyed as vermin.

Natural Enemies That Help.

The natural enemies of the rodents may do a great deal toward protecting the farmer, but they cannot always, of course, do enough. The skunks, minks, weasels and foxes will get a good many of the rats and mice in the fields and even around the barn, but they cannot be expected to make a clean-up even there and, of course, they can accomplish nothing against rats and mice in the house, mill or store. There artificial means have to be employed

Guillotine Trap Is Best.

The United States department of agriculture, through the bureau of biological survey, has devoted a great deal of study to methods of rodent control. Poison has been found the most potent weapon against such rodents as live in the open, but as a rule it cannot be employed in houses where people live or work. In such places the trap is the safest and most certain method of eradication and the "guillotine" type of trap is recommended as the best. It may be set almost anywhere—behind furniture, behind boards, against the wall or at the entrance of rat holes. Rolled oats is recommended as usually the best bait, though if conditions are such that the rodents are likely to have a surfeit of grain, the best bait may sometimes be meat, fish, or cheese, or even pastry.

The bureau of biological survey of the department of agriculture co-operates with the public in carrying out systematic campaigns against animal pests, including rodents, and invites correspondence on the subject.

APPEARANCE COUNTS IN SELLING PRODUCE

Anything but High-Grade Material Should Be Avoided.

It Should Be Uniform in Size, Color and Quality and Packed So That Contents and Container Will Carry Well.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It has been shown that the consumer cannot expect to receive produce by parcel post at a price much lower than the local retail price. The producer's appeal to customers, therefore, is largely through the quality and appearance of his produce. The consumer has come to expect a uniform product and will not be satisfied with a shipment of miscellaneous ungraded produce. As the sending of anything but high-grade material will result in failure to retain trade, and as many persons have discontinued ordering produce by parcel post because they received one shipment that was unsatisfactory in quality, it is better for a producer to reject an order than to send such goods. The produce should be uniform in size, color, and quality, and should be packed so that the contents and container will carry properly and arrive in good condition.

Quality is very important, but probably more produce is judged by appearance than by quality. Some farmers are prone to think of the likes and dislikes of the purchaser as whims and fancies, whereas, as a business principle, he should endeavor to cater to the desires of his customers. It is known that white eggs sell better in New York, while brown eggs bring a premium in Boston. The average farmer cares little whether eggs are white or brown, but this indifference should not govern what he sends to customers.

PREPARE LAND FOR GARDENS

As Soon as Conditions Will Permit Soil Should Be Thoroughly Plowed for Seed Bed.

As soon as soil conditions will permit, the land for the garden should be thoroughly plowed and subsoiled to a depth of 12 inches, and harrowed until a perfect seed bed is formed.

GET RID OF RODENTS!

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The annual losses from rodent pests in the United States have been estimated at fully $500,000,000.

About two-fifths of this damage is inflicted by house rats and mice, both introduced from the old world, and the remainder by native species.

This enormous waste of resources may be greatly reduced through systematic and organized campaigns against the injurious species.

The bounty system effects no permanent relief and is far more costly than the use of poisons and traps.

The United States department of agriculture has developed and perfected practical methods of extermination which have been successfully applied over wide territory.

The bureau of biological survey of the department co-operates with the public in organizing and carrying out systematic campaigns against animal pests and invites correspondence on the subject.

Protection of their natural enemies is urged as an important aid in controlling rodent pests.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Sweetening the soil with lime is very important to the onion crop.

* * *

Fairly deep plowing opens up the soil so rain can soak in more readily.

Proper drainage is the basis of any rational method of soil improvement.

* * *

A much neglected source of lime, potash, and phosphoric acid is wood ashes.

* * *

Weeds use up a lot of moisture and the weeds grow all the time; they must be kept out.

* * *

The more humus (decayed plant matter) there is in a soil, the more water it will hold.

STATE NEWS

Washington, D. C.—Casual company No. 1481, made up of 112 privates and two officers, all from Indiana, is on the Santo Olivia, which sailed from Brest, March 16, and is due in New York March 28.

She has also transferred 107 acres to the Methodist hospital and Deaconess' home of the state of Indiana for the building of a contemplated nurses' home for that institution.

Indianapolis. — The Henry Kahn property, Meridian street and Fall Creek boulevard, became the governor's mansion when the master's bill making a gift of the property to the state from the city of Indianapolis was filed with the secretary of state. This act, with several others filed, were permitted to become effective without the signature of the governor.

Greensburg.—Decatur county farm land will be appraised at $100 an acre under the new tax law, County Assessor Bayless has announced. The announcement follows a meeting of the assessor and deputies, at which tax experts fixed the valuation. In Rush and Shelby counties land will be appraised at approximately $125 an acre, it is said, while in Jennings the figure will be considerably lower.

Muncie.—With the present term of the Delaware circuit court near adjournment, Judge W. A. Thompson called the grand jury in session to probe two murder cases, that of Fred M. Ogle, who shot and killed Mrs. Mary E. Gott, and Mrs. Stella Hughes, colored, who murdered Charles Ogeese, also colored, a former policeman. Both murders occurred in February, since which time the defendants have been in custody. Neither denies guilt.

Indianapolis.—Ele Stansbury, attorney general, has submitted to Gilbert H. Hendren, chief examiner for the state board of accountants, an opinion in which he rules that if a township trustee himself takes the sexennial enumeration of voters the trustee shall receive no extra compensation for the work, but that if the trustee employs assistants the assistants shall be paid by the county. The county is to stand the expenses of blanks and other materials.

Marion.—Grant county is a candidate for the title of foremost hog-raising county in the state. On the heels of an announcement here that a record hog, weight 980 pounds, had been purchased by a local packing company, comes word from LaFontaine that Joseph Davis, a stock raiser, has a hog that weighs 1,170 pounds. Davis says that within a few weeks the hog will break the world's record weight of 1,240 pounds. The hog is of the big-type Poland China breed. It has been gaining weight at a rate of twenty pounds weekly for the last three weeks, Davis says.

Indianapolis.—Andrew J. Smith, secretary of the Indiana Bankers' association, issued a statement to Indiana bankers concerning the status of municipal, state and gravel road bonds under the recently enacted state tax law. He has received many inquiries from Indiana bankers as to whether state, municipal and gravel road bonds are free from taxation under the new law. Mr. Smith's statement, based on inquiry he made of the state tax commission, said that state and municipal bonds are not subject to taxation under this law. Gravel road bonds that bear 4½ per cent interest or less are also free from taxation.

Indianapolis—Resolutions were presented at the meeting the past week of the state-wide live stock rally, placing the meeting on record as being opposed to further governmental price-fixing, with special reference to the proposed fixing of a maximum price on hogs. The meetings were the first state live stock rally days ever held in America and about 3,000 stockmen of Indiana and other states were in attendance. Reconstruction problems, as they relate to the live stock industry, and methods of eliminating costs of production, diseases of live stock, obtaining greater publicity for live stock products, closer co-operation in the industry and similar subjects were discussed.

Warsaw.—Residents of Kosciusko county are preparing for a drive to raise approximately $50,000 with which to buy the buildings and property formerly used by Wigonn college. This property, which is at Winona lake, will be turned over to the state for use of a branch normal, which is to be opened by the Indiana State Normal school, which is at Terre Haute. The legislature voted $15,000 a year for support of the Winona school.

Evansville—Members of the local council of the United Commercial Travelers of America are making plans for the Indiana state convention of the order which will be held here three days during the third week in May. It is expected the convention will bring traveling men from all parts of the state.

Gary—Taxable property in Lake county will amount to $500,000,000 under the terms of the new tax law passed at the recent session of the Indiana legislature, it is estimated by officials in touch with the situation. Last year the property listed for taxation was valued at slightly more than $99,000,000.

Jeffersonville—The number of employees at the United States quartermaster's depot will soon reach 5,000, more than 4,500 being on the pay roll at present. Steel hangar buildings are now being built on a tract of ninety acres of land a half a mile east of the main buildings to house automobiles, motor trucks and probably airplanes.

Lebanon—The Boone county fair ground, a tract of forty acres north of Lebanon, was sold at public auction for $19,150. The Boone County Memorial Park association was the successful bidder. The association will turn the grounds over to the city of Lebanon to be kept as a permanent memorial park in honor of Boone county's soldiers in all wars.

South Bend—Seven cases of sleeping sickness in this city and one in Walkerton have been reported to medical authorities. The first case was discovered in Epworth hospital here, where the patient is awakened with difficulty and is slowly sinking into a state of coma. Physicians say there probably will not be many cases of the malady, which is following influenza in most of the instances noted.

Indianapolis—All recommendations of Frank J. Hayes, president of the United Mine Workers of America—a six-hour day, a five-day week, increased wages and nationalization of the mines—were upheld in the report of the subcommittee of the general policies committee of the organization. It was appointed to outline the course to be pursued by the miners at their next joint conference with the operators.

John Stalnbrook has sold his entire stock reserved for seed, and is filling orders with corn bought from other corn winners in the county. The commission and telephone men likely will appoint a joint committee and a system of accounting for the companies may be based on the results of the investigation. The commission and telephone men will meet again April 2 further to discuss the relation of the commission to the utilities.

FOR BETTER ROADS

GREAT ROAD BUILDING YEAR

Thousands of Miles of Improvement Arranged and More Will Surely Follow.

From the passage of the federal aid road act to December 15, 1918, 755 projects were approved by the secretary of agriculture. These projects involve the improvement of 7,867 miles of public roads at a total estimated cost of $57,632,000, of which the federal government has been requested to contribute $21,602,000. There have been actually completed to date twelve projects, involving a total of fifty-one miles of road, costing approximately $617,548, and on which federal aid in the amount of $280,660.19 was paid.

Altogether there are more than 7,500 miles of road, for which most of the steps preliminary to construction have been taken so far as the bureau of public roads is concerned. Numerous other projects not yet reported to the department have been completed or are under construction, so that the sum total of the road work now in progress under federal aid is greater than appears in this summary.

From Florida to Maine, through the North to the Pacific coast and down to Mexico road building work is going on. Every state has accepted its contribution from the government, and while no organized effort has been made along those lines to the present time, the states are working gradually to the system of national highways.

Coupled with plans already outlined for expenditures on the roads is the legislative program now before congress, which provides for $500,000,000 to be expended over a period of seven years by federal aid. It is estimated that in the event of the passage of this bill, which would make available immediately $75,000,000 for use in federal aid, it would be possible for the government and the states to build 34,000 miles of highways this year if labor could be obtained.

VALUE OF POULTRY MANURE

Increased Supply of Fresh Vegetables May Be Obtained By Applying to Garden Soil.

The droppings from fowls, if carefully saved and applied to the garden soil, will increase the supply of fresh vegetables. Poultry manure is rich in nitrogen and is well worth the effort it requires to save and apply. The droppings from an average farm flock will amount to considerable fertility during the year.

AUTO TAXES TO GO TO ROADS

Committee Appointed in Alabama to Request License Fees Be Applied to Highways.

The Birmingham (Ala.) Automobile club has appointed a legislative committee which is to appear before the state legislature with the request that all automobile license fees and taxes be applied on the cost of improved roads in the state. The funds thus diverted would amount to $1,500,000 annually.

Slow in Road Building.

With all her development, America has always been slow in the matter of road building.

Phosphorus Needed.

It is now generally agreed by experiment station professors and practical farmers in our eastern states that the greatest fertiliser needed by our soils is phosphorus, and that the best method of supplying it is in the form of acid phosphate.

Great Need of Farmer.

If there is any one thing that the farmer needs more than another, it is good highways. Every other business is on the line of progress, so why not the road business?

COMB SAGE TEA IN HAIR TO DARKEN IT

It's Grandmother's Recipe to keep her Locks Dark, Glossy, Beautiful.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. —Adv.

PISO'S

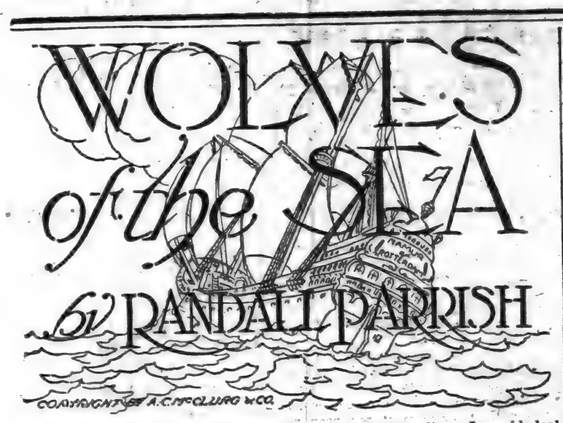
L 0104



A Battle to Death in Darkness of Night.

Synopsis — Geoffry Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for participation in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanches, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London. Carlyle meets Dorothy, who informs him her uncle has bought his services. Sanchez shows himself an enemy Carlyle. The Fairfax party, now on its own sloop in the Chesapeake bay, encounters a mysterious bark, the Namur of Rotterdam.

CHAPTER VII.

The Lieutenant Unmasked.

Where the craft could be bound; for what secret purpose it was afloat; who were aboard, were but so many unanswerable questions arising in my mind. Where could it have come from, unless from that strange Dutch bark? If it really came from the Namur of Rotterdam had it been sent in answer to some signal by Sanches? I could think of nothing else. I determined to assure myself as to the identity of these strangers. If they had actually landed it would require only a few moments to ascertain the truth. The distance proved somewhat greater than anticipated, because of the deep curve in the shore and I had nearly reached the conclusion that the boat must have rounded the point and gone on when suddenly I was brought to a halt by a voice speaking in Spanish—one of those harsh croaking voices never to be reduced to a whisper.

"Not the spot Manuel? Of course it is; do you not suppose I know? This is the place and now there is nothing to do but wait. The senor—he will be here presently."

"Ay, unless you misread the signal," a somewhat more discreet but piping voice replied doubtfully. "I saw nothing of all you tell about, Estada."

The two men went on to discuss plans evidently communicated to Estada by Sanches from England. I was about to creep nearer, when a newcomer moved past me scarcely a yard distant, along the narrow strip of sand. Directly opposite my covert he paused.

"Estada." He spoke the name cautiously.

"Ay, captain," and another figure emerged noiselessly from the gloom. "We await you."

"Good. I rather questioned if you caught my signal. I was watched and obliged to exercise care. How many have you here?"

"Four, senor, with Manuel Estevan."

"Quite sufficient. How is it here? Are there suspicions?"

"None, senor. We have cruised outside most of the time. There is no warships in these waters. You said you were being watched on the sloop. Are you known?"

"A dog of a servant who came over with us—one of Monmouth's brood. The fellow watches me like a hawk. We had some words aboard and there is hate between us."

"May I ask your plans, senor?"

"Yes, I am here to explain. This planter, Fairfax, has returned from England with a large sum. It is in gold and notes. It represents the proceeds of the tobacco crop of himself and a number of his neighbors. Without doubt it will be upward of fifty thousand pounds. This still remains in his possession, but a part will be dispersed tomorrow; so if we hope to gain the whole we must do so now. Everything is ready, and there is not the slightest suspicion of danger—not even a guard set over the treasure."

"Then it is at the house?"

"In an iron-bound chest, in the room assigned to Fairfax for the night. Only two servants sleep in the main house, the cook and a maid, both women. Fairfax is vigorous and will put up a fight if he has any chance. He must be taken care of before he does have any. Travers is an old man, to be knocked out with a blow. All we have to fear are those fellows on the sloop, and they will have to be attended to quietly without any alarm reaching the house. I am going to leave that job to you—it's not your first."

"The old sea orders, captain?"

"Ay, that will be quicker and surer." The voice hardened to sudden ferocity. "But, mark you, with one exception—the Englishman is not to be killed, if he can be taken alive. I would deal with him."

"Then after that," Sanchez went on deliberately, as though murder was of small account, "you will follow me up the bluff. Who are the others with you?"

"Carl Anderson, Pedro Mendez and Cochose."

"Well chosen; Mendez is the least valuable, and we will leave him with the prisoner at the boat. The big negro, Cochose, together with Manuel, can attend to Travers and the two negresses—they sleep below. That will leave you and the Swede to get the chest. No firearms if they can be avoided. I have been over the house and drawn a diagram. You can look it over in the cabin of the sloop. The stairs lead up from the front hall. I will go with you to the door of Fairfax's room."

"And you, senor—the girl?"

"What know you of any girl?"

"That there was one on the deck of the sloop—an English beauty. It was when you turned to greet her that you gave me the signal. I merely thought that perhaps—"

"Then stop thinking," burst forth Sanchez enraged. "Thinking has nothing to do with your work. If there is a girl I attend to her. Let that suffice. Dios! am I chief here, or are you? You have my orders; now obey them and hold your tongue. Bring the men up here."

The little band of men emerged from the concealment of the fog noiselessly. I could distinguish no faces, scarcely indeed the outlines of their separate forms in the gloom, but one was an unusually big fellow—Cochose.

"Lads," he said incisively, a sharper note of leadership in the tone, "it has been a bit quiet for you lately; but now I am back again, and we'll try our luck at sea once more."

There was a savage growl of response, a sudden leaning forward of dark figures.

"We'll begin on a job tonight. There are fifty thousand pounds for us in that house yonder, and I waive my share. Estada will explain to you the work I want done. By daylight we shall be on blue water, with our course set for Porto Grande. How is it, bullies, do you sniff at the salt sea?"

"Ay, ay, captain."

"And see the pretty girls waiting—and hear the chink of gold?"

"Ay, senor."

"Then do not fail me tonight—and remember it is to be the knife. Estada, I have forgotten one thing—scuttle the sloop before joining me. 'Tis better to make all safe; and now, strong arms, and good luck. Go to your task, and if one fails me it will mean the lash at the mast-butt."

They moved off one by one, Estada leading, along the narrow strip of sand, five of them, on their mission of murder. The leader remained alone, his back toward where I crouched, his eyes following their vanishing figures until the night had swallowed them.

CHAPTER VIII.

A Victory and a Defeat.

I arose silently to my feet, fully aware that all hope of thwarting this villainy lay in immediate action. Sanches had turned slightly and stood with his face toward the bay. I ventured a cautious step forward and stood on the open sand, scarcely a yard to his rear. Some vague sense of my presence must have influenced the man, for he swung suddenly about, uttering a stifled cry of startled surprise, as we met face to face. For an instant we were locked so closely within each other's desperate grip, his head bent beneath my arm, with my fingers clutching at his throat to block any call for help, that he possessed no knowledge of his assailant's identity. But the man was like a tiger. The surprise of attack was to my advantage, yet almost before I realized what was being done he had rallied, broken my first hold, and his eyes were glaring straight into mine. Then he knew me, his free hand instantly grasping at his knife. Even as he jerked it forth I crushed his wrist within my fingers, forcing his forearm back. There was no outcry, no noise, except that of our heavy breathing and trampling feet. Personal hatred had ascendency in both our hearts—I doubt if he ever thought of aught else but the desire to kill me there with his own hands. Only once did he even utter a word, hissing out the sentence as though it were a poison:

"To hell with you, you sneaking English cur!"

What followed has to me no clearness, no consistency. Never have I fought with deeper realization that I needed every ounce of strength and every trick of wit and skill. Now I knew the fellow possessed greater knowledge of the game than I and a quicker movement; I excelled in weight of body and coolness of brain. Twice he pricked me deep enough to draw blood, before I succeeded in twisting backward the arm with which he held the blade. He met the game too late, falling half back upon one knee, hoping thus to foil my purpose. There was the sharp crack of a bone, as his useless fingers let the knife drop, a snarled curse of pain, and then with the rage of a mad dog, Sanchez struck his teeth deep into my cheek. With a thrill of exultation I gripped the knife, driving instantly the keen blade to its hilt into the man's side. He made no cry, no struggle—the set teeth unlocked, and he fell limply back on the sand, his head lapped by the waves.

The fellow lay motionless, his face upturned to the sky, but invisible except in dim outline. I rested my ear over his heart, detecting no murmur of response; touched the veins of his wrist, but found there no answering throb of life.

With the death-dealing knife still gripped in my hand I raced forward along the narrow strip of sand, reckless of what I might encounter. I ran on until I reached the sloop. Through the gloom concealing the deck I could perceive only dim figures, a riot of men, battling furiously hand to hand, yet out of the ruck loomed through the darkness in larger outlines than the others—Cochose, the negro. I leaped at the fellow and struck with the keen knife, missing the heart but plunging the blade deep into the flesh of the shoulder. The next instant I was in a bear's grip, the very breath crushed out of me, yet, by some chance, my one arm remained free, and I drove the sharp steel into him twice before he forced the weapon from my fingers. I thrust an elbow beneath the brute's chin, and thus forced his head back until the neck cracked.

He was too strong, too immense of stature. Apparently unweakened by his wounds, the giant negro, thoroughly aroused, exerted his mighty muscles, and, despite my utmost effort at resistance, thrust me back against the stern rail, where the weight of his body pinned me helplessly. With a roar of rage he drove his huge fist into my face, but happily was too close to give much force to the blow. My own hands, gripping the neckband of his coarse shirt, twisted it tight about the great throat until, in desperation, panting for breath, the huge brute actually lifted me in his arms and hurled me backward headlong over the rail. I struck something as I fell, yet rebounding from this splashed into the deep water and went down so nearly unconscious as to make not even the slightest struggle. And yet I came up once more to the surface, arising by sheer chance directly beneath the small dory—which my body must have struck as I fell—towing by a painter astern of the sloop, and fortunately retained sense enough to cling desperately to this first thing my hands touched, and thus remained concealed.

Made No Cry, No Struggle.

The dory caught in some current, floated at the very extremity of its slender towline, and in consequence the sloop appeared little more than a mere smudge, when my eyes endeavored to discover its outlines. Evidently the bloody work had been completed, for now all was silent on board. Then came the voice of Estada in a gruff inquiry:

"So you are hiding here, Cochose? What are you looking for in the sea?"

"What? Why that d——d Englishman. Mon Dieu! He fought me like a mad rat."

"The Englishman, you say? He was here then? It was he you battled with? What became of the fellow?"

"He went down there, senor. The dog stabbed me three times. It was either he or I to go."

"You mean you threw him over board?"

"Ay, with his ribs crushed in, and not a breath left in his d——d body. He's never come up even—I've watched and there has not been so much as a ripple where he sank."

Too late to save Dorothy from the hands of Sanches' villainous crew, Carlyle sees but one desperate chance of going to her aid. Shall he take it?

FEW NEW FABRICS

No Distinct Changes in Materials for Spring Wear.

Gabardine, Tricot, Serges, Tricotine, Tweed, Homespun and Broadcloth and Variety of Silks.

As social life returns to its normal course more and more thought is given to dress. It is too early in the season for any very radical change in fashions to be established, but it is most interesting to watch the development of the individual ideas of the designers.

There will be no distinct change in materials, since as yet very few new fabrics have been made. A little of everything is seen, gabardine, tricot, serges, tricotine, tweed, homespun and broadcloth. Among the silks one notes a great variety and also fabrics of American make that are composed of silk and wool with a predominance of silk. Many new colors will make their appearance this spring, and there will be a wider variety to choose from than in recent seasons.

The new silhouette is a matter that is uppermost in the minds of the designers at the moment. It is predicted by a few of those in a position to note the trend of the times that the mode will gradually emerge from the extreme simplicity of the last few seasons and once again the more complicated silhouette will be in evidence.

The advance models, however, give no indication of this change. A majority of the tailored suits of summery aspect are built upon severely plain lines, slim and straight as those of this winter. The coat, for instance, may be built without the slightest curve at the waist line and the front left open to show a long sweater-like waistcoat which has no visible fastening. The skirt is also straight and slim, and while there is a slit at the back to give its wearer more comfort in walking the material crosses over so that the slit is not visible.

Very pretty simple one-piece frocks of silk, tricotine or wool in light weight and in light colors or all white are noted.

A smart little model was fashioned from a lovely, soft creamy white gabardine with large collar and cuffs of white silk. The frock was caught in loosely at the waistline by a white silk cord which tied at the back and extended half the skirt length, the ends being finished with tassels. The back of the skirt was made with four deep folds slightly gathered in flounce effect.

There are numerous cape models of light weight woolen shown for the benefit of the southern trade. They are made in various styles and of various materials.

INDIAN DESIGNS IN RIBBON

Colors Are Delicate and Suggest a Beautiful Panama Hat; Deeper Tones for Outing Hats.

Smart ribbons have been brought out in Indian designs for outing hats for women. While the designs are Indian, the colors are delicate and suggest a beautiful Panama hat. In the deeper tones for outing hats there are ribbons of Roman effect. The polka dot is good for hat trimming, and in larger sizes, in the wider ribbons, each dot as big as an apple.

There are beautiful things in two-tone ribbons, one side one color and one the other. Some of these are all in the pastel shades and others in deeper tones, contrasting colors brought together. Two colors are also used in beautiful quality grosgrain ribbons, these having the body and edge different with rich contrasts. Handsome broad metallic ribbons are rich and heavy, made to wholesale at $50 a bolt of ten yards.

A ribbon, not new this year, but deep and rich in color and design, the latter Egyptian, is the Cleopatra, and a ribbon suggesting cubist art in color and design as well as the war is aviation.

Ribbons in delicate colors and soft brocades in all widths are for the trousseau.

STRICTLY TAILORED SUIT

Indications are that this style of strictly tailored suit of mode shade will be decidedly popular among the careful dressers this spring.

LATE FASHION FROM PARIS

This is a straw hat entirely covered with fimbriated satin ribbon, with black velvet ribbon around the crown, and is regarded as an exquisite creation.

APRON IS A BECOMING AFFAIR

Trickay Thing of Pink Striped Gingham Donned by Many of the Happy Little Brides.

An apron is really a pretty and a charming thing when its artistic possibilities are considered, and it may be made a becoming affair. Usually it is the little bride who affects aprons that have charm; her morning aprons are tricksy affairs of pink striped gingham, with a smart flare in the skirt part and a coquettish little bib above the waist line—and very crisp strings that tie in a big bow behind. An elderly housekeeper would feel a bit foolish in such an apron—even though when she goes to a matinee she wears a dainty blouse quite as youthful as any the little bride would select.

The house apron of the average good housekeeper is made of checked gingham with a narrow belt-band that pins at the back. This unbeautiful but extremely practical affair is donned when household labors demand protection of the gown—but you never catch the housekeeper at the front door in it, as sometimes you catch the little bride in her bewilderingly becoming pink print apron. There seems to be no good reason why every house apron should not have the qualities of grace and becomingness. Why wear checked brown gingham if pale blue chambray matches one's eyes; or blue checked gingham if something in pink print will set off one's complexion? And why a straight, shapeless apron when a really smart one with circular shaped skirt with a bib with extensions that button at the back of the neck can be obtained at modest price or manufactured in an hour or two in the home sewing room?

RUFFLES ARE MUCH IN USE

Trimming Used to Edge Girdles, Collars, Sash Ends, to Trim Tunics and Other Ways.

The extensive use of fine plaited ruffles, by the way, is an interesting feature of the new season. This trimming is from one-half inch wide to three inches and is used to edge girdles, fichu collars, sash ends and is applied in endless ways to trim apron tunics and overskirts.

An effective and extremely new trimming is colored organdy, which is much used on silks. A large figured foulard in navy blue and white has a soft shawl collar of dark blue organdy, and the flowing cuffs and sash are of it. Navy blue organdy is also attractively applied on oyster white crepe de chine in zigzag inch wide rows at the hips, and at the bottom of the skirt and is used for the vestee.

Chemisettes in white batiste, tucked and lace trimmed, are strongly in evidence on taffeta, satin and faille silk frocks. For the most part the chemisette is collarless and is fitted into the low round or oval neck of the frock. Sometimes the frock is slashed several inches in front where the chemisette shows through. Embroidered georgette and crepe de chine are also used for the chemisette.

SOME FASHION NOTES.

The new vest collars are made of pique.

Tailor-made suits are almost classically plain.

Iridescent embroidered tulle is popular for evening robes.

The spring hats display brims wide at the sides.

The best waists have their collar idea repeated in their cuffs.

'Tis said the new skirts will hang six inches from the ground.

For sport wear are the Buster Brown waists developed in voile.

Long tight sleeves are usually seen on the simpler woolen frocks.

TELLS OF WOMAN'S WORK

Says Tasks That Were Formerly Hardships Are Now Pleasures; Change Due to Pepgen.

Miss Vera Baxter, talented musician, 1526 Liberty street, Terre Haute, Ind., says: "Every person who is nervous, has stomach trouble or is run down should take Pepgen because it is a splendid tonic. For months I suffered with nervous dyspepsia. I was afraid to eat more than enough to keep me alive. If I ate heartily I was sure to have awful pains. Pepgen restored my stomach to normal condition and strengthened my entire nervous system. I am able to eat whatever I want and I do not feel bloated afterward. Tasks that were formerly hardships are now pleasures. Thousands of people here in Terre Haute are taking Pepgen and our newspapers give the names of many of our most prominent citizens who indorse it for stomach, kidney, liver and nervous ills."

Miss Vera Baxter.

Pepgen may be obtained at any leading drug store.—Adv.

"Yes, and most of the crockery."

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Catarrhal Deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. Many cases of Deafness are caused by Catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the Mucous Surfaces.

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE.

THAT "LAST STRAW" AGAIN

This Time It Meant Real Tragedy in the Lives of Two Young and Loving Mortals.

"It's the last straw!" she exclaimed bitterly.

She tapped on the floor with her right toe, always, with her, a sign of repressed passion.

"The last straw!" she repeated.

He shuffled his feet in embarrassment.

"I'm going!" she cried. "I would not stay here another second, even for a moment."

And she swept out, and there was nothing left for him to do but follow.

"I didn't know it was the last straw, or I wouldn't have taken it," he apologized miserably.

And she, who had never sipped a lemonade without a straw in her life, and never intended to, sniffed scornfully, without replying, and refrained from inviting him in when they reached her house.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Pauiding, Pauiding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

"IF" OR "SUPPOSING"

By GEORGE ADE.

On October 1, 1918, you, being a wise man and having read with care the opinions of military experts, knew:

1. That the great war was going to last until far into the summer of 1919.

2. That the casualties among the American soldiers would be increasingly heavy up to the final moment of fighting.

3. That, as a result of the growing magnitude of the world struggle, the government of the United States would call upon us for at least three huge bond subscriptions during 1919.

If you believed otherwise you were in the minority, for the cabinets of all the nations united against Germany, and the bankers, and the shipbuilders,

"Can You Be Patriotic When the Band's Not Playing?"—George Ade.

and the masters of food supplies thought they knew that Germany would stand out for many months.

Now then, to suppose a case. If some one had come to you on October 1, with a proposition to end the war within six weeks by a complete and overwhelming victory on condition that you would subscribe liberally for Victory bonds in the spring of 1919, you would have replied as follows:

"Say, end the war this fall and stop the killing and maiming of our boys, and put the kaiser out of business and compel Germany to accept our terms and let the American soldiers begin to head for home, and I'll pledge my last dollar for the loan that is needed to clean up expenses."

That's how you felt on October 1, 1918, and now that all the miracles have come to pass, are you going to be grateful or forgetful?

You are now asked to help finance (by merely lending on favorable terms and not giving) the final and gigantic expenditures which brought victory months ahead of the schedule.

If we had lost the war, what would you be paying this spring and to whom? How's your memory? Did you feel certain, just a year ago today, that Germany could be prevented from dictating terms to the whole world?

How about a loyal parent who refuses to pay a doctor bill because the child gets well instead of dying?

When you tackle a big job do you stick to the finish, or do you go fishing and permit some more dependable man to come in and put on the roof and chimney?

Do you experience symptoms of morality only when the doctor is seated at the bedside?

When you start to go somewhere, do you travel four-fifths of the way and then flop by the wayside?

Can you be patriotic when the band is not playing?

We are settling up a big job, so don't queer your war record at the eleventh hour by being a quitter.

—HELP "FINISH THE JOB."—

UNCLE SAM PAYING HIS DEBTS

Government's Credit Standing High, Because of Rapidity of Payment of His Obligations—Now a Creditor Nation.

If you were asked to lend money to a private citizen you would ask: "What are this man's prospects? Is his business showing a satisfactory growth? Is he paying off his debts and piling up a surplus?"

When you are asked to lend your money to Uncle Sam you can safely ask the same questions. The American government soon will ask for another great loan. Therefore, now is the time to satisfy yourself that Uncle Sam will be an A-1 debtor.

The first thing that will impress you, when you come to investigate the old gentleman's credit standing, is the rapidity with which he has been paying off his debts and becoming himself a creditor. In 1914, when the war broke out, the nation owed four billion dollars ($4,000,000,000) abroad and had to pay interest on that amount every year.

Now all but about one-fourth of this big debt has been paid off, and the government of the United States has lent abroad a total of ten billion dollars ($10,000,000,000). Instead of paying interest to Europe today, Uncle Sam is now in a position to ask and receive from Europe a total of at least five hundred million dollars ($500,000,000) a year in interest. That sum from across the water each year will pay more than half the interest the government will owe to its people on all the Liberty bond issues, including the fifth.

Uncle Sam certainly can show a good set of books. His credit is A-1 with every credit agency in the country.

DID SMILE ON OCCASIONS

Indian Could Relax, but Only When He Felt He Had Earned the Right, as It Were.

Here is a story told at a dinner party by a Red Cross official who has just returned from France.

The grandson of Sitting Bull, the famous Indian chief, was an interesting convalescent in Base Hospital No. 46. He had enlisted in the early days of the war, had gone over the top and worked havoc among the Germans before he was wounded.

Nurses and doctors caring for him tried in vain to get more than a grunt out of him in response to questions, while the other men in the ward called him "Gloomy Gus," because he never cracked a smile.

The Red Cross representative in the hospital becoming interested, tried his hand at "cheering up" the Indian. Gifts of cigarettes and chocolate were received, but without a change of expression.

"Don't you ever smile?" he demanded of the Indian one day, and for the first time Sitting Bull's grandson grinned.

"Sure," he replied. "When I kill a Boche!"

His 785 Suits.

Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart of Harvard said in Boston the other day:

"The kaiser was always unbalanced. Look at the way he was continually rigging himself out in different uniforms and costumes. Why, the man actually had 784 suits."

Professor Hart smiled.

"Exclusive," he added, "of his going-away suit."

"So this private is the breadwinner of the family?"

"Sure; he's their doughboy."

More or Less Good Reason Why Listener Considered It Great Oratorical Effort.

They are telling a good joke on Will Upshaw. He was up the other day, and was the interesting center of several groups of members who had heard of the "Prohibition Cyclone" of Georgia.

While talking in the lobby to one of these groups of forthcoming associates, Congressman Garrett of Houston, Tex., passed, after salutations.

"Did you ever hear Garrett speak?" asked Upshaw of the members of his group.

"Yes," they all chimed in.

"The most masterly address, the most beautiful, soul-stirring address I ever heard in all my life of association with great orators, fell from the lips of that great Texan and statesman one night at Dallas," said Upshaw.

"On what subject was Garrett speaking?" queried one of the party, rather interested.

"He was introducing me," replied Upshaw solemnly.—Atlanta Constitution.

Not Us.

An old man, rich in this world's goods, who had accumulated ninety-six years of age to his credit, went to a fortune-teller to see what the future held for him.

"Sir," said the soothsayer, as she grasped his palm and looked into its wrinkled mysteries, "I predict for you a long life." Then she added as he in his exuberance of joy handed her a yellowback of large denomination. "With plenty of money." Now who would gainsay that each had received the worth of the old man's money?

PLENITUDE OF EGGS IS AS ESSENTIAL IN EFFICIENCY AS ARE SHAPELY BODIES

Two Aristocrats of Show Ring, but Also Members of Exceptionally Good Layers.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Beauty and utility in happy combination, as depicted by the most profitable farm fowls, are attributes which merit wider imitation among poultry keepers. Symmetry of form, uniformity of characteristics and trueness of type, rather than superficial, skin-deep beauty, are desired in producing profitable poultry, together with the ability to maintain a liberal and persistent production of eggs.

Hen husbandry has suffered because of factional fracases between specialized fanciers and the utility producers who aspire chiefly for eggs, according to a specialist of the United States department of agriculture. Fanciers have bred for show-ring attributes with comparative disregard for proficiency in egg making, while utility breeders have gone after egg flow. However, just as the Holstein cow which wins the blue ribbon at the fair is judged not only on her form, conformation, quality, and type, but also on the quality and quantity of her milk yield, so are poultry being judged on their production and sightliness in correspondence with breeding characters. Birds of superior vigor and vitality are necessary, as these qualities are the basis of both successful egg yield and premier exhibition attributes.

May Go Hand in Hand.

Utility and show-ring poultrymen often are at outs over nothing. There is nothing in the standard requirements directly opposed to utility, and vice versa. Ambition of certain breeders to intensify and develop special qualities in their fowls has resulted, however, in a loss of constitutional vigor, and, consequently, egg-producing ability. Breeders who handle fancy fowls whose standard requirements demand extreme superficial characters, such as excessive development of comb, face or crest, satisfy such conditions usually at the expense of utility qualities.

Unfortunately the opinion prevails among many breeders of utility poultry, who never have attempted to breed for exhibition quality, that because fowls satisfy the standard requirements they must, of necessity, be poor producers. This is an erroneous idea. The ambition of the leading show men is not only to exhibit fowl of the best breeding type, but also birds which emphasize profitable egg production. More and more each year poultry fanciers appreciate that the birds which are to be consistent winners must possess not only shapely form but also profitable and persistent egg-laying ability.

The number of record-breaking fowl in any flock as a rule is small, both from an exhibition standpoint as well as from that of production. It is always more difficult to breed for a high development of a combination of characters than it is to obtain intensification of a single character. Any experienced breeder appreciates that if he concentrates for the production of meat combs, and disregards other points, he will progress in the production of fine heads. But in so doing he will have neglected the other qualities which go to make up exhibition birds, and in the long run he will not accomplish as much as if he improved the heads simultaneously with other poultry characters.

Opportunity for Breeders.

It is a difficult task to breed for a combination of standard quality and utility values, but this can and is being done at a profit. In fact, the time has arrived when every ambitious breeder should give careful thought to the opportunity for success along these lines. The breeder who is successful in producing a strain of birds capable of good production has a promising market among the so-called breeders of utility fowls. If he is successful in combining standard quality with this production, so that he can produce birds capable of winning in the poultry exhibitions of the country, he has a profitable outlet in the sale of breeding stock to those who are interested in exhibitions of that kind. The man who breeds only for standard quality, or a person who produces fowl only for utility value has a restricted market outlet for his stock which will prove much less profitable.

The fact should not be overlooked that the man who breeds for standard requirements and therefore for beauty in his fowl has something which the casual observer can see and appreciate, and develops in his birds a quality of advertising value in the sale of breeding stock. On the other hand, if he has only egg production to commend his stock, he must tell the purchaser about it, for there is little or nothing which the prospective buyer can see in the birds themselves that indicates whether or not the strain is a good producing one.

POINTS ON HOUSING POULTRY IN WINTER

Aim to Prevent Drafts Which May Cause Colds in Flock.

Cloth Used for Curtains in Front Should Be Thin Enough to Permit a Slow Circulation of Air—Hens Can Stand Cold.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The back and sides of the poultry house should be absolutely tight in order to prevent drafts which may cause colds in the flock.

The front of the house should be so high that the windows or openings will allow the sun to shine well back into the interior during the winter. Burlap, unbleached muslin, or light-weight duck cloth may be used for curtains in the front. This cloth should be thin enough to allow a slow circulation of air without a draft. This is impossible if too heavy a grade of duck cloth is used or if the cloth is oiled or painted.

If the curtain is not attended to, however, curtain-front houses may be less satisfactory than the open-front type even in northern latitudes.

A large amount of glass in the front of the house makes it warm during the day but cold at night, as glass radiates heat very rapidly. Some glass, however, is helpful in providing light when the curtains are closed. Some ventilation should be given in a poultry house even on the coldest night. It is usually best secured by leaving a small window open or having muslin curtains in the front of the house. If the house is shut up tightly without any muslin curtains in the front, there is a tendency for moisture to collect in the house and condense on the rafters and other woodwork on frosty mornings. It is not necessary to close the muslin curtains in the front of the house except in very cold or stormy weather.

UTILITY SHOW-RING TYPE.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The old-time, so-called "dyed-in-the-wool" fancier was interested primarily in producing birds of high exhibition quality and too frequently had no concern in their ability back of them. This fact has led the breeders of standard-bred poultry to see that if they are to take advantage of all possible profitable outlets for their stock they must pay more attention to productiveness. There is a happy medium between the high-quality show-ring type and the productive egg-yielding type. Breeders of exhibition birds, as well as poultry raisers in the business for eggs and meat, should strive for this utility show-ring type.

I stayed in the house for five weeks and the pain was wearing the life out of me. At times, I couldn't get a wink of sleep because of the misery and I had to get up every few moments to pass the secretions that were highly colored, of foul odor, filled with sandy sediment and terribly scalding. My bladder felt as though it were afire. The pain brought stupor and a reeling sensation in my head; the torture of it cannot be described. DAIRY

DON'T FEED ROUGHAGE ALONE

Leguminous Hays, Such as Alfalfa, Clover, Soy Bean or Cowpea Hay Are Favored.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The best kind of dry roughage to be fed to the dairy cow, in connection with corn silage or roots, are leguminous hays, such as alfalfa, red, crimson, or alsike clover and soy bean or cowpea hay. While corn silage is an excellent feed, it is not a balanced one, as it does not contain sufficient protein and mineral matter to meet fully the requirements of the cow. The leguminous hays, in addition to being very palatable, have a tendency to correct this deficiency. They are also one of the best and cheapest sources of protein. One or more of these hays can be grown on any farm, and in addition to their value for feeding purposes, they improve the soil in which they are grown. Hay from Canada field peas, sown with oats to prevent the peas from lodging, also makes an excellent roughage.

Corn stover, coarse hay, etc., also find a good market through the dairy cow. This class of roughage is low in protein, however, and when it is used the grain must be richer in protein.

No positive rule can be laid down as to the quantity of dry roughage that should be fed, but about 6 to 12 pounds a day for each cow, in addition to silage, will be found to be satisfactory in most cases. When the dry roughage is of poor quality, such as coarse, weedy hay or a poor grade of cornstalks, a large portion can often be given to advantage, allowing the cow to pick out the best and using the rejected part for bedding. With this quantity of dry roughage the cow will take, according to her size, from 25 to 50 pounds of silage. This may be considered as a guide for feeding to apply when the roughage is grown on the farm. When everything has to be purchased, it is often more economical to limit the quantity of roughage fed and increase the grain ration.

While a cow's stomach is large and her whole digestive system is especially designed to utilize coarse feeds, there is a limit to the bulk that she can take. This limit is below the quantity of roughage that it would require to furnish the nutrients she must have for maximum production; that is, a ration may contain the proper proportions of protein and carbohydrates and still be so bulky that she cannot handle it. She therefore should have some grain even though the roughage in itself is a balanced ration.

FIRST-GRADE MILK

The five essentials for production of first-grade milk are: (1) Healthy cows and men, (2) clean cows and men, (3) clean cans and pails, (4) covered milking pails, (5) cooling milk to 55 degrees Fahrenheit or below within an hour after production and holding it as low as possible until delivered.

LACK OF ICE AT CREAMERIES

One Concern Turned Back to Farmers $2,700 Worth of Food Products—Many Other Losses.

(From the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One large creamery, which buys about 350,000 gallons of sweet milk and cream per year, returned to farmers last year nearly $2,700 worth of these food products on account of lack of proper care which caused souring, churning and off flavors.

The records of another plant show that nearly 50,000 gallons of sour milk were received in one year.

Insufficient cooling caused most of these losses, which are duplicated many times all over the country during the heated season.

TREATING COWS FOR GARGET

Afflicted Animals Should Be Milked Regularly—Hands of Milker Should Be Washed.

Cows that are subject to garget should be milked regularly and clean. In some cases it may be advisable to milk oftener than twice a day. The hands of the milker should be washed after milking a cow that is affected with garget before milking another cow, to prevent carrying the germs. The practice of milking out an affected cow on the ground is a bad one for the germs are spread in this way to other cows.

LESSON FOR MARCH 30

REVIEW.

GOD'S HAND IN A NATION'S LIFE

SELECTION FOR READING—John 14:1-23.

GOLDEN TEXT—Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people.—Proverbs 14:34.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How God led his people (Psalms 77:20).

JUNIOR TOPIC—Recognizing God's leading.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—Evidences of God's guidance.

Since Israel was a theocratic nation, perhaps the best method of review will be to trace God's hand in that nation's life. Israel was led, fed, clothed and disciplined by God.

Lesson I. God's hand is clearly discernible in the experiences of Israel in Egypt. Israel was to be the religious teacher of the world, therefore the nation must sojourn in Egypt, the most advanced in learning of any nation at that time. In order that Moses the great lawgiver might be equipped with the best possible education God used Pharaoh to oppress the people. This oppression served a threefold purpose: (1) It served the testimony to the Egyptian nation that the living God was the God of Israel. The more they oppressed them, the more they multiplied. (2) It served a beneficent purpose in bringing the nation into its own. It required the crucible of suffering to bring humanity into its own. (3) It made the nation willing to leave Egypt and go to Canaan, the promised land. Had not the hand of oppression been upon them they would have chosen to remain in Goshen.

Lesson II. When Israel was ready to go to Canaan God had a leader ready for the difficult task. His parentage, education at his mother's knee and at Pharaoh's court, and communication with God in the desert of Midian had equipped him for this work.

Lesson III. Though enslaved by a powerful nation, God undertook freedom for Israel, and by ten telling strokes—the plagues—he tore the shackles from their hands and set them free. The Passover is a memorial of that blessed deliverance.

Lesson IV. God opened the Red sea and made a path of safety for Israel to cross, but overwhelmed Pharaoh and his hosts in the sea.

Lesson V. Israel bitterly complained when they faced the wilderness without food. God sent them manna and quails. The manna did not fail them until they came into Canaan.

Lesson VI. God sent Jethro to give needed counsel to Moses. The strength of Moses was about to break. God took one outside of the commonwealth of Israel and through him communicated the wisdom which Moses needed to save him from collapse through overwork.

Lesson VII. At Sinai Israel is organized into a nation, and the ten commandments are given as their constitution. In this constitution is clearly set forth man's duty to God and his obligation to his fellow men.

Lesson VIII. God's hand is seen in his burning anger against the nation for turning away from him to worship the golden calf. He is a jealous God; he will not tolerate a rival.

Lesson IX. Through unbelief the spies are sent to search out Canaan. When they were urged to take possession of the land according to God's promise they rebelled. Because of this failure God caused them to wander in the wilderness for 38 years.

Lesson X. When God's disciplinary measures had run their course the people were back again upon the borders of Canaan. Joshua was chosen by God to lead the people, as Moses' time to depart had come.

Lesson XI. In the cities of refuge God provided that revenge should not take the place of justice.

Lesson XII. Before Joshua's death God through him set forth the conditions upon which the nation's welfare could be maintained, namely, whole hearted obedience to God and separation from their wicked neighbors.

A Prayer.

Our Father, we bless thee that thou hast not waited to be asked but knowing our need, hast permitted us, in thy great mercy, to make our requests known unto thee, as well as our adoration and joy in thee, so we pray thee for the things that are requisite and necessary. Thou knowest what things we have need of before we ask thee, but thou hast bidden us ask thee because thou delightest in our consciousness of dependence upon thee, and wouldst have us feel our needs that we may be fit to receive their supply. Through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

Sphere of His Holiness.

If this sphere of his mercy and wrath, tenderness and severity, is so beautiful, what shall be the splendor of the sphere of his holiness? What the glory of the presence chamber, judged by the excellence of this distant boundary lodge?

Going to Church.

We cannot take advantage of the church without going to church, any more than we could take advantage of a week-day school, without going to classes each day.

Love Adventures of Howard Flentke, Aged 14

EVANSVILLE, IND.—This very proper little city is ostensibly shocked at the doings of Howard Flentke, fourteen years old, a fourth-year student in the Central high school. As to chuckling over the tale—that's another matter.

Beginning at the end, Policeman John Pratt in the La Salle street station in Chicago thought he saw a beautiful, blue-eyed girl of eighteen, in the latest togs and a big black hat framing golden curls, sliding down a banister. Policeman John pinched himself. Policeman John has an eye, and it convinced him that the slider was a boy. Then he pinched the lovely masquerader. Judge Arnold sent the youngster to the juvenile detention home till his father could come and get him.

And this is the story Howard tells of his adventures:

"I just decided I was sick of Evansville. I wanted a change. I wanted to get into the movies. I was tired of being a boy. Tuesday night I got into Sister Marie's clothes and took the train for Terre Haute. A soldier wearing the overseas uniform flirted with me, holding my hand.

"Another soldier—he said he was John Smolinski of La Salle, Ill.—came along, and after a quarrel with the first he took his place beside me. He became very affectionate, finally proposing to me. I accepted him. He asked me to ride on to La Salle, and I did, but my ticket only carried me to Terre Haute, so I 'fixed' the conductor with a few smiles and a pat on the hand. It was Wednesday morning when I got off at La Salle with John. I made an appointment with him for 10:30 Thursday morning to get married. Then I went to a hotel and registered as 'Bonnie Lauder.' He had given me some money.

"Thursday I took a train for Chicago. I made perhaps a dozen acquaintances; all the men wanted to flirt with me.

"I didn't know how to find my way around Chicago, so I returned to the station when I left each of the fellows. There it was that I saw the entrancing banister. And that's where I got pinched."

Joseph ("Yellow Kid") Weil Says Barnum Was Right

JOLIET, ILL.—"Take it from me——" It's Joseph Weil, the one and only "Yellow Kid," the erstwhile millionaire slicker, the sartorially select nimble-wit, the man who made wire-tapping famous, in short, the world's greatest "con man" talking. In the old days it was "Take it from them." Now it is "Take it from me." A whiskerless, morose convict—No. 6162 at Joliet penitentiary—Kid Weil was giving out an interview.

"Take it from me," he said, meaning advice, of course. "If Chicago was to be sold for a ten-dollar note tonight I couldn't buy a decrepit factory whistle. I'm down and out. I haven't even got my, my—whiskers.

"If it were not for the separation from my wife and daughter and the disgrace, I would be as contented as the proverbial cow," he continued. "I am well treated here and I like the work—but I am a ruined man."

"No honest man enters a wire-tapping game and no honest man expects to get rich over night. To minimize confidence games, I suggest that the 'sucker' should be made equally culpable with the 'con man' when he expects to beat someone else out of the money.

"But"—Kid Weil hesitated and jerked out one of the old-time laughs—"Barnum was right."

Life may be a grand, sweet song to some, but it's just plain "jazz" to a lot of us.

"O Happy Day" sang the laundress as she hung the snowy wash on the line. It was a "happy day" because she used Red Cross Ball Blue.

High School Notes

The seniors visited the Schermerhorn Studio on Wednesday at Auburn.

Three members of the S. J. H. S basket ball team, it is reported, have been awarded positions on the all-district teams for the creditable work done at the district tournament at Kendallville.

The public is requested to keep in mind the date, April 4, and attend the High School Musicale at the opera house. The program will be given by the high school students under the direction of C. A Woodcox.

Hudson H. S. B. B. team will play the St. Joe H. S. team Friday evening on the St. Joe floor. This game is the last of the season on the home floor, and decides the tie between the teams. Everybody is invited to attend and see a good game.

The senior class consists of six boys and two girls this year. They are Gerald Kinsey, Virgil Perry, Floyd Roberts, George Tustison, Joe Shull, Carl Perkins, Blen Kain and Ima Scholes. The members of the class are busy making preparations for their commencement week program. The following dates have been decided upon for commencement week: Class play, "Too Clever by Half" on Friday evening, May 16; Baccalaureate sermon, May 18; Commencement, Wednesday evening, May 20.

Failed to Attend School.

Vernon Wilmot of Spencer township, was fined $10 and costs, a total of $18, in the court of Justice of the Peace Zimmer in Auburn Monday afternoon for failure to send a child to school.

The child is George Wilmot, aged ten years. He had been going to the Spencerville school until March 4. It is understood his mother decided she would not send the boy to Teacher Means any longer and defied the county truant officer, Mahlon Baker, of Auburn.

Mr. Baker filed an affidavit before Deputy Prosecutor Oak Husselman and Wilmot was summoned to the justice court. He pleaded guilty, paid the fine and costs, and pledged himself to see that his son attends school hereafter.—Star.

KEEP THE LOAN FIRES BURNING, WORKERS!

"Finish the Job" Should Be the Slogan of Victory Liberty Loan Leaders of Seventh District.

SOLDIERS STICK TO POSTS

Chairmen and Their Aids Must Not Quit Until All the Government's War Obligations Have Been Discharged.

Returns at the five state headquarters in Chicago show that the county chairmen and other important workers in the Seventh Federal Reserve district are signing up for the fifth big loan. They are actuated by the same sense of duty, it is reported, as fills the breasts of the soldiers now held in France. The soldiers over there long for home; but they realize that their work is not done. Garrisons must be held along the Rhine until peace has been formally signed and the terms of the peace treaty have been carried out.

In the same way it is generally recognized by chairmen and other workers throughout the Seventh Federal Reserve district, the men who are responsible for the financial part of the war, cannot quit until the financial obligations are discharged. The big bills for any undertaking come in immediately after the completion of that work. It would be an irresponsible business man, it is conceded on all hands, who would refuse responsibility for that part of his contractor's bills that came in after the driving of the last nail.

The Fourth Liberty Loan paid off the then outstanding treasury certificates of indebtedness and furnished enough new money to carry the government until mid-December. Since that date the treasury department has been borrowing from the banks at the rate of $300,000,000 a week, and by the time the Victory Loan is offered will owe nearly six billion dollars. The Fifth loan money will pay off these bank loans and carry the government until the money raised under the 1918 revenue act begins to come in.

The sudden termination of the war brought an increase in the day to day military expenditures. The total for December passed, for the first time, the two billion mark. The January total was slightly less, but exceeded any other month except January. February promises to show a considerable decrease. The high daily outlays since the end of fighting have been due to the liquidation of the war machine, and were unavoidable. There is still a great mass of contract obligations to be cleared away—contracts entered into by business men for the rush production of munitions that would have been absolutely essential had the war gone on for a few weeks or months longer.

Chairmen and workers who happen to hear of anyone who is declining to participate in the next loan have ready to their hands a set of the best possible arguments against this sort of conduct.

In the first place the man who refuses to work in the next loan or to buy bonds of the next issue can be charged with being a quitter or a coward. Neither is an especially American attribute. As a nation Americans have the reputation of seeing a thing through. And the fields of France proclaim that they are not cowards.

But the infrequent loan worker who is saying that he cannot find time to participate in the Victory drive, or does not feel any obligation to do so may be charged with cowardice. It is generally recognized where such an attitude is encountered that the man fears the fifth loan will not be a success. The man who is preparing to quit now, it is pointed out, is doing so because he does not want to be identified with a failure. The answer to this is that none of the 6,000 marines who stopped the victorious German march on Paris at Chateau Thierry asked to be excused from going into the fight because he expected it to be a failure. Yet all the foreign military men thought that the Americans could not stop the Germans at this point.

Another argument answers a good deal of half-hearted comment which maintains that it makes no difference whether the banks have to take the loan. But the business man or the wage earner who thinks that it makes no difference to him is decidedly mistaken. If the public does not take the bonds the banks, as everyone knows, must do so. Now on December 31 the national banks of the country had resources of $20,042,224,000. This was the first time in the nation's history that the total ever got above the twenty-billion mark.

This enormous banking power shows, for one thing, that the nation can take another six billion loan with ease if the organization gets out and works. But it also shows something else. The twenty billion, of course, is greatly more than the total that is actually available for credit operations. If the banks should have to take the greater part of the next loan, and to add this burden to the more than two billion now tied up in Liberty loans, and the additional treasury certificates that will be issued next summer and fall, there will be a very much reduced balance for general business credit accommodation.

Everyone knows what credit limitations did to business in the days when fighting was going on. The readjustment pause that has followed has lessened the demand, but the minute business starts forward on the reconstruction boom, as it will in a short time, every dollar of credit facilities possible will be in demand, and any such limitation as a failure of the loan would entail would mean business stagnation and unemployment. Every loan worker in the Seventh Federal Reserve district must realize that the success of his own business, or the size of his own pay envelope, is tied up with the success of the government's financial plan.

Finally, the nation has such an enormous amount of new wealth that it is impossible to assume that the loan will fail. Everything says that, unless patriotism and common sense were both stricken dead in every American breast upon the signing of the armistice, the loan will be a success. National bank deposits in 1913 amounted to only $6,051,689,087; today they amount to $15,051,000,000. Farm profits on the 1918 crop have been enormous and the 1919 crop promises to be the greatest in history. The hard-coal mines of the country produced 76,649,918 gross tons of new wealth in 1918 and the petroleum wells added 345,500,000 barrels of oil. The national balance of trade—the excess of exports over imports—has grown from $252,677,921 in 1900 to $3,150,000,000 in 1918. In four short years we have changed from a debtor nation owing $4,000,000,000 abroad, to a creditor nation that is owed $10,000,000,000 by foreign nations and their people. And lastly, American banks hold the greatest accumulation of gold ever known in history—as much as is owned by the next eight most wealthy nations put together.

Any citizen who fears that the fifth loan cannot and will not be subscribed has little of the courage and confidence that made America famous at Chateau Thierry and Cantigny and in the Argonne Forest.

WOMEN BIG HELP ON VICTORY LIBERTY LOAN

Preliminary Work Is Well Mapped Out —Big Showing in Former Loans to Be Exceeded This Time.

Preliminary returns show that the women workers of the Seventh Federal Reserve district are out to make a big showing in the Victory Liberty Loan. Women chairmen and workers are everywhere signing up for the fifth campaign. There have been very few resignations, it is reported, from women who felt that their obligation to the nation had ended because the fighting in France was ended.

On the contrary, it is asserted by Miss Grace Dixon, director for women, Seventh district, and by other leaders in the women's loan activities, the women workers feel more strongly than ever their obligation to get out and personally go after bond subscriptions. The very fact that individuals are found who do not appreciate the obligation resting upon the civilian population has aroused in double force the patriotic sense of duty in the breast of the women workers. These are asserting through letters received at Chicago headquarters by every mail that they intend to work twice as hard as in any preceding loan—if that be possible—in order to counteract the "quitter" sentiment that is manifesting itself among certain individuals in every community.

Preliminary work is well mapped out in a majority of the counties in the district. It is planned to have a larger number of women workers enrolled everywhere than was the case in the preceding loans. Workers already are securing pledges from recruits and veterans and it is promised that a better showing will be made in every state than in any of the Liberty loans so far placed.

The Fifth loan, it is pointed out, will come at a time when women on the farms and in the smaller communities can give an especially large amount of time to the loan work. The drive, coming in April, will precede the active farm and garden work and the women will, therefore, be in a position to concentrate on the campaign in a way they were unable to do in the Fourth loan.

The results of the Victory Loan are expected to prove a monument to the patriotism and self-sacrifice of the women of the Seventh Federal Reserve district, for the spirit of service is the animating principle of the American people at this time.

Group Meeting

Nearly all of the church denominations of our nation are entering their big campaigns for finances, in order that they may be better prepared to meet the demands of the re-construction period of our nation. The local M. P.'s will entertain the group meeting of this district at St. Joe on Monday, April 7, comprising fifteen churches as follows: Altona, Butler Center, Rehobeth, Harlan, Maumee, Milan Center, Springfield, Allen Chapel, Kendallville, Perseverance, Bethel, Marion New Haven, Concord and St. Joe.

A representative is expected from each of the churches. The meetings have been arranged so as to meet the requirements of the National Committee and they in turn send a man from the office to explain to the people the plans adopted to carry on the campaign. The church will raise $1,000,000 between May 11—21, from the Sunday Schools and churches of the denomination. The program used at all these meetings is as follows:

10:00 A. M. Address, "Plan and Purpose of the Million Dollar Campaign," by Rev. Geo. H. Miller, D. D., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Five Minute Talks by Layman, "The Why of the Campaign," "The How of the Campaign," "The When of the Campaign."

12:00 M. Social Hour. The members of the Friendly Bible Class will serve dinner to the visiting pastors and laymen, in the Barney house, opposite the opera house. The public is invited.

1:30 P. M. Address, "By-products of the Million Dollar Campaign" by Rev. W. W. Lineberry, D. D., President Indiana Conference.

Five Minute Talks by Laymen; "The Laymen in the Campaign," "Over the Top," Round Table Discussion.

Supper will br served at the Barney house. The public is cordially invited to these meals.

7:30 P. M. The Million Dollar Campaign Illustrated, Rev. Geo. H. Miller.

There will be no solicitation for money at the group meeting.

The members of the local charge are fortunate in having this meeting so close at hand, and while the day is a busy one for most folks, it will be time well spent, and an opportunity to learn of the church activities in a direct way, as the speaker is authority. Anyone desiring to attend should come.

Will Filed For Probate

The last will of the late Addie Filley of St. Joe, has been filed for probate in the DeKalb circuit court.

Mrs. Filley names her son-in-law Harry Kees, executor of the will and stipulates that he should have erected on the burial lot of her and her husband a suitable monument, properly engraved.

In recognition of the dependency of her sister, Sarah A. Bartlett, "and the many special services she has rendered me in the past, I hereby bequeath to my said sister the sum of $500."

As soon as may be after her death, Mrs. Filley says, her property, both real and personal, excepting household effects, shall be sold by the executor, and after payment of the legacies set out above, one-third of the proceeds is to go to her son, Frank Filley; one-third to her daughter, Nina Kees, and one-third to her daughter, Belle Woodcox, to be held in trust by the executor and after Mrs. Woodcox's decease for the use of her children, share and share alike; provided, however, that on account of $300 heretofore advanced to Belle Woodcox, the executor is to take from the share herein devised the sum of $200, $100 of which shall be given to Frank Filley and $100 to Nina Kees.

The household goods are to be divided equally among the children.

The will was signed March 30, 1916, in the presence of Pearl Kimes and J. Glenn Miller.

GLAD TO PAY

Invited to Chicago

The editor of the ST. JOE NEWS as well as all those in the Seventh federal reserve banking district have been invited to attend a Victory Loan conference in Chicago, April 11, with district campaign managers. Their expenses to and from the meeting will be paid by the government.

The invitation to the editors states that Liberty Loan leaders realize that the newspapers of this state were largely instrumental in assuring the success of the first, second, third and fourth Liberty Loans; and that the newspapers can be depended upon for the same whole-hearted support for the Victory Liberty loan starting April 21.

The conference will be a one-day meeting. The forenoon will be taken up in state group meetings. At 12:30 a buffet luncheon will be served. At 2 o'clock a general meeting of all newspaper men will be held. An entertainment is being arranged for the evening to be given at the Auditorium theater.

Letter from French Girl.

The following letter was presented The News for publication by Mrs. M. C. Hart, being written by a 12 year old French girl to Mrs. Bessie Klopfenstine of Ft. Wayne. The letter was translated from French by George Hart, who is giving the girl three English lessons a week.

Clisson, Loire Inferieure, France.
February, 18, 1919.

Madam:—

I have not the honor of knowing you, but I have had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of your brother, Mr. George, who has given me your address, in order that I may write you, as I know a little English, which I am studying. I must hasten so as to fulfill the promise which I have with your brother, and I hope this letter will arrive in America very soon.

I am sending you, at the same time, some little sabots for your baby, which he says are very pretty; and for you, madam, some music on the violin, with the accompaniment of the piano, as I believe you play them both.

Mr. George comes very often to see papa, mamma and I. We are very happy when he comes, and would be glad if he would do so every day, for he is a very good friend for me. He spoils me very much, and never forgets to bring me candy and other good things. He is very serious and mamma and papa esteem him very much.

I hope you and your family are well like us, and in the best of health. I desire it with all my heart. I do not know if your baby can make use of the sabots which I am sending; if he cannot, they will always serve as a remembrance for him, from a little girl in France, who has many good times with his uncle.

At our home we talk often of you with your brother, and we have looked at and enjoyed the photographs which he has received from America.

I will be very happy, madam, if my little gift pleases you, for it is a great pleasure for me to offer it. Kiss well your baby for me, and permit me, madam, to kiss you from the bottom of my heart.

A little French girl,
Giselle Arnaudeau.

America's Immortals

Most striking instances of gallantry for which the Distinguished Service Cross has been awarded

Stories of personal bravery that would be almost unbelievable were they not told in official reports are disclosed by the war department's records of the awards of the Distinguished Service Cross to members of the American Expeditionary forces. Following are a few of the official reports that have been selected by General Pershing's own staff as presenting most striking instances of gallantry on the part of American soldiers under fire:

SAMUEL WOODFILL,
First Lieutenant, Company M, 60th Infantry.

Three acts of conspicuous daring in one day near Cunel, France, October 12, 1918, won the Distinguished Service Cross for Lieut. Woodfill. While he was leading his company against the enemy his line came under heavy machine gun fire, which threatened to hold up the advance. Followed by two soldiers at twenty-five yards, this officer went out ahead of his first line toward a machine gun nest and worked his way around its flank, leaving the two soldiers in front. When he got within ten yards of the gun it ceased firing and four of the enemy appeared, three of whom were shot by Lieut. Woodfill. The fourth, an officer, rushed at Lieut. Woodfill, who attempted to club the officer with his rifle. After a hand-to-hand struggle, Lieut. Woodfill killed the officer with his pistol. His company thereupon continued to advance until shortly afterward another machine gun nest was encountered. Calling his men to follow, Lieut. Woodfill rushed ahead of his line in the face of heavy fire from the nest, and when several of the enemy appeared above the nest he shot them, capturing three other members of the crew and silencing the gun. A few minutes later this officer, for the third time, demonstrated conspicuous daring by charging another machine gun position, killing five men in one machine gun pit with his rifle. He then drew his revolver and started to jump into the pit when two other gunners only a few yards away turned their gun on him. Failing to kill them with his revolver, he grabbed a pick lying near by and killed both of them. Inspired by the exceptional courage displayed by this officer, his men pressed on to their objective under severe shell and machine gun fire. Lieut. Woodfill is married and lives at 167 Alexandria Pike, Fort Thomas, Ky.

GEORGE H. MALLON,
Captain, 132nd Infantry.

Capt. Mallon was decorated for intrepidity beyond the call of duty in the Bois de Forges, France, September 26, 1918. Becoming separated from the balance of his company because of a fog, Capt. Mallon, with nine soldiers, pushed forward and attacked nine hostile machine guns, capturing all of them without the loss of a man. Continuing on through the woods, he led his men in attacking a battery of 450 mm. howitzers which were in action, rushing the position and capturing the battery and its crew. In this encounter Capt. Mallon personally attacked one of the enemy with his fists. Later when the party came upon two more machine guns, this officer sent men to the flanks, while he rushed forward directly in the face of the fire and silenced the guns, being the first one of the party to reach the nest. The exceptional gallantry and determination displayed by Capt. Mallon resulted in the capture of 100 prisoners, eleven machine guns, four 450 mm. howitzers and one anti-aircraft gun. Capt. Mallon's home address is 1931 Hallock street, Kansas City, Mo.

WILLIAM R. PECK,
Sergeant, Company C, 354th Infantry.

Sergt. Peck (deceased) received the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous gallantry in action near Remonville November 1, 1918. He was advancing with his company across an open field when enemy guns opened fire on them from two sides. The attention of the platoon commander was directed to the gun on his direct front, while the enemy on the right was leveling his gun upon him. Seeing the predicament of his commander, Sergt. Peck threw himself against the officer, pushing him into a shell hole, but exposing himself to the fire which instantly killed him. His home was in Washburn, Wis.

HAROLD W. ROBERTS,
Corporal, Company A, 344th Battalion, Tank Corps.

For deliberately going to his death to save a companion in the Montrebeau woods, France, October 4, 1918, Corp. Roberts was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross. Corp. Roberts, a tank driver, was moving his tank into a clump of bushes to afford protection to another tank which had been disabled. The tank slid into a shell hole, ten feet deep, filled with water, and was immediately submerged. Knowing that only one of the two men in the tank could escape, Corp. Roberts said to the gunner, "Well, only one of us can get out, and out you go," whereupon he pushed his companion through the back door of the tank and was himself drowned. Corp. Roberts' home address was 5 Market street, San Francisco, Cal.

ALAN LOUIS EGGERS,
Sergeant, M. G. Co., 107th Infantry.

Unusual bravery displayed in aiding comrades in distress near Catelot, France, September 29, 1918, won the Distinguished Service Cross for Sergt. Eggers. Becoming separated from their platoons by a smoke barrage, Sergt. Eggers, Sergt. John G. Latham and Corporal Thomas E. O'Shea took cover in a shell hole well within the enemy's lines. Upon hearing a call for help from an American tank, which had become disabled, thirty yards from them, the three soldiers left their shelter and started toward the tank, under heavy fire from German machine guns and trench mortars. In crossing the fire-swept area, Corp. O'Shea was mortally wounded but his companions, undeterred, proceeded to the tank, rescued a wounded officer, and assisted two soldiers to cover in the sap of a nearby trench. Sergt. Eggers and Sergt. Latham then returned to the tank in the face of the violent fire, dismounted a Hotchkiss gun and took it back to where the wounded men were, keeping off the enemy all day by the effective use of the gun, and later bringing it, with the wounded men, back to our lines under cover of darkness. Sergt. Eggers' home is at 152 Summit avenue, Summit, N. J.

J. HUNTER WICKERSHAM,
Second Lieutenant, 353rd Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry, resulting in his death, near Limey, France, September 12, 1918, Lieut. Wickersham was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross. Advancing with his platoon during the St. Mihiel offensive, Lieut. Wickersham was severely wounded in four places by the bursting of a high explosive shell. Before receiving any aid for himself, he dressed the wounds of his orderly, who was wounded at the same time. He then ordered and accompanied the further advance of his platoon, although weakened by the loss of blood. His right hand and arm being disabled by wounds, he continued to fire his revolver with his left hand until, exhausted by the loss of blood, he fell and died from his wounds before aid could be administered. Lieut. Wickersham's home address was 3416 Colfax boulevard, Denver, Colo.

MARCELLUS H. CHILES,
Captain, 356th Infantry.

Capt. Chiles was decorated for conspicuous bravery in action, which resulted in his death near Le Champy Bas, France, November 3, 1918. When his battalion, of which he had just taken command, was halted by machine gun fire from the front and left flank, Capt. Chiles picked up the rifle of a dead soldier and, calling on his men to follow, led the advance across a stream waist deep, in the face of the machine gun fire. Upon reaching the opposite bank, this gallant officer was seriously wounded in the abdomen by a sniper, but before permitting himself to be evacuated he made complete arrangements for turning over his command to the next senior officer, and under the inspiration of his fearless leadership his battalion reached its objective. Capt. Chiles died shortly after reaching the hospital. His home was at 2815 West Thirty-seventh street, Denver, Colo.

ROY W. REEVES,
Corporal, 96th Company, Sixth Marines.

Corp. Reeves, whose home is with his mother, Mrs. J. W. Reeves, 3769 Chamour avenue, East San Diego, Cal., was decorated for an act of conspicuous intrepidity in action with the enemy near Blanc Mont, France, October 3, 1918. During a stiffly contested hand grenade fight Corp. Reeves saw a grenade fall in the midst of five of his comrades. Without hesitation he rushed forward and picked it up, hurling it from the trench. The grenade exploded a few yards from his hand, wounding him severely, but his act averted injury to all of his comrades.

EARL J. CHEEVERS,
Sergeant, Headquarters Co., 132nd Infantry.

Sergeant Cheevers received the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action near Bois de Forges, France, September 26, 1918. While engaged in maintaining a line of communication, Sergeant Cheevers saw four of the enemy enter a dugout during an attack. Armed with only a pistol, he followed. Upon reaching the dugout he ordered the men to come out. When they refused, he entered and routed out and captured twelve prisoners.

RAY C. DICKOP,
First Lieutenant, 127th Infantry.

Lieut. Dickop (deceased) was decorated for extraordinary heroism in action in the attack on Fismes, France, in August of 1918. On reaching Chevelles farm, he was shot in the head, body and legs. Although fatally wounded, when orders came for another assault he gave the command "charge" to his company and led the assault until he fell dead. Miss Lena Schiller, his aunt, lives at West Bend Wis.

INDIANA State News

Rochester. — Fulton county hog breeders organized three societies and declared for union hog sales in this city.

Kentland. — Robbers entered the Farmers' State bank at Morocco, stole about $25,000 in Liberty bonds and $1,500 in cash and then left the vicinity after cutting all telephone and telegraph lines.

Newcastle.—Farm land in eleven of the thirteen townships of Henry county is being assessed at an average of $135 an acre, according to a report made by the township assessor. Assessments in Henry township, in which this city is situated, have not been made, but the average for the entire county is expected to be close to $150 an acre.

Rushville.—Four petitions for cement highways, to be built under the new county unit road law, were filed with the county auditor here, making five which have been placed on file. The cost of the roads petitioned for would more than exhaust the fund available this year under the law, which amounts to $480,000, with property valued at $34,000,000 on the tax duplicates of the county.

Franklin.—According to the decision of Fremont Miller, judge of the Johnson circuit court, three justices of the peace may hold office in a township. A controversy arose when a justice of the peace who was holding office until his successor could be chosen, sentenced two persons to jail, he being one of three officials serving in a like capacity in the township at the time.

Indianapolis. — Opposition to the plan of the Highway Industries association, which has headquarters at Washington, to have a law enacted by the next congress which would interfere with the independence of the state as a road-building unit, has been announced by Luke W. Duffey, a member of the good roads committee of the Indianapolis chamber of commerce and the Indiana member of the roads committee of the National Chamber of Commerce.

Evansville.—In an address here before coal miners and laboring men, Charles Fox, president of the Indiana State Federation of Labor, scoffed at the idea that labor in this country will cause an uprising or a revolution. "There is not going to be a revolution or uprising," said Fox. "Labor merely will demand the things that it needs and will get them. The workers will get them peacefully through legislation and by showing that they are entitled to what they ask."

Indianapolis.—Increased prosperity in Indiana since the fourth Liberty loan places the state in a position to oversubscribe the quota which may be assigned it for the coming Victory drive. Figures from the Seventh Federal Reserve bank in Chicago show that the banking resources in the 68 central and northern Indiana counties in the reserve district now total $634,948,861; which is several per cent increase over the figures for the previous loan drive.

Indianapolis.—The annual sessions of the state board of tax commissioners will begin April 7. The old law provided for three sessions, but under the new law four sessions will be held. The fourth session is the one to which especial interest is attached, for at that session the board finally determines tax levies for all tax units in the state, as well as for the state itself. In view of the fact that assessors everywhere this year will assess property at its full cash value, tax levies generally are expected to be reduced.

Jeffersonville.—In spite of a big increase in the use of tractors in this county, dealers say that farmers will buy many horses and mules from the government. Several thousand have been sold at the remount station at Louisville at an average of $118. Clark county men have bought in considerable numbers and find the farmers eager to get sound animals. One dealer explained it by saying that last year farmers got rid of every animal they could possibly spare, not only on account of cost of feed but also because of the scarcity of labor.

Washington, D. C.—At least one and possibly two parades for the One Hundred and Fiftieth artillery in Indiana when it returns from France were tentatively promised by the war department through Colonel McAndrews, chief assistant to General Anderson in the demobilization service. Colonel McAndrews said the regiment would parade in Indianapolis and possibly at Fort Wayne. He suggested that Lafayette and Fort Wayne collaborate on the Fort Wayne parade and that Bloomington take part in the arrangements for the Indianapolis parade.

Muncie.—Petitions were filed with the commissioners of Delaware county, asking that five roads be improved under the county unit highway act passed by the last legislature. The aggregate cost is estimated at more than $1,000,000.

Greensburg.—Fewer mortgage exemption affidavits are being filed in Decatur county thus far this year, indicating to officials that business men and farmers are more prosperous than for several years past. Thus far the number is 192, less than one-half the number that was filed at this time in 1919.

Indianapolis.—The governor's annual arbor day proclamation calls on Hoosier school teachers to see that the schools observe the day in keeping with the nation's need of reforestation.

Indianapolis.—Miners of Nova Scotia were admitted to membership in the United Mine Workers of America, according to action taken by the executive board. The decision affects approximately 12,000 workers.

Indianapolis.—Word was received at state Victory loan headquarters from Chicago that three "whippet" tanks are in readiness to enter Indiana. The tanks are assigned to the 68 counties in Indiana from a fleet of 21 that will operate over the Seventh federal reserve district.

Goshen.—One Goshen ice firm announced that the retail price for ice this year will be 60 cents a hundred pounds, the highest rate ever known in this city. A citizen committee proposes investigating why ice can be retailed in some Indiana cities at 40 cents a hundred when a 60-cent rate is in effect here.

Indianapolis.—Except in a few isolated cases the labor situation in Indiana is not acute, according to a survey prepared under the direction of Haya Buskirk, assistant to the federal state director of the Indiana employment offices. In six or seven centers in the state where the largest amount of floating labor is found, no reports have been made that the situation is disturbing.

Indianapolis.—Influenza and pneumonia continue to add to the heavy toll of life taken in Indiana since the outbreak of the epidemic last fall. Influenza caused 519 deaths in February and pneumonia caused 451. This makes a total of 970 due to the malady, and while the number is 428 less than the total of January, it increases the total number of deaths from the epidemic since September 1 to 11,432.

Bainbridge.—The directors of the National Spotted Poland China Record association held a special meeting to set a date for the annual meeting and to appropriate special premiums for the Spotted Poland China classes at the different state fairs and national swine show to be held at Cedar Rapids, Ia. It was arranged to hold the annual meeting in Chicago during the week of the international fat stock show.

Princeton.—Judge H. A. Yeager, authority on horticulture, says that there was never better prospect for a full apple, peach, pear, plum and berry bloom in Gibson county, and he believes an abundant crop of fruits of all kind will be yielded if cold rains with northeast winds are escaped during the blooming season and there is no freeze in April. Pears, peaches and plums will begin to bloom in a few days and apples and cherries will bloom a little later.

Vincennes.—The 1919 canteloupe crop will be the greatest in the history of the Hoosier state, according to figures compiled here in the office of C. C. Winkler, who since the death of William H. Vollmer, has been declared the "canteloupe king" of Indiana. Mr. Winkler has received reports from practically every canteloupe growing district in Indiana.

Indianapolis.—An appeal to the supreme court from the ruling of Judge Louis B. Ewbank, in circuit court, in the telephone rate case recently decided in favor of the state public service commission against the Indianapolis Telephone company and government officials who proposed to establish in Indiana the new government rate for long-distance toll service, has been granted by Judge Ewbank. The appeal was taken on the finding of the circuit court judge, overruling a demurrer to the complaint of the state officials.

South Bend.—Judge Walter A. Funk of the St. Joseph circuit court ruled that section 35 of the state prohibition law is a penal section, and that the penalties of section 38 of the act can be applied to violations of section 35. The ruling resulted after counsel for Tom Ward, charged with failing to remove liquor from the state within ten days after the law took effect, as section 35 provides, had moved to arrest judgment when his client was found guilty. The case will be appealed to the state supreme court. The section upon which the ruling was made has been a matter of controversy on the part of lawyers throughout Indiana.

Indianapolis.—The officers and executive committee of the Indiana Federation of Farmers' Associations, organized here, met to arrange for the active work of the state organization. A general secretary will be employed and offices opened soon. Under the constitution adopted each county association affiliated with the state federation will pay $200 into the state treasury. After the annual meeting on the third Tuesday of November each county association will pay an annual membership fee to the state organization equivalent to one dollar for each member, but in no case less than $200. At the state conventions, each county association will be represented by one delegate.

Evansville.—Heavy rains have aided the wheat crop, farmers say. Although expecting no record crop in Vanderburg, it is believed the yield will be larger than that of last year. Clover is looking well and meadows were never in better shape for this time of the year, it is said.

Salem.—The problem of providing sufficient homes to meet the immediate needs of Salem is a perplexing one just now. Every house and apartment is filled and families are being compelled to wait, with household goods stored, until houses can be completed for them.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR APRIL 6

GOD THE FATHER ALMIGHTY.

LESSON TEXTS—Genesis 1:1, 27; Psalms 103:1-14; Matthew 6:24-34.

GOLDEN TEXT—Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name.—Matthew 6:9.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Deuteronomy 6:4, 5; Psalms 145:1-21; Isaiah 6:1-3; Matthew 22:35-38; John 4:24; 1 John 4:7-16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Heavenly Father's care for his children.

JUNIOR TOPIC—God our Creator and Father.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—What we owe to our Father in Heaven.

I. God the Creator (Gen. 1:1, 27).

God was before all things. God the uncaused cause is the cause of all things. "Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God." (Psalm 90:2). The universe came into being by the will and act of the personal being called God. In verse one is enunciated the sublime philosophy of every right life. In the beginning of all science and philosophy—God; in the beginning of every life—God; in the beginning of every year—God; in the beginning of every day—God; in the beginning of every business—God; in the beginning of every thought, plan and human relationship—God. Conviction as to this sets one free from the false philosophy of the age. Man himself is a creation of God, not an evolution. Man was created in the likeness and image of God. This precludes the foolish idea that man ascended from and through a brute. He came into being by a special creative act of God, having been preceded by a special council of the Godhead (Gen. 1:26, 27). Those who believe this record repudiate the Darwinian theory of man's origin as not only a human vagary, but a vicious philosophy inspired by the devil. When man came forth from the Creator's hands he was neither a savage nor a baby; he possessed the powers of a mature man. As an example of the maturity of his intellect, he named the animals as they passed before him.

II. God the Preserver (Psalms 103:1-14).

All created things would perish were it not for the preserving mercies of God. It embraces the following gracious beneficial acts: 1. Forgives all iniquities (v. 3). Pardon is the prime necessity if moral things are to be preserved. 2. Healeth all diseases (v. 3). This refers to the healing of the body and the soul. Renovation of man's moral nature is necessary. 3. Redeemeth the life from destruction (v. 4). Redemption implies the payment of all demands against the debtor. God in Christ performs the part which the individual failed to perform, and crowns him with the full right of citizenship in his kingdom. 4. "Satisfieth thy mouth" (v. 5). This means that God satisfies all legitimate desires and thus the youth is renewed. The original capacities are restored to their native vigor. 5. Executeth righteousness and judgment (vv. 6-14). The wrongs of life are righted and thus man is relieved of the burdens which they entail. He extends his pity toward us.

III. God Our Father (Matt. 6:24-34).

Christ came to reveal the Father. The subjects of the kingdom will love him as a child loves its father.

1. Undivided affection (v. 24). The child of the heavenly Father makes the unequivocal choice between God and the world, for unless God has the first place he has no place.

2. Not anxious about food and clothing (vv. 25-32). (1) It is useless (v. 27). Anxiety can bring nothing. "My God will supply all our needs" (Phil. 4:19). (2) It shows distrust of the Father (vv. 28-30). In the measure that one is anxious about these things he shows his lack of faith in the ability and love of God. If we would please God we must come to him in faith (Heb. 11:6). The birds and flowers shame us in this (vv. 26-28). (3) It is heathenish (v. 32). We do not wonder that those who are ignorant of God should manifest anxiety, but for his children to do so is to play the heathen. He knows that we have need of temporal things and if he cares for the flowers and birds he will surely not allow his children to suffer.

3. He diligently seeks the kingdom of God (vv. 33, 34). He subordinates temporal things to things of the spirit. This shows the right relationship that a child of God is to sustain to secular affairs. This does not mean that a child of God does not exercise proper forethought in making a support for himself and family. The warning is not against legitimate forethought, but anxious worry.

Forgetfulness of Self.

A true perception of the Gospel is the entire forgetfulness of self, utter absence of any pretension, and the complete and entire refusal to accept the world's praise or judgment.—General ("Chinese") Gordon.

He Who Loves God.

One who loves God truly asks no other compensation than God himself; for if he should demand something else, it would be the prize that he loved, and not God.—Bernard of Clairvaux.

LAND VALUE FIXED

Depends Altogether on Power of Giving Wealth.

That Is Why the Fertile Acres of Western Canada, With Adjacent Markets, Are So Attractive to Settlers.

Throughout every portion of the Western Empire lands that are capable of producing are in great demand. We find that in the States of proved agricultural wealth, land prices have increased within the past three or four years to a degree that ten years ago would not have been thought to be possible. Land that sought buyers at $100 an acre five years ago is changing hands at $200 an acre. The secret of this does not lie altogether in the higher prices of farm products, for the expense of production has increased proportionately. The better methods of farming have had a good deal to do with it, and the knowledge that demands for farm products will be sufficiently great for a good many years to come to insure a continuation of the high prices that prevail at present. Then, again, improved machinery, the tractor and other means of economic power will tend to lessen the cost.

Governing land values, too, are climates, soil, moisture, settlement, railroads, markets. Without markets, no matter how much the other factors enter into it, the land is merely of speculative value.

It is not more than a third of a century since ninety per cent of the land in Western Canada, now occupied and tilled, and producing enough in one year to give a profit of from twenty-five to thirty dollars per acre, was unoccupied or used as grazing land, and worth very little. These lands today are valuable, and are being sought by settlers who realize their present and future value. There is no portion of the world that is attracting the same attention. The soil may have improved in the past centuries with the fertilizing given it by nature; the climate has not changed, and the moisture may be considered the same. These are three of the essentials of good land. What they lacked a third of a century ago was markets—a fourth essential. These they have now. Thus provided, it is not to be wondered at that these millions of acres with their great wealth, which have so long been awaiting the awakening touch of mankind, are now to be found adding to the available wealth of the world. With the advent of railroads, throwing their great trunks of steel across the continent and over the surface of these boundless plains, spreading out their tentacles to remoter parts, the world at large has begun to realize that here was a country possessing all the natural advantages claimed by older communities; that land here just as good or better, acre for acre, as their own could be had for almost the asking.

With the realization of the foregoing facts came the people, who found that a railway had preceded them and markets already existed for anything that they might care to raise. These markets have greatly expanded and, are capable of still greater expansion, and assure to the agriculturist the prevailing prices of the world. An assured market means added value to every acre of land in Western Canada, and the near future will see lands that are now selling at exceptionally low prices begin to increase in value, just as they have in Eastern Canada and the United States. —Advertisement.

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE

Don't stay Gray! Here's an Old-time Recipe that Anybody can Apply.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.—Adv.

WOLVES OF THE SEA

By RANDALL PARRISH

Carlyle Sees One Chance—and Takes It.

Synopsis — Geoffry Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for participation in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanchez, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London. Carlyle meets Dorothy, who informs him her uncle has bought his services. Sanchez shows himself an enemy of Carlyle. The Fairfax party, now on its own sloop in the Chesapeake bay, encounters a mysterious bark, the Namur of Rotterdam. Carlyle discovers that Sanchez is "Black Sanchez," planning to steal the Fairfax gold and abduct Dorothy. He fights Sanchez and leaves him for dead. In a battle with Sanchez' followers, however, he is overpowered and thrown into the bay.

The two must have hung in silence over the rail staring down. I dared not advance my head to look, nor even move a muscle of my body in the water.

"How came you aft here?"

"Because that fellow leaped the rail from the wharf. I saw him, and we met at the wheel."

"From the wharf, you say? He was not aboard, then? Santa Maria! I know not what that may mean. Yet what difference, so he be dead. Anderson, Mendez, throw that carrion overboard—no, bullies, never mind; let them lie where they are, and sink an auger in the sloop's bottom. What is that out yonder, Cochose?"

"A small boat, senor—a dory, I make it."

"Cut the rope and send it adrift. Now come along with me."

The darker loom of the sloop vanished slowly, as the slight current sweeping about the end of the wharf drifted the released boat to which I clung outward into the bay. There was scarcely a ripple to the sea, and yet I felt that the boat was steadily drifting out into deep water. I was still strangely weak, barely able to retain my grasp. Finally I mustered every ounce of remaining energy in one supreme effort and succeeded in dragging my body up out of water over the boat's stern, sinking helplessly forward into the bottom. The moment this was accomplished every sense deserted me, and I lay there motionless, totally unconscious.

I shall never know how long I remained thus. Yet this time could not have been great. As though awakening from sleep a faint consciousness returned. Then the sharp pain of my wounds, accented by the sting of salt water, brought me swift realization of where I was and the circumstances bringing me there. I had evidently lost considerable blood, yet this had already ceased to flow, and a very slight examination served to convince me that the knife slashes were none of them serious. My other injuries were merely bruises to add to my discomfort—the result of blows dealt me by Sanchez and Cochose, aggravated by the beastlike bug of the giant negro. Indeed, I awoke to the discovery that I was far from being a dead man; and, inspired by this knowledge, the various incidents of the night flashed swiftly back into my mind.

No gleam of light appeared in any direction; no sound echoed across the dark waste of water. It was clearly impossible for me to attempt any return to the wharf through the impenetrable black curtain which shut me in. What, then, could I do? What might I still hope to accomplish? Those fellows had swept the sloop clean, and had doubtless long ago scuttled it. They would suddenly find themselves leaderless, unguided. Would that suffice to stop them? Would the discovery of his body halt his followers and send them rushing back to their boat, eager to get safely away? This did not seem likely. Estada knew of my boarding the sloop from the wharf, and would at once connect the fact of my being ashore with the killing of Sanchez. This would satisfy him there was no further danger. Besides, these were not men to flee in panic. Surely not with that ruffian Estada yet alive to lead them, and the knowledge that fifty thousand pounds was yonder in that unguarded house, with no one to protect the treasure but two old men asleep, and the women. The women!—Dorothy! What would become of her? Into whose hands would she fall in that foul division of spoils? Estada's? And I, afloat and helpless in this boat, what could I do?

CHAPTER IX.

A Swim to the Namur.

All was black, hopeless; with head buried in my hands I sat on a thwart, dazed. Before me, pleading, expressive of agonized despair, arose the sweet face of Dorothy Fairfax. No doubt by this time all was over—the dead body of Sanchez discovered, the projected attack on the house carried out, the two old men left behind, either dead or severely wounded, and the girl borne off a helpless prisoner. Ay, but this I knew; there was only one place to which the villains might flee with their booty—the Namur of Rotterdam. Only on those decks and well at sea would they be safe or able to enjoy their spoils. The thought came to me in sudden revelation—why not? Was not here a chance even yet to foil them? With Sanchez dead no man aboard that pirate craft could recognize me. I felt assured of this. I had fought the giant negro in the dark; he could not, during that fierce encounter, have distinguished my features any more clearly than I had his own. There was no one else to fear. If only I might once succeed in getting safely aboard, slightly disguised, perhaps, and mingle unnoticed among the crew, the chances were not bad for me to pass undetected. Such ships carried large crews and were constantly changing in personnel. A strange face appearing among them need not arouse undue suspicion. And I felt convinced I could locate the Namur. But could I hope to attain the ship in advance of the returning party of raiders? God helping me, I would try! My brain throbbed with fresh resolution—the call to action.

There were oars in the boat. I shipped the useless rudder inboard and chose my course from the stars. My boat had drifted considerably farther out into the bay than I had supposed, and it required a good half hour of steady toil at the oars before I sighted ahead of me the darker outlines of the shore. At first I could identify nothing, but finally there suddenly arose, clearly defined, the gaunt limbs of a dead tree, bearing a faint resemblance to a gigantic cross, that had been pointed out on the sloop. This peculiar mark was at the extremity of the first headland lying north of the point itself, and consequently a straight course across the bay would land me within five hundred yards of where the Namur had last been at anchor.

To a degree my immediate plan of action had been definitely mapped out within my own mind while toiling at the oars. I would beach my dory and strike out on foot directly across the narrow neck of land. The Namur was not so far out from shore as to make swimming to her a dangerous feat, and I could approach and board her with far less chance of discovery in that manner than by the use of a boat. The greater danger would come after I had attained the deck, wet to the skin. The sharp bow of the dory ran up on the soft sand of the beach, and I stepped ashore.

Then there came to me the first real consciousness of the reckless nature of this adventure. As I faced then the probabilities there scarcely seemed one chance in a hundred. And yet I must admit there was the one chance; and in no other action could I perceive even that much encouragement. If Dorothy Fairfax was already in the hands of these men, then my only opportunity for serving her lay in my being close at hand. No alternative presented itself; no other effort could be effective. It was already too late to attempt the organization of a rescue party. No, the only choice left was for me either to accompany the girl or else abandon her entirely to her captors. I must either face the possibility of discovery and capture, which as surely meant torture and death, or otherwise play the coward and remain impotently behind. So I drove the temptation to falter away and strode on up the bank into the black shadow of the trees.

I found extremely hard walking as I advanced through tangled underbrush. Fortunately the distance was even shorter than I had anticipated. It was not until after I had advanced cautiously into the water and then stooped low to thus gain clearer vision along the surface that I succeeded in locating the vessel sought. Even then the Namur appeared only as a mere shadow, without so much as a light showing aboard, yet apparently anchored in the same position as when we had swept past the previous afternoon. I waded straight out through the lines of surf, until all excepting the head became completely submerged. If I were to reach the bark at all this was the one opportunity.

I stood there, resisting the undertow tugging at my limbs and barely able to retain my footing, intent upon my purpose. Full strength had come back to my muscles and my head was again clear. With strong, silent strokes I swam forward, directly breasting the force of the incoming sea, yet making fair progress. Some unconsidered current must have swept me to the right, for, when the outlines of the bark again became dimly visible through the night I found myself well to starboard of the vessel. Stroking well under water and with only my eyes exposed above the surface, I changed my course to the left and slowly and cautiously drew in toward the starboard bow. A few moments later, unperceived from above, and protected from observation by the bulge of the overhang and density of the shadow, my hands clung to the anchor hawser, my mind busy in devising some means for attaining the deck.

CHAPTER X.

On the Deck of the Namur.

It was here that fortune favored me, strengthening my decision and yielding a fresh courage to persevere. Forking out directly over where I clung desperately to the wet hawser, my eyes were able to trace the bowsprit, the rather loosely furled up jib flapping ragged edges in the gusts of wind. Suddenly, as I stared upward, I became aware that two men were working their way out along the footropes, and, as they reached a point almost directly over my head, became busily engaged in tightening the gaskets to better secure the loosening sail. The foot of one slipped, and he hung dangling, giving vent to a stiff English oath before he succeeded in hauling himself back to safety. The other indulged in a chuckling laugh, yet he was careful not to speak loudly.

"Had one drink too many, Tom?" he asked. "That will pay yer fer finishin' the bottle an' never givin' me another sup."

"You, h—l! Yer hed the fu'st ov it. Thar's no sorter luck yer don't git yer fair share of, Bill Haines—trust yer fer thet. What I ain't got straight yet is whar thet stuff cum from so easy."

"That wus part o' the luck, Tom. Did yer git eyes on thet new feller Manuel Estevan brought back with him in the boat?"

"The one you and Jose carried aboard?"

"He's the lad. Thar wa'n't nuthin' the matter with the cove, 'cept he wus dead drunk. We wus waitin' on the beach fer Estevan, an' three fellers he hed taken along with him inter town ter cum back—the nigger, Jose an' me—when this yere chap hove 'longside. He never hailed us, ner nuthin'; just clim over into the boat, an' lay down. I shook him, an' kicked him, but it wa'n't no use; so we just left him fer thar fer Manuel ter say whut wus ter be dode with him. Only Jose he went through his pockets an' found three bottles o' rum. We took a few drinks an' hid whut wus left in the boat locker."

"So thet's how yer got it! Who wus the party?"

"Thet's more'n I'll ever tell yer. I never got no sight o' him, 'cept in the dark. 'Bout all I know is he wus white, an' likely a sailor. Enyhow, when Manuel got back he told us to haul the lad forrard out o' the way, an' fetch him along. So we pulled out with the feller cuddled up in the bow."

"I never seed nuthin' more of him after he was hauled aboard. Whut become o' the lad?"

Once on board the Namur, Carlyle knows he may have a chance to aid Dorothy. It is a desperate chance, but he is willing to take it. But how to get aboard without being seen? Can he avoid detection which will mean certain death?

SPRING, HARVEST SEASON OF THE SHEEP RAISER, DEMANDS ATTENTION TO ANIMALS

Member of a Boys' Sheep Club With His Thriving Flock.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Many new flocks of sheep were established in the farming states last year, and this spring their owners will for the first time experience the lambing and shearing seasons. Spring, which is the lambing and shearing season, is the harvest period of the sheep raiser, say specialists of the United States department of agriculture, and the size and quality of these crops determine the profits. At this time extra attention should be given to the ewes and lambs. In no other way can time be used to better advantage on the farm.

If the ewes have not been properly fed and cared for during the fall and winter, the crops of lambs and wool can be neither large nor of high quality. It is the weak, thin ewes that require most attention in the lambing season, though previous mistakes cannot be remedied at that time. On the other hand, failure to be constantly nearby while the lambs are arriving may mean the raising of only an 80 or 90 per cent crop of lambs where a 125 per cent increase—considering that many ewes will have twins—can readily be realized from good shepherding of flocks of mutton quality.

Advantages of Early Lambing.

In many sections it is most profitable to have lambs arrive in March or even earlier. One important advantage of this plan is that other work is then less urgent and full attention can be given to the ewes and the new arrivals. Another advantage gained by early lambing is that the lambs can be made sufficiently heavy and fat to market in June or July. Early marketing usually means higher prices, and it is especially desirable because the lambs are disposed of before the time of greater danger of injury by internal parasites. The ewe lambs are stronger than those which arrived later in the season and are, therefore, kept for the breeding flock. They are less susceptible to injury caused by parasites, which is most serious in warm, damp periods of July or August.

Care of Weak Lambs.

The lamb that is born strong and vigorous, with a good dam, will need little care. Prompt attention given to the weak lamb immediately upon its arrival will frequently result in saving its life. In cold weather lambs should be wrapped in hot flannel cloths to prevent chilling, which may result in their death, and the cloths should be renewed as often as is necessary to keep the young animals warm. Milk should be given freely and the lamb returned to the ewe as soon as it is strong enough. Sometimes it may be necessary to feed the lamb with an infant's nursing bottle, giving a few teaspoonfuls of milk every hour for a few hours until it is strong enough to nurse without assistance.

If lambs are to be sold at three to five months of age they may run with their dams until that time. The lambs kept for breeding purposes should be weaned at the same time and put on fresh pastures where there is no danger of stomach worms. Where the weaning is done at this time the ewes can be put in better condition for the fall breeding. When lambs are to be kept on the farm, the best method of weaning is to leave them on the old pasture for three or four days, removing the ewes to a scanty pasture to check their milk flow. As soon as the lambs cease fretting for their dams they may be removed to fresh pastures. Ewes with large udders should be partially milked once every three days until they go dry.

Details on the care of the flock during the lambing season are given in Farmers' Bulletin 840, "Farm Sheep Raising for Beginners," copies of which can be had, so long as the supply lasts, by applying to the United States department of agriculture, Washington.

EXCELLENT PLAN TO HARVEST WOOL CROP

Avoid Chilling Ewes by Shearing on a Warm Day.

Hand-Power Machines Are Most Economical for Flocks of Less Than Fifty Head—Paper Twine Is Most Satisfactory.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Sheep shearing is usually done in late spring after the lambing season. The work should be performed on a warm day, so that the ewes may not become chilled. For flocks of less than fifty head, hand-power machines are the most economical. These machines are more rapid, produce smoother work, injure the sheep less, are more easily handled, and result in a larger crop than where hand shears are used.

After the fleece has been removed all tags and dirt should be cleaned out of it and it should be rolled up, not too tightly, the skin side out, and tied with paper twine. The value of the wool crop is often impaired by the use of binder twine in tying up fleeces. Anything is superior to binder twine, and paper twine is most satisfactory. Boxes for tying fleeces are not necessary; in fact wool shows better if not tied too tightly.

Farmers in New York and other states have profited largely by co-operative marketing of their wool. Under the direction of the county agent the clips are assembled, graded, and sold in large quantities at the prices prevailing at the principal markets. In the past these prices were materially higher than the "general" local prices obtained.

HOG "AUCTION" SALES BEST

Praises of New Method Sung These Days by California Marketing Association.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The praises of the hog auction are sung these days by the California Farm Bureau Marketing association, which comprises the marketing department of the farm bureaus in King, Tulare and Kern counties. The prices are said to be much better than when hogs are sold by the old method. The auction sales have also taught the farmers the importance of raising better hogs, as they have seen that packers give grain-fattened hogs the preference over those fattened on skimmed milk and alfalfa pasture alone.

ONE BREED IN COMMUNITY

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is highly advantageous for all or most of the farms in a neighborhood to keep the same breed of sheep. After a decision has been made as to a suitable breed, the aim should be to obtain ewes that are individually good and that have as many crosses as possible of the breed selected. With such a foundation and the continuous use of good pure-bred rams of the same breed, the flock will make steady improvement.

The tougher and drier the roughage the more and the more costly the concentrates needed.

If you wish your pigs to grow as rapidly as possible, use a liberal feed of corn and skim milk.

Size in live stock is secondary to quick growth and ease with which finishing may be put on.

Feed silage to calves as soon as they will eat it, picking out for them the leafy portions at first.

It can be stated in a general way that too much protein in a ration is not good for the health of any animal.

* * *

Pure-bred stock long ago ceased to be merely a fad. The quality of farm animals is an all-important factor in success.

Corn and all the tankage the hogs would eat makes a good self-fed ration for hogs that are being grown for market purposes.

Silage and alfalfa or clover hay make a balanced ration and wonderful results have been obtained from these two feeds alone.

An Auto Accident

B. W. Bailey, manager of Indiane Fuel & Light Co, an Auburn young man, driving a Ford runabout, turned turtle on the Newville-Auburn (the Sherwood route) road, Tuesday afternoon and was quite severely injured. The mishap occurred near the Peter Kosht home, three miles north of St. Joe, and the young man went there, and Dr. Shook was called to dress a bad cut in the leg. Mr. Bailey was going west and had been tearing along the road at a furious rate. He was either drunk or is a fool of the first degree. The people residing on the State road are getting tired of the "rif-raf" from Garrett and Auburn going to Sherwood and coming back poluted, and in such a condition that they are not capable of running their machine.

The Auburn Star in speaking of the accident says:—"Mr. Bailey says he was not driving fast at the time of the accident. He had been on a trip to St. Joe, Spencerville and several other towns in the vicinity and was returning to Auburn when the car turned over. By tying a piece of cloth about the leg tightly he managed to partially stop the flow of blood." The young man evidently was mistaken as to what towns he had really made as no one driving from St. Joe to Auburn would be likely to drive northeast of St. Joe to find Auburn.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Paulding, Paulding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

REMARKABLE TEST OF LOVE

Surely Any Woman Would Be Satisfied With Proof That Was Offered Mrs. Newlywed.

For a while, as they walked along, neither spoke. The silence became quite strained. At last she said in a hard, tense voice:

"You don't care whether I'm happy or not, do you? We've been married nearly a week and now you don't care whether I'm happy or not."

"My angel, I do," he said miserably. "But I simply cannot permit you to do that. It is asking too much."

Two tears rolled down her cheeks—one for each cheek.

"You don't! You don't!" she cried, biting her lip tearfully. "You don't care whether I'm happy or not!"

It was more than his tender, loving heart could stand. He gulped guiltily. "Oh, very well, go ahead if you like," he said gruffly.

And while she took out her powder puff and powdered her nose and vicinity right on the crowded pavement, he turned his back and looked into the show windows of a piano shop so no one would know he was with her.

Muddy Day.

"Henrietta" exclaimed Mr. Meekton, all of a sudden, "I'm going to put my foot down—"

"I was just going to speak of that," she interrupted. "You are going to put both feet down—on that mat on the front step and wipe them carefully the next time you come into this house."

One Deficiency.

"That woman is a perfect talking machine." "No; a perfect machine has an exhaust."

Mean.

"He's a man after my own heart."

"I wouldn't call that much of a recommendation."

KEEP THEIR MONEY AT HOME

Many People in England Evidently Will Not Entrust Savings to the Care of Banks.

A vast amount of money still lies uninvested in the country, declares the London Mail. In a Yorkshire village there is a fisherman who is known to have five thousand dollars in notes in his thirty-dollar-a-year cottage. He wears clothes which cost about ten dollars before the war, and owns a fishing boat worth one thousand or fifteen hundred dollars. In the same village a short time ago a fisherman bought his cottage, and when the owner called for a deposit he counted out fifteen hundred dollars in gold, the full purchase price. In a neighboring town there is at least one fisherman who has five thousand dollars or more in notes in his little house, but he cannot be induced to invest any of it. When he has been urged to do so he has said that he "preferred to have it near him as it is safer!" A woman in a Yorkshire country town one morning walked into a lawyer's office and produced a handbag containing two thousand half-sovereigns which she had collected in thirty years. After asking advice on investing the money she stated that at night she took the handbag up to her bedroom. When she traveled she took the handbag with her, and on one occasion left it on the rack in the train. She remembered her treasure before she left the station and recovered it.

Jimmie Knew.

Jimmie had made some boastful remarks as to his progress in grammar, by the way of offsetting his shortcomings in the science of numbers.

"Well, what is a pronoun, Jimmie?" asked pa.

"A pronoun is a word that stands for another word," replied James.

"Give me some examples of a word that stands for another word," suggested pa.

"Well, there's dern an' darn an' blame an' doggone," said James.

FREE HERD OF TUBERCULOSIS

Satisfactory Progress in Plan of Eradication Made During First Year of Work.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The tuberculosis-free accredited herd plan, inaugurated in December, 1917, and worked out in co-operation with the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, was slightly changed at the twenty-second annual meeting of the United States Live Stock Sanitary association held at Chicago in December. It was agreed to strike out the word "purebred" so as to admit to certification grade herds in addition to registered cattle.

The annual conference between representatives of the United States Live Stock Sanitary association and the Purebred Cattle Breeders' association resulted in the further indorsement of the tuberculosis eradication campaign, and a recommendation that the work be extended as rapidly as possible.

The accredited-herd plan is to test cattle with tuberculin at the request of the owner, eliminate any reacting animals either by slaughter or by following prescribed sanitary measures, repeat the test at prescribed intervals, and list as tuberculosis-free accredited herds all herds entitled to that distinction.

Very satisfactory progress has been made during the first year of the work, and prospects for the future are bright. During the year 296 herds, comprising 9,284 cattle, have been fully "accredited" as free from tuberculosis, and 1,462 herds, having 35,052 cattle, passed one successful test in preparation for certification. In addition 4,622 herds, both purebred and grade, totaling 98,002 animals, have been under supervision for the eradication of tuberculosis. Each month additional herds are added to the list.

HEIFERS DROP FIRST CALF

According to Experiment Carried on at Maryland College Thirty Months Is Best Age.

About thirty months was found to be the best age for Ayrshire heifers to drop their first calf, according to an experiment carried on at the Maryland Agricultural college. If the calves were dropped six months earlier, the milk flow was lessened considerably, but if dropped six months later the decrease was slight. This will vary for the breeds according to size; the smaller the breed type, the shorter the time. Eckles of Minnesota found that this variation would be three to five months which would bring the minimum age for Jerseys and Guernseys about twenty-five months and for Holsteins, thirty months. This is for well-developed animals.

PASTEURIZED CREAM IS AID

It Yields More Uniform Article of Butter and Helps to Improve Keeping Qualities.

The relation of pasteurized cream to butter is now recognized as follows: It yields a more uniform product, aids in producing a higher scoring butter, improves its keeping qualities; avoids undesirable fermentations and gives protection from disease germs; overcomes questionable odors, increases value of skim milk and creates a steadier market. The slight increase in cost of production, per pound, when butter is made from pasteurized cream, is more than overcome by the benefits derived from this process.

CLEANLINESS IS IMPORTANT

Cows Should Be Milked in Small-Top or Covered Pail and All Utensils Sterilized.

It is important to keep cows clean and milk them in clean surroundings. Milk them in a small-top or covered pail. All utensils which come into contact with the milk should be thoroughly sterilized with steam for at least two minutes.

ROAD BUILDING

ROAD DRAGGING IS FAVORED

Four Good Points on Simple and Least Expensive Contrivance for Maintenance.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

First, the road drag is the simplest and least expensive contrivance yet devised for maintaining roads constructed of earth or earthy material. Second, the successful operation of a road drag depends to a very great extent on the skill and intelligence of the operator. Third, the time to use the drag is when the material composing the road surface is sufficiently moist to compact readily under traffic after it has been moved by the drag and does not contain sufficient moisture for the traffic following the drag to produce mud. Fourth, dragging cannot usually be so arranged as to keep teams employed all the time, and it is therefore desirable to have it done by interested persons who can find employment for themselves and teams when they are not engaged in dragging.

TELLS GOOD ROADS' NEEDS

Farm and Fireside Explains Best Plan for Oval Surface—Should Be Flat as Possible.

"Everybody agrees that the surface of a road must be oval in its contour," says Farm and Fireside, "but not all understand that this oval ought to be as flat as the character of the road material and the lay of the land will permit. With brick or concrete construction the oval may be very flat, because the traffic makes no ruts to carry the water lengthwise of the road, nor does the pavement soften and develop depressions when kept in contact with water.

"But broken stone (water-bound macadam), being susceptible to penetration by water, and subject to great damage if frozen while soaked, must be given a higher oval; and for gravel roads a still steeper pitch is demanded.

"As for earth roads, the steepness must be governed by the combined influence of a number of factors. Perhaps the leading factor is the quality of the earth in each particular case. And next might be placed the presence or absence of 'seeps' or 'spouts'; while another of these vital factors would be the longitudinal pitch of the highway."

PATCHING OFTEN NEGLECTED

Two Ruts Caused to Form Where There Was but One Before—Work When Road Is Wet.

Patching is usually neglected or done in such a way as to cause two ruts to form where there was but one before. That is the invariable result of filling a rut too full. This work should always be done when the road is wet, preferably when the water is still standing in every little hollow on the road surface, so that the workmen can just see where to place the new gravel and about how much is needed. Unless the rut is a very large one, it is always best to shovel the gravel from the wagon into it, rather than to raise a sideboard and attempt to dump a part of the load.

BETTER WAGON ROADS URGED

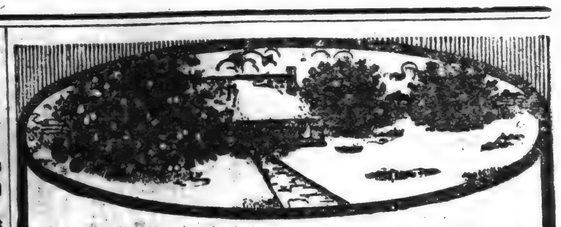
Farmers Cannot Take Hold of Problem Any Too Quickly—Cost of Hauling Is Too Big.

Better wagon roads are a problem which farmers cannot take hold of any too quickly. It now costs the average farmer 23 cents per ton mile to haul freight over wagon roads, while the railroads receive on an average of only 7.29 cents per ton mile for performing the same service.

EFFECT OF CLOVER ON SOIL

Same Necessity for Applying Lime as for Wheat—Dress Land When Sowing Seed.

Clover has a mechanical and nutritive effect upon the soil. The necessity of applying lime for the wheat holds also for the clover. Usually the land is dressed with the lime at the time the clover is sown. Twenty bushels of air-slaked lime or one ton of ground limestone is enough for one acre.



This Is Orange Blossom Time in Florida

And it's a good time to leave the Frozen North for a short Winter vacation.

Come on down to Lake Alfred and see one of the most beautiful sights imaginable—thousands of acres of Orange and Grapefruit Trees in full bloom, scenting the air for miles around.

We have a few planted small groves, but fine, not yet taken, but you cannot buy an acre until you have first seen the property. You had better hurry, for these are choice and will be sold soon.

After carefully investigating what others have done in our vicinity, under exactly similar conditions, and you have satisfied yourself that our claim that a Six or Seven-Year-Old Grove, on a conservative estimate, will produce from $200 to $250 per acre Net, you can buy with perfect safety.

If you buy, your trip costs you nothing, as we refund traveling expense to purchasers.

Our groves at Lake Alfred are right on the Main Line of the Atlantic Coast Railroad, in the heart of the Highland-Lake Section, the highest, safest citrus section of Florida, with Ninety Lakes within a Five-Mile radius. Good asphalt and brick roads, schools, etc.

Prices fair, values big, reasonable terms.

Send for our illustrated booklet, read it carefully, and then visit Lake Alfred personally.

In The Spring-Time.

Any fool knows enough to carry an umbrella when it rains, but the wise man is he who carries one when it is only cloudy. Any man will send for a doctor when he gets bedfast, but the wiser one is he who adopts proper measures before his ills become serious. During a hard winter or the following spring one feels rundown, tired out, weak and nervous. Probably you have suffered from colds or influenza which has left you thin, weak and pale. This is the time to put your system in order. It is time for house-cleaning.

A good, old-fashioned alterative and temperance tonic is one made of wild roots and barks without the use of alcohol, and called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, in tablet or liquid form. This is nature's tonic, which restores the tone of the stomach, activity of the liver and steadiness to the nerves, strengthening the whole system.

Fashionopolis, Ind.—"I am most pleased to say for 'Golden Medical Discovery' that I like it as a spring medicine. I was employed in a cloak house and used it for a tuning-up medicine. As a general tonic I know of nothing better. You may use this recommendation to benefit others."—Mrs. C. F. Beaver, 733 Elm St.
